Skip!

Only the author reads the preface; so I will take occasion to set down here some memoranda for future reference.

According to the due order of nature, the Fourth Report should have appeared in 1908. In 1907, however, I issued a "Bulletin" originally intended as an address and occupation list. But it finally assumed the form of a forty-page pamphlet—a sort of condensed report; of the same style, in fact, as the "Fourth Report" of '94. The class news was thus kept pretty well up to date until 1910, when the regular Fourth Report was at last issued. The delay was due partly to illness, partly to an amazingly inefficient printer, and partly to a desperate attempt to produce a report which should be technically "complete"—containing a personal reply from every man on the active list of the class. Seductive but unattainable ideal! After weary months spent in exhausting every means I could devise to secure answers, I was forced to put some men on the "retired list" as incorrigibles, and go to press without them after all.

In the present volume I have not tried any such drag-net methods. During the past six months I have sent out a couple of sets of notifications and a few "rush" postals. Classmates who felt sufficiently interested to answer any of these appear in the following pages. None others need apply. In a regrettably large number of cases, men have been content to return merely their formal data-cards with no personal replies; but even if they sent nothing but an address-card they have been counted among the "live ones." For the rest, we can only say, "Better luck next time!" Although their absence from this report is our misfortune, it is their fault; for three separate and distinct printed warnings have apprised them that the methods of the Fourth Report would not be followed in the Fifth.

A few men have not had the chance to reply because their blanks have come back "unclaimed" from their last-known addresses, and attempts to re-locate them have failed. Among these are Jones, North, McIntire, Tremain, and A. C. Fay.

While including obituaries of men on the "active list" who have died since the last report, I have not repeated the names of those whose notices appear in earlier reports.

I have taken little cognizance of such ponderous matters as higher or honorary degrees, clubs, learned societies, books published, public positions held, and the like, reserving them for the more detailed and official pages of the Sixth Report. The present volume is intended chiefly as an informal and personal recital of such things as men care to talk about, from the men who care to talk about such things.

I cannot refrain from expressing here my obligations to the Crimson Printing Company, for the speed, intelligence and courtesy with which this volume has been prepared.

Class of 1893

ERNEST HAMLIN ABBOTT

Born at Cornwall on Hudson, New York, 18 April 1870, of Lyman Abbott (clergyman and editor) and Abby Frances Hamlin.

Fitted at the Hill School, Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married May Louise Kleberg at New Rochelle, New York, 28 September 1899. Children:

Alexander Lyman, born 26 July 1900.

Lawrence, 9 July 1902.

Theodore Vaughan, 24 September 1908.

Ernest Hamlin, Jr., 4 March 1911.

Now on "The Outlook" at New York City.

"In one respect I have perhaps some distinction in the amount of time I spend in travel between my home and my office. The round trip, which I take five times almost every week, occupies at least five hours. I have discovered the railway coach to be a good workroom."

FREEMAN ALLEN

Born at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, 27 September 1870, of Henry Freeman Allen (clergyman) and Georgiana May Stowe.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Ethel Gibson, at Boston, 20 July 1911.

Now practising medicine at Boston.

"Since my writing in the Fourth Report I have been practising my profession in Boston. Although I thought at one time of giving up the administration of anesthetics for Dermatology,—since my return from Europe I have resumed the administration of anesthetics and find that by confining myself to this work alone I am able to make a living, and am intensely interested in my work. Since my marriage, on July 20, 1911, to a girl of whom I have always been very fond, I find that my interest in my work and in life in general is at least ten times greater than ever before, and that the amount of lucrative work that I get to do is correspondingly increased. I am still anesthetist to the Massachusetts General Hospital and Children's Hospital, and last year was appointed Lecturer on Anesthesia in the Harvard Medical School. On my honeymoon in the summer of 1911 I had a short mountaineering season (my favorite sport) in the Engadine and the Dolomites. I was year before last made a member of the Alpine Club (London) which I consider a great honor. Although it looks now as if my work would never again permit me to take another mountaineering holiday, I am very contented to remain at work and am happier than I have ever been before."

WILLIAM HENRY ALLISON

Born at Somerville, Massachusetts, 17 August 1870, of George Augustus Allison (agent) and Julia Lucinda Powers.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Elizabeth Lincoln Smith at Newforn Center, 6 September 1899 (died 14 July 1900).

Married (2) Mary Emily Mills at Chicago, 31 July 1905. Child: Elizabeth Mills, born 28 January 1907.

Now Professor of Church History and Dean of Colgate Theological Seminary, Hamilton, N. Y.

"After two years (1908-1910) as head of the department of History at Bryn Mawr College, (the chair once held by our President, and from which I had the honor to instruct the daughter of our last ex-President), I came to Hamilton, N. Y., as Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Dean of the Theological Seminary of Colgate University. The duties of my new position have made it necessary for me to attend numerous conferences and conventions of men engaged in religious work; it has been a great privilege to be thrown into close fellowship with so many men of virile intelligence and earnest purpose. Pedagogical and administrative work have reduced my literary and historical efforts. The Carnegie Institution of Washington brought out my 'Inventory of Unpublished Manuscripts Relating to American Religious History,' 1911, and The American Journal of Theology in 1910 published my article, 'Was Newman a Modernist?' The 1912 edition of 'Who's Who in America' added enough new names so that mine is included."

ALBERT STOKES APSEY

Born at Cambridge, 27 November 1870, of William Stokes Apsey (clergyman) and Jennie Heermans.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Laura Louise Soule at Cambridge, 2 May 1896. Children: Lawrence Soule, born 14 November 1902. Suzanne, 8 January 1907.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ Nothing of particular moment to report.”

PERCY LEE ATHERTON

Born at Boston, 25 September 1871, of William Atherton (merchant) and Mary Edwards Dwight.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now composing music at Boston.

a fair show.) Du reste, I stand clannishly by the dwindling Order of the Benedicts—recent untoward results at One Nutter's consoling me, betimes—and in consequence, I am (I suppose) 'as unhappy as happy can be.' "

HENRY BERTHIER BACON

Born at Warren, Massachusetts, 23 April 1865, of Theodore Fayette Bacon (mechanic) and Augusta Louise Green.

Fitted at New Hampton Literary Institution.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Emma Marion Eaton at Wentworth, New Hampshire, 14 July 1892. Children:

Theodore Eaton, born 28 November 1894.

Marion Augusta, 3 September 1900.

Now teaching at the New Hampton Literary Institution, New Hampshire.

"Guess that's the whole story."

WILLIS ADAMS BAILEY

Born at Zanesville, Ohio, 15 August 1870, of Willis Bailey (druggist) and Caroline Augusta McConnel.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now President of the Bailey Drug Company at Zanesville, Ohio.

"I am still on the same jobs: Wholesale Drugs and Single Blessedness. Nothing new."

MORRIS BAKER

Born at Latrobe, Pennsylvania, 2 April 1871, of Reuben Baker and Mary Jane Freed.

Fitted at Andover.

Class Status: Special Scientific, 1889-93; A.B. 1894; S.B. 1904 as of 1893.

Died at Philadelphia, 17 January 1912.

Morris Baker died at the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, from cystic kidneys, 17 January 1912.

He was born at Latrobe, Pa., 2 April 1871, of Reuben Baker and Mary Jane Fredd, the family being of old Pennsylvania stock. He fitted at Chambersburg Academy and Phillips Andover. He entered Harvard in 1889 as a special scientific student, and remained four years in the engineering department. In 1894 he took an A.B., and ten years later an S.B.

“as of the Class of 1893.” Meantime he had engaged actively in engineering, which from his earliest years had been his hobby. He possessed unusual ability, but was of a somewhat original disposition, and seemed to enjoy testing his capacities along all sorts of lines, ranging successively from street-paving contracts to construction work in the Baldwin Locomotive Shops, and giving financial returns of equal variety. His headquarters were in Philadelphia, but he moved about the country considerably, and was at one time located at Wheeling, W. Va. He was an assiduous worker, devoting himself almost entirely to his profession, and describing himself as “simply on the job.” Several years before his death however his health became exceedingly delicate, and he relinquished all business to care for himself. He finally spent many months in the hospital, where he was a universal favorite, and to which he bequeathed most of his estate in gratitude for the extraordinary kindness he received there. After a severe operation he rallied for several months, showing much happiness and affection, but eventually succumbed. He never married.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BAKER

Born at Springfield, Massachusetts, 13 December 1868, of Henry Kingsley Baker (railroads) and Abbie Martha Bacon.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Daisy Gertrude Cocroft at Staten Island, New York, 25 June 1902. Children:

William Francis, Jr., born 4 July 1904.

Gertrude Florence, 5 October 1906.

Now in telephone work at New York City.

And the letter that we longed for never came.

JOHN DENISON BALDWIN

Born at Worcester, Massachusetts, 26 May 1871, of John Stanton Baldwin (journalist) and Emily Brown.

Fitted at Worcester High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Fiske Eaton at Worcester, 9 June 1896. Children:

Charlotte, born 20 March 1899.

John Denison, Jr., 28 November 1902.

Now growing apples at Aucoot Cove, Mattapoisett.

“For five years after graduation, I was an apprentice in a newspaper business which was just giving promise of continued success when the props gave way in the reconstruction period after the panic of 1893, and after a brief experience in the book department of a department store, I built up an insurance business from which the insurance investigation of the state of New York took for some years much of the public good will and many of my illusions. A rolling stone gathers no moss and so I have gone down where the stones are prolific and 'fixed' and hope that the verdure will in some measure 'attach' so that if it is my destiny to be used as a football again there may be some cushioning between me and the boat. I hold a farm strewn with rocks and apple trees at Aucoot Cove, Mattapoisett, where there's always a welcome for any '93 man who rings up between April and December. The remaining months I hibernate in Worcester, subsisting on apples, cider, and such patches of greenery as can be wrenched from my moss covering, and with time to read of the public and private offices, degrees, honors, and emoluments, which have been deservedly won by '93 men and no one is gladder than I to hear of each man who has 'found himself' and come into his own."

SIDNEY MILLER BALLOU

Born at Providence, Rhode Island, 24 October 1870, of Oren Aldrich Ballou (cotton manufacturer) and Charlotte Hitchcock Miller.

Fitted at Boston English High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Thomie Morgan Duke at Louisville, Kentucky, 21 December 1895 (died 7 March 1905). Children:

Oren Aldrich, born 25 April 1900 (died 27 April 1900).

Barbara, 7 March 1905.

Married (2) Lucia Burnett at Los Angeles, California, 27 July, 1907. Now representative at Washington of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association.

"I went from Law School to Honolulu, Hawaii, to take a place which J. A. Wilder, '93, got for me in the office of Carter and Kinney. At the end of two years I became a partner and practised law until 1907, with the exception of a year in Europe. In 1897 I made a compilation of the Civil and Penal Laws of Hawaii, which, upon annexation, was officially adopted by Congress in the Organic Act of the Territory. In 1899 I received the degree of A.M. from Harvard. In 1907 the President appointed me Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Hawaii. The next year I was elected president of the University Club of Hawaii. After a few years' service on the bench I resigned, and shortly afterwards came to Washington as the representative of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association."

EDGAR JAMES BANKS

Born at Sunderland, 23 May 1866, of John Randolph Banks and Julia Maria Dunklee.

Fitted at Greenfield (Massachusetts) High.

Class Status: Special, 1890-91. With '94, 1891-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Emma Lucy Lyford at South Woodbury, Vermont, 16 July 1893.

Now writing and lecturing; home at Greenfield, Massachusetts.

Dr. Banks is in Arabia now. Expects to be back early in the spring. If he wishes any change in his report upon his return he will write you.

J. M. F.

CHARLES RUSSELL BARDEEN

Born at Kalamazoo, Michigan, 8 February 1871, of Charles William Bardeen (publisher) and Ellen Palmer Dickerman.

Fitted at Syracuse (New York) High.

Married Althea Harmer at Chicago, 5 August 1905. Children:

William, born 19 April 1906.

John, 23 May 1908.

Heien, 13 October 1910.

Thomas, 10 April 1912.

Now Dean of the College of Medicine at the University of Wisconsin.

"The chief events since the last Report are a girl and another boy, so that I now have three boys to make ready for Harvard, and a girl if Harvard has co-education by 1928—the 'annex' has never seemed like the real thing to me. While at Harvard I was looking forward to a medical course and the practice of medicine. I wanted to study medicine there but was persuaded that too much of one's education in the same institution tends to narrowness and so I went to the Johns Hopkins. I had expected to specialize in diseases of the nervous system and on finishing the medical course I went into the anatomical laboratory to learn a little more about the anatomy of the nervous system. I became more and more interested in anatomical science, and especially in embryology. From an associate professorship of anatomy at the Johns Hopkins I came out here in 1904 to the chair of anatomy at Wis-cousin and in 1907 when the medical school was established, I was made Dean. Teaching, administrative duties, and scientific research, make busy years which pass without striking events."

CHARLES LOWELL BARLOW

Born at New York City, 10 October 1871, of Francis Channing Barlow (lawyer) and Ellen Shaw.

Fitted at A. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

"After graduation I went to the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1896. The following winter I passed in Washington as secretary to Justice Gray of the United States Supreme Court; then practised law in New York for six years, and in the autumn of 1903 moved to Boston. This change was made because I preferred Boston to New York as a place to live, and I have never regretted it. Since then I have practised law in Boston, except the years 1909-1911, which I spent in the Adirondacks, Berkshires and Switzerland."

EDWARD MITCHELL BARNEY

Born at Lynn, Massachusetts, 28 February 1871, of William Mitchell Barney (treasurer) and Mary Louise Neal.

Fitted at Lynn High.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Married Caroline Chalker Clark, at Wethersfield, Connecticut, 19 July 1904.

Now in Universalist ministry at Medford, Mass.

"'Eloquent' preaching every Sunday! Isn't that record enough for the past five years?"

EDWIN BARTLETT BARTLETT

Born at Pittsfield, Massachusetts, 26 November 1872, of William Francis Bartlett (manufacturer) and Mary Agnes Pomeroy.

Fitted at Groton.

Class Status: Left at end of Sophomore year.

Married Susan Amory at Boston, 21 November 1904. Child:

Betty Amory, born 5 December 1906.

Now manager of brewing company at Albany.

"Have continued to live in Albany since the last Report. Have nothing of interest to narrate."

MURRAY BARTLETT

Born at Poughkeepsie, New York, 29 March 1871, of Stanley Bartlett (manufacturer) and Lida Carolina Simpson.

Fitted at Riverview Academy, Poughkeepsie.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Blanchard Howard at Buffalo, New York, 15 April 1903.
Child:

Blanchard, born 6 August 1907.

Now President University of the Philippines at Manila.

“Shortly after our fifteenth reunion I left my parish in Rochester, N. Y., where I had been rector of St. Paul’s Episcopal Church for eleven years, having accepted a call to the deanship of the American (Episcopal) Cathedral in Manila. We arrived in the Philippines in October, 1908. In 1910 I assisted in organizing the Harvard Club of the Philippine Islands. Governor General Forbes, ’92, being elected president. Since its organization I have served as vice-president. We average about 45 members, and are associated with the Associated Harvard Clubs. In July, 1909, Governor Forbes appointed me a regent of the University of the Philippines then in process of organization, its object being to give professional and technical higher education to the graduates of the government high schools. I gave to this work all the time I could spare from my duties at the Cathedral. In January, 1911, I was elected ‘acting chairman of the Board of Regents.’ In February I was elected first president of the university, and on the advice of Bishop Brent, I accepted the position and resigned my post at the Cathedral. Since June 1, 1911, I have given all my time to the work of organizing and developing the university, my formal inauguration taking place on December 20, 1911. My address on that occasion was published under the title of ‘A University for the Filipino.’ In line with the policy outlined therein we are endeavoring to maintain a university of the highest standards applicable to actual conditions, with the purpose of preparing Filipinos for efficient service in responsible positions in the Insular government and for leadership in public and private life. We are also building up a faculty of Filipino scholars with the aid of graduate travelling fellowships provided by the government for that purpose. We hope that the university will be a dominant force in bringing about complete and efficient self-government and in shaping safe and high ideals of national life. The university is supported by appropriations of the Philippine legislature, the present budget being $325,000. In the last four years about $600,000 has been appropriated for buildings. We have over seven hundred students, nearly all Filipinos who are candidates for degrees in the following departments: College of Liberal Arts, College of Medicine, College of Veterinary Science, College of Engineering, College of Law, all situated in Manila, and the College of Agriculture and Forest School at Les Baños, Laguna Province. We also have in Manila a school of applied fine arts with a large membership. We have a faculty of about 150, a large number being Filipinos. In October, 1912, I left for six months leave in Europe and America. Most of this time I spent in visiting and studying university methods. In Paris I had the pleasure of attending the dinner of the Harvard Club of Paris on the night of the Yale game. In Boston I saw Batchelder, in New York Collamore and Villard, and in Chicago Ingalls. It is with great regret that I was unable to remain for our twentieth anniversary, but it was necessary for me to return to Manila for our Commencement on April 4. I left San Francisco on March 1, 1913."

LEWIS BASS

Born at Quincy, Massachusetts, 27 May, 1871, of Lewis Bass (broker) and Adelaide Morrison.

Fitted at Adams Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

"I have been at my office for the past seventeen years in the Equitable Building, Boston. My attention has been given for many years to municipal politics until I found it made serious inroads upon my time. I have devoted my energies largely to probate matters and trust estates. I invested from time to time as the opportunity offered in desirable real estate, with the result that I found myself a few years ago the owner of about 200 acres of land in Hingham with a half-mile of shore frontage which I had intended to develop as a country home but which the United States of America saw fit to take from me for a naval magazine. I resisted the encroachment, not with powder and shot, but to some advantage in dollars and cents. My experience has led me to believe that a proper way of doing things, pursued with confidence, will bring in the end a fair measure of success. I suffered a keen sorrow in the death of my father in January, 1912, which has left its scar, although I am not unmindful that such is the common lot of humanity."

SAMUEL FRANCIS BATCHELDER

Born at Cambridge, 10 March 1870, of Samuel Batchelder (conveyancer) and Marianne Giles Washburn.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

"For two years after graduation I taught school, first at St. Paul's, Garden City, and then at St. Paul's, Concord, N. H. Having thus amassed a handsome competence I squandered it in the sensual delights of the Harvard Law School. At the end of three mis-spent years, however, I realized I must reform, and worked the best part of a year travelling in Europe, among other trips making with the greatest benefit the annual "Mediterranean Cruise" of the good old Augusta Victoria. Returning to my evil courses I entered the law office of Myers and Warner in Boston, where in slothful ease I soon forgot the little legal lore that had survived to me from the bar exams. In 1900 I hung out that badge of servitude commonly called a shingle, in the Tremont Building, Boston, whence I rarely stray farther than the New York Class Dinners, for fear a real live client should possibly come in. My most interesting recent experience has been the management of the "Boy Scout" schooner Pioneer last summer—taking out twenty boys at a time for cruises of two weeks along the New England coast. It would be hard to say whether the boys or I enjoyed the season the most. Thanks to plenty of tobacco and rum, and a careful avoidance of exercise, I enjoy that variety of good health best described as robust valetudinarianism. Am still looking for Mrs. B., and feel considerably cheered by the astounding number of class weddings that have taken place this present year of grace."

WILLIAM FIELDS BEAL

Born at Nahant, Massachusetts, 23 July 1870, of James H. Beal (banker) and Louisa Jane Adams.

Fitted at B. J. Legate's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lillian Sprague Darrow at New York City, 7 November 1897.

Children:

James, born 4 February 1899 (died 12 August 1901).

Willis, 14 June 1902.

Holland, 2 June 1904.

Now in real estate at New York City.

Returns "story" sheet a blank.

GORDON KNOX BELL

Born at New York City, 19 February 1871, of Edward Rogers Bell and Eliza Nicol Soutter.

Fitted at Groton.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Marian Mason Crafts, at South Salem, New York, 11 May 1899. Child:

Gordon Knox, Jr., born 7 January 1902.

Now practising law at New York City.

"All statements in previous report remain uncontradicted. I am especially thankful that I have had no further illnesses or accidents. I have been a manager of the society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents, in the City of New York. I am a member of the Republican county committee, County of New York. I am treasurer of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District of the Republican party in the County of New York. I was in 1910 vice-chairman of the state convention of the Republican party at Saratoga, of which Mr. Roosevelt was chairman, but I am at the present time no 'Bull-Mooser.' I am district deputy grand master of Masons in the State of New York for the Fourth Masonic District. In 1909, I made a trip through the western part of the United States, the Sandwich Islands, (where I had the pleasure of close association with Mr. J. A. Wilder,) through Japan, Manchuria, Siberia, Russia, and came home by the way of Liverpool. In 1910 I became a member of the firm of Geller, Rolston and Horan, counsel for The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, with offices at No. 22 Exchange Place, New York City. I was a member of the committee to whom was entrusted the landing of the unfortunate survivors of the Titanic steerage, in 1912, and received them from the Carpathia on the night that they arrived in New York."

FRANCIS GANO BENEDICT

Born at Milwaukee, 3 October 1870, of Washington Gano Benedict (real estate) and Harriet Emily Barrett.

Fitted at English High (Boston) and Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

Married Cornelia Golay at Brewer, Maine, 28 July 1897. Child: Elizabeth Harriet, born 12 March 1902.

Now in physiological research at Boston.

"As Professor Josiah P. Cooke once told me, 'I never knew a young man who waited and worked hard who did not ultimately get the place he wanted.' The past five years has brought this to me. My delightful service as professor of chemistry at the finest small college in New England, Wesleyan University, gave me the opportunity to branch out into a particular line of research which ultimately called for the special laboratory the Carnegie Institution of Washington has built for me on the grounds of the Harvard Medical School. What time I have that is not spent in trying to keep my affairs out of the Hearst newspapers is devoted to scientific research. The intimate relationship between our laboratory and the Harvard Medical School and all the more prominent Boston Hospitals only serves to show what there is to be done. We now ask for health and a life long enough to do it. Several months of unbroken rest each year at the charming Maine seacoast village Machiasport keeps me, I hope, with a proper perspective and triennial European tours of laboratories, hospitals, and scientific institutions assist in keeping the field of vision broad. I close as I began with a statement that of all the men it has been my privilege to meet there is not one who impresses me as that master of science and most gracious gentleman, Professor Josiah Parsons Cooke. My intercourse with him will always be my greatest debt to Harvard."

EDWARD MELLEN BENNETT

Born at Medford, Massachusetts, 5 October 1871, of Theodore Wilbar Bennett (merchant) and Anna Brown Mellen.

Fitted at W. Nichols's.

Class Status: Entered with '94. Joined Class Junior year.

Now practising law at Boston.

"I entered Harvard Law School in the fall of 1893. I left my class at the end of the first year, but returned to the school in the fall of 1895, and completed my three years' course there in 1897. After spending the greater part of the following two years in travel and study abroad, I entered the law office of Lord and Ilunneman, in Boston, in the fall of 1899, being then, as now, a member of the Suffolk Bar. I left that office in 1901, but have continued to practise law in Boston ever since. My home is in Wayland. There most of my hours of relaxation are spent. There I lead the simple life, interesting myself in town affairs and schemes for improvement of conditions in that district. I have had the experience of serving as a town officer for six years. I am still unmarried"

GUY BROWN BENNETT

Born at Owatonna, Minnesota, 27 October 1871, of Leonard Loomis Bennett (banker) and Arabella Fidelia Brown.

Fitted at Owatonna High.

Married Winifred Fay Niles at Owatonna, 30 June 1900. Child:
Leonard Niles, born 22 July 1909.

Now bank cashier at Owatonna, Minnesota.

"Not much of general interest can happen in a man's life lived in a small country town. The important items with us were the birth of our boy Leonard Niles Bennett on July 22, 1909, and the building and paying for our home (make note of the word paying). I am still cashier of the National Farmers' Bank and expect to hold down that job until I am taken to Fort Leavenworth to join the other cashiers at hard labor. By the way, if you want to see one of the finest country bank buildings in the world, come to Owatonna. See The Architectural Record for October, 1908, page 249, and The Craftsman for November, 1908, page 176."

RALPH WILHELM BERGENGREN

Born at Gloucester, Massachusetts, 2 March 1871, of Frederic Wilhelm Bergengren (physician) and Caroline Francis Boynton.

Fitted at Lynn High.

Married Anna Farquhar at Boston, 26 January 1900.

Now magazine and journalistic writer at Boston.

“ Class Secretary: Now, sir, something personal and vivid.

Class Member: Oh! Damn!

Class Secretary: I don't mean that way. Personal to yourself and vivid to the rest of us. What have you been doing these five years?

Class Member: Writing for publication.

Class Secretary (suspiciously): Any of it published?

Class Member (proudly, as one who knows the difficulties): Some.

Class Secretary (keenly): Where?

Class Member: Magazines—like Collier's and Everybody's and Munsey's and—and magazines.

Class Secretary (like a lawyer): Sure of that?

Class Member: Y—Yes, sir.

Class Secretary: Now, sir, on the basis of this splendid experience, do you advise fellow members of the Class to bring up their little ones to the pursuit of literature?

Class Member: Literature?

Class Secretary: I mean writing—like you?

Class Member: Sure.

Class Secretary: Why?

Class Member: Because in that case the little ones will unanimously elect to do something else.”

HENRY NEWHALL BERRY

Born at Lynn, Massachusetts, 2 September 1870, of Benjamin Jenkins Berry (water commissioner) and Sarah Catherine Newhall. Fitted at Berkeley School, Boston.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mabel Lavinia Breed at Lynn, 24 October 1900. Children:

Henry Newhall, Jr., born 29 September 1901.

Katharine, 21 April 1903.

Joseph Breed, 10 May 1905.

Mabel Lavinia, 17 November 1906.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ At the time of the last Class Report, I was associated in the practice of law with the firm of Hutchins and Wheeler, in Boston. On January 1, 1909, I entered into partnership with Charles C. Bucknam, both of us having been associated for several years with the firm of Hutchins and Wheeler. The new firm started business on January 1, 1909, under the name of Berry and Bucknam. We were then located at No. 84 State Street, Boston, and from the start did an active business. We recently found our quarters at No. 84 State Street too small for us, and on the first of November, 1912, we succeeded in securing more commodious quarters at No. 85 Devonshire Street, where we are now located. We do largely a corporation business, involving considerable trial work, a large amount of which is before auditors and masters. My practice has involved considerable work at a distance from home, and I spend a good deal of my time in various parts of the country outside of Massachusetts."

EDGAR FRANCIS BILLINGS

Born at Newton, Massachusetts, 4 May 1871, of Charles Edgar Billings (chemist) and Mary Murdock.

Fitted at E. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Isabel Mulliken Winship at Allston, Massachusetts, 7 July 1897. Children:

Winship, born 15 September 1899.

Charles Edgar, 10 March 1902.

Lyman, 15 September 1903.

Frances, 17 September 1906.

Edgar Francis, Jr., 26 February 1911.

Died at Boston, 22 January, 1913.

Edgar Francis Billings, the son of Charles Edgar and Mary Murdock Billings, was born at Newton, Mass., May 4, 1871, and died suddenly at his home in Brighton, Mass., January 22, 1913. He prepared for college at the Cutler School in Newton and entered Harvard at the beginning of the freshman year in 1889. Trained in a refined and Christian home, he early developed high ideals of life and became actively interested in the welfare of those about him and in the advancement of good causes.

On entering college, it was already his intention to become a manufacturing chemist; and with this end in view, he devoted a considerable part of his course at Harvard to those studies which he thought would best fit him for his future career. Always an earnest and conscientious student, he attained high rank, receiving his degree "magna cum laude" and with "final honors in chemistry." Literature, art and music claimed his attention as well as science; and he was fond of out-of-doors life, particularly in the country and at the shore.

During his senior year in college his father died, following a prolonged period of ill health. This necessitated an early assumption of grave responsibility and prevented his participation to any extent in social life. He reorganized and became the head of the firm of Billings, Clapp and Company, manufacturers of chemicals, a company which his father established. In this business, he continued until his death, becoming well known as a practical manufacturing chemist and an expert in the utilization of waste products.

Edgar A. Billings

During the summer of 1897 he married Isabel M. Winship of Allston, Mass. His home life was a very happy one; and his chief interest was ever in the welfare of his family. His widow, four sons and a daughter survive him. His mother and a younger brother are also living and still occupy the old home in Newton.

Of a most upright and lovable character and a sympathetic, manly nature, he won the esteem and admiration of those who knew him well; and his loss will be keenly felt by those to whom he was endeared.

H. O. M., Jr.

RUDOLPH MICHAEL BINDER

Born at Hetzeldorf, Hungary, 11 March 1865, of Johann Binder (farmer) and Sarah Orben.

Fitted himself.

Class Status: Freshman, 1891-92. Senior, 1892-93.

Now lecturer in sociology at New York University.

pleasantly, similar moments when sitting at the feet of greater teachers than myself. How many classmates remember their moments of sweet repose in English A and other courses? We need sleep, and if we can't get it during the night, we have to take it during the day. While as a teacher—both as instructor and disciplinarian (?)—I may thus report progress, there is none in other lines, unless it be my removal to East Orange, N. J., and membership in the Harvard Clubs of New York and New Jersey. The meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs in New York last June was a great event, and will be remembered for a long time. Have published a few papers on sociological topics, and give my whole time to the work at New York University. My vocation and occupation coincide! Expect to be married on June 10 to Miss Faye G. Brammer of Cincinnati. There is only one sad feature about it—I shall not be able to be with you at the coming celebration. You will surely not accuse me of disloyalty to the class, will you?"

RALPH BISBEE

Born at Jacksonville, Florida, 11 December 1870, of Horatio Bisbee (lawyer) and Martha Florida Flotard.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Minnie Galt (widow of Charles Logan Ward) at New York City, 24 January 1911.

Now practising law at New York City.

"Have been in the woods of Maine for over two years—and am not a good advertisement for the Simple Life. I have nothing of interest to tell you except that I was married January 24, 1911, and that, inasmuch as a congress of physicians both in Bangor, Maine, and New York City, have during 15 months failed to kill me, however wretchedly I still feel, I cling to the small thread of hope that I may live to get well in spite of them."

DEXTER BLAGDEN

Born at New York City, 8 October 1870, of George Blagden (banker) and Frances Meredith Dexter.

Fitted at A. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now banker and broker at New York City.

Sends no further information.

CHARLES ARTHUR BLAKE

Born at Boston, 26 January 1872, of John George Blake (physician) and Mary Elizabeth McGrath.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Leslie Appleton Knowles at Boston, 7 September 1910.
Child:

Harriette Appleton, born 23 November 1912.

Now in insurance at Boston.

"Having filled out the library bureau catalogue and being all billed and invoiced the rest is just like this: Large quantities of business rush past the door and we lie awake nights trying to divert it into our magnificent mahogany office which Boston knows so well. I am in partnership with Jack Meade whose only fault is that he didn't go to Harvard. Come in and see me, 99 Milk Street, there is a recollection parlor next door I should like to show the Westerners. Honors? Say, I'm married now and have a little girl born on the day of the Yale game. I thought of naming her Harvardina or twenty to nothing or something like that. Also I now rank as major on the governor's staff, but I forget that when I think of the two at home. Outside of these my life is about the same as the average man's. I live in Dedham where we get plenty of fresh air, with a chance for golf, tennis, squash and canoeing, and, when you feel very strong and active it is most invigorating to watch the real fellows play polo. Expense and a desire to keep my system intact prevent me from indulging in the sport of princes. In summer the shores of the big water are as attractive to me as they always were and I never miss a morning in it or a chance to row or sail on it. Also if there are any real salt water fishermen in the Class I will be glad to swap lies with them. I'm a fine sailor too, and grow better the farther I get from the sea. Any other information required will be cheerfully given. Recollect, gentlemen, we have nothing to conceal and crave publicity."

FRANCIS STANTON BLAKE

Born at Milton, Massachusetts, 26 May, 1872, of George Baty Blake (banker) and Harriet Johnson.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Eugenie Marie Stringfellow White at New York City, 16 October 1902.

Now living abroad.

“Since last report have spent the winters in the South of France where I built a villa at Cap Martin, which was finished in 1908. Have made an annual visit to America passing the late summer and autumn at home. However this year I am looking forward to returning in time for our twentieth, which ought to be a corker if it proves like the fifteenth. Make a good note of the red address card should you pass this way.”

GEORGE BATY BLAKE

Born at Boston, 28 September 1870, of George Baty Blake (banker) and Harriet Johnson.

Fitted at Groton.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Margaret Hunnewell at Wellesley, 30 June 1902. Children: Margaret Hunnewell, born 1 August 1904.

Julia Overing, 8 March 1907.

Now living at Lenox, Massachusetts.

“After graduation went around the world. Spent most of my time travelling, chiefly in the Orient, up to 1898. Intended to take up landscape gardening as a profession, was prevented by illness. From 1899 to 1901 was in the Catskills and New Mexico recovering my health. Was married in 1902 and since that time have made my permanent home in Lenox. Have taken some part in local politics, serving as selectman for three years.”

HENRY FORDYCE BLAKE

Born at Belmont, Massachusetts, 27 February 1872, of Thomas Dawes Blake (manufacturer) and Susan Price Symonds.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Christine Riley at Manchester, New Hampshire, 9 September 1897. Children:

Sallie Ropes, born 28 May 1898.

Thomas Dawes, 2d, 28 June 1899 (died 28 August 1900).

Alice Ainsmere, 17 July 1901.

Phyllis Marie, 13 January 1903.

Mary Fordyce, 2 August 1909.

Now practising law at Seattle.

“Nothing of importance has happened in the last five years except the addition of one more daughter in my family. I am still practising law in Seattle and finding time for an occasional game of golf or tennis for relaxation. Very few '93 men ever find their way to Seattle. The first one in years to favor the city was Falk who was here for a day or two in November. Although far away from Cambridge, what with the Graduates' Magazine, Bulletin, and Boston Globe, no interest is lost in Harvard."

David D. Austin

HENRY SPRING BLAKE

Born at Boston, 8 May 1871, of James Henry Blake (trustee) and Alice Spring.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

"Have been sick and am doing nothing at present."

DAVID BLAUSTEIN

Born at Lida, Wilna, Russia, 5 May 1864, of Jesajah Blaustein and Chajah Sarah Natzkowsky.

Fitted with private tutors.

Class Status: Special, 1889-93.

Died at Cold Spring, N. Y., 27 August, 1912.

David Blaustein died suddenly in his forty-sixth year on August 27th, 1912, at the Summer Camp of the Educational Alliance, at Cold Spring on the Hudson. Born in Russia—expelled because he was a Jew, fleeing to Germany—expelled because he was a Russian, he came to America and in 1888 settled in Boston. His early struggles to gain a livelihood and then an education—struggles which terrible as they were could not crush his spirit and his ambition, determined him to devote his life to social and educational work among the immigrants. He found his opportunity as Superintendent of the Educational Alliance, an institution on the lower East Side of New York City in the heart of the Russian Jewish community, organized for the purpose of offering educational and social opportunities to the immigrant and his children. Here Blaustein labored day and night for ten years, shouldering in addition to the educational and personal service work, for which he had a wonderful gift, administrative duties, for which he himself realized he was ill-fitted, but could not shirk. He thus made inroads upon his strength which necessitated his retirement. Since that retirement he had been a lecturer in the School of Philanthropy of the Charity Organization Society of this city, and during the vacation period, a travelling investigator of places and conditions suitable for the location of settlements of Jewish farmers in various parts of the United States.

Blaustein was an exceedingly thoughtful, considerate and sympathetic counsellor of those who sought his aid. His influence on his surroundings was enormous.

Less than a year ago he married Miss Miriam Umstedter, of Norfolk, Va. Within three months of his death his wife was warned that by his intensity and indefatigability he was consuming himself at a dangerous rate. In the knowledge that his life was in jeopardy, he continued his work. When warned, he frequently said that he would rather die working than live caring for his health.

J. I. S.

WILLIAM MILLER BOOTH

Born at Clayville, New York, 4 September 1870, of William Moss Booth (farmer) and Irena Miller.

Fitted at Utica Free Academy and Hamilton College.

Class Status: Special, 1890-91; Scientific, 1892-93; S.B. 1893.

Married Marian Booth Foster at Cleveland, 29 December 1896.

Now chemical engineer at Syracuse, New York.

“ There has been no change in my policy since my last report. With September last I began the tenth year of my life as a consulting chemical engineer. Two fundamental ideas underlie my motives and actions: to get a living and to be a credit to the profession. Neither has proved simple. By speech and by papers I am trying to show the public that chemistry is of value in every enterprise where materials are used. It has taken five years to define the term ‘chemical engineer.’ Manufacturers keep me busy with a variety of problems generally dealing with cost of production or operation. It all amounts to a matter of ‘efficiency,’ a term known to and understood by most people. The death of my father four years ago nearly upset all my standards of life. I am still wondering what it is all for anyway! My best guide and consolation is the life of the clean, pure and high-minded man. I meet him occasionally. Although not blessed with children my home life is ideal—due to the sympathy, coöperation and love of a good wife.”

ROBERT PENDLETON BOWLER

Born at Cincinnati, 25 January 1871, of George Pendleton Bowler and May Williamson.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now President Moa Bay Iron Company, New York City.

"While still interested in the development of coal lands and manufacture of coke, the past five years have been largely devoted to the management of the Moa Bay Iron Company, which acquired the properties of the Cuban Exploration Company referred to in my last report. When not engaged in following the intricacies of the iron and steel business, I occasionally find time to lick Cary at golf. In the winter we sometimes play other games at which he is more proficient. My business naturally involves frequent trips to Cuba. In the spring of 1912 I spent four months in London and Paris. Some six weeks in the Yellowstone Park and Jackson's Hole Country in 1911. Other summer vacations have been spent at Bar Harbor, Murray Bay and York. Have just returned from a most interesting trip to Jamaica and the Panama Canal. Attended the meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs in Cleveland in 1910. Had such a bully time that I straightway resolved never to miss another meeting. As a comparatively recent convert my zeal is great. I urge you one and all go do likewise. Get the habit."

RALPH HARTT BOWLES

Born at Cherryfield, Maine, 7 February 1870, of Henry Haviland Bowles (merchant) and Abbie Adams Wakefield.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Namee Clopton Henderson at Washington, District of Columbia, 20 December 1901. Children:

Ralph Hartt, Jr., 1 May 1903.

Donald Henderson, 19 June 1905.

John Eliot, 11 January 1911.

Now educational editor of Charles Scribner's Sons at New York City.

"Am pegging away at editing and keeping up my health by playing tennis and taking week-end 'hikes' with my two oldest boys. I find that these trips serve the double purpose of giving me a great deal of pleasurable exercise and of saving me from the reputation of being a 'moss-back' in the eyes of my boys. I am keeping young in spite of myself and it's lots of fun."

GEORGE HALE BRABROOK

Born at Taunton, Massachusetts, 21 August 1871, of George Brabrook (treasurer) and Eliza Hale Knowles.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Grace Bradford White at Taunton, —, 1895. Children:
Barbara, born —.
Harwood, —.

Now in ore reduction business at Manhattan, Nevada.

"I am still engaged in the mining business at Manhattan, Nevada, and have nothing of interest to add to my last report."

CALVERT BREWER

Born at Bergen Point, New Jersey, 2 October 1871, of William Augustus Brewer (insurance) and Bella Calvert Fisher.

Fitted at Dearborn Morgan School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Mandeville Minott at South Orange, 10 February 1902.

Now a banker at New York City.

"Vice-president of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, New York, with which company I have been associated since 1893. While I thoroughly appreciate the Secretary's earnest endeavor to extract news I regret that there has not been sufficient change in the situation to warrant any special comment."

HENRY MORGAN BROOKFIELD

Born at Brooklyn, 17 October 1871, of William Brookfield (manufacturer) and Kate Morgan.

Entered from Columbia.

Married Louise Lord at Orange, 15 February 1906. Children:

William Lord, born 8 February 1908.

Henry Morgan, Jr., 11 April 1911.

Now President of Brookfield Glass Company at New York City.

Sends no other report.

ARTHUR NICHOLSON BROUGHTON

Born at Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, 20 December 1870, of Nicholson Broughton (customs officer) and Aravesta Susan White.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lillian DeWolfe Pingree at Jamaica Plain, 21 December 1898.

Adopted child: Frances, now three years old.

Now practising medicine at Jamaica Plain.

“The past years, since the last report, have been exceedingly full, very largely of professional work—a distinctly general practice, with especial chances to do some surgery and pediatrics. We have been abroad again for three months; have built a comfortable house at Gloucester, which has given us unlimited joy; and, three years ago, we took a two-weeks-old baby girl for adoption. She has been in every way our best investment, and we are now waiting to find an attractive boy who needs us as we need him. Classmates’ children are eligible. I do not believe that my life could be materially happier than it now is in spite of many burdens and responsibilities which after all is what we are here for.”

PHILIP TURNER BROWN

Born at Boston, 21 December 1870, of Frederick Turner Brown (broker) and Caroline Vose Emmons.

Fitted at Berkeley School, New York.

Class Status: A.B. 1895 as of 1893.

Now health-seeking; home at New York City.

“Regret that I have nothing of particular interest to report.”

ROY BENTON BROWN

Born at Troy, New York, 17 May 1871, of Charles Ambrose Brown (merchant) and Mary Frances Ball.

Fitted at Albany Academy.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Now partner in Charles A. Brown & Co., Commission Merchants, and President Rob Roy Hosiery Co., at Troy, New York.

“Nearly four years ago I bought a farm about four miles north of Albany and since then have been living on it both winter and summer. My business takes me to Troy nearly every day and I use a small motor runabout to get back and forth. In the summer I work a little about the farm which I have been gradually improving. Am still unmarried and without any apparent prospects of a change. I should be pleased to furnish more material but have no important events to report."

ARTHUR TABER BROWNE

Born at Des Moines, 7 October 1867, of Hamilton Browne (coal operator) and Mary Louise Napier.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Clara Louise Holmdale at Minneapolis, 9 October 1901. Children:

Hamilton, 2d, born 26 June 1905.

Elizabeth, 23 February 1909.

Now in electrical construction at Chicago.

No further details received.

JAMES ABERCROMBIE BURDEN

Born at New York City, 16 January 1871, of James Abercrombie Burden (manufacturer) and Mary Proudfit Irvin.

Fitted at Cutler's.

Married Florence Adele Sloane at Lenox, Massachusetts, 6 June 1895. Children:

Emilie Vanderbilt, born 12 May 1896 (died 12 August 1906).

James Abercrombie, 3d, 12 July 1897.

William Douglas, 24 September 1898.

Florence Irvin, 20 August 1902.

Now President of the Burden Iron Company, Troy, N. Y.

" Nothing of importance to add since last Report. My business keeps me busy, and shooting in Scotland, Canada and the South have been, with the addition of some polo, my chief recreation."

CHARLES ROLAND BURGER

Born at Iowa City, 7 December 1867, of Henry Burger (miner) and Caroline Mohr.

Entered from University of Colorado.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Orville Marie Maxwell at Boulder, Colorado, 5 October 1895. Children:

Ray Maxwell, born 27 October 1897.

Charles Roland, Jr., 19 September 1899.

Now Professor of Mathematics at Golden, Colorado.

" Nothing unusual has happened to me or mine unless possibly it be that I have contracted a severe case of automobilitis."

PERCY FLETCHER BURROWS

Born at Lowell, 14 September, 1872, of Henry Burrows and Elizabeth Spenser.

Fitted at Lowell High.

Class Status: Entered Sophomore.

Now in business at New York City.

“ I am no longer in the gas business, and my office is at 141 Broadway. I am unmarried and have nothing of outside interest to communicate. My home address is New Rochelle, N. Y.”

EDWARD ANGUS BURT

Born at Athens, Pennsylvania, 9 April 1859, of Howard Fuller Burt (miller) and Miranda Forsythe.

Fitted at Albany State Normal School.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Clara Mary Briggs at Laurens, New York, 21 August 1884.
Children:

Angus Edward, born 20 June 1885. (Married 14 July 1910; died 11 July 1911).

Albert Forsythe, 30 July 1890.

Farlow, 24 November 1896.

Howard, 5 December 1900.

Now Professor of Natural History at Middlebury College, Vermont.
(After 10 September 1913, Librarian and Mycologist at Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Mo.).

a year and twenty-two other people in the shaft of the West Dome mine in the fire which swept over Poreupine, July 11, 1911. My son Albert graduated valedictorian of the class of 1911 of Middlebury College and is now in the second-year class of the Harvard Law School. My son Farlow will probably enter Washington University, St. Louis, in September."

CHARLES SHOREY BUTLER

Born at Boston, 6 July 1870, of Charles Shorey Butler (merchant) and Elizabeth Nancy Cummings.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's, Boston.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Margaret Parker Hubbard at Boxford, Massachusetts, 31 January 1901. Children:

Elizabeth, born 17 January 1904.

Charles Shorey, Jr., 25 September 1908.

Now practising and teaching medicine at Boston.

"As one approaches midlife, I find he falls into regular lines of work or play, with less to record of interest to his class, except in the brilliant few. A man's vocation has long ago been selected; and he thereafter fits himself best to do his duty and make his mark. For myself, Boston has continued my home city (for the winter months). We (my wife, our two children and myself) keep our good health and get our enjoyment in life, in out-door interests, and the simple life. But the "simple life" in a big city is a strenuous one. School for the children, one's own personal cares and duties with necessary reading and work and occasional selfish pleasures of the theatre or concert, fill a large part of one's time. A city, a big city anyway, is not the best place, in my opinion, to bring up children. Therefore, we hasten to leave the city, early each spring or summer, to find more healthful surroundings for them; only to be driven back to the city in the autumn for school and the winter's duties."

HOWARD FULTON BUTLER

Born at West Hancock, Maine, 22 January 1864, of James Monroe Butler (carriage builder) and Mary Robinson Gray.

Entered from Brown University.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Maude Lillian Drake at Boston, 11 October 1892. Children:

Howard Fulton, Jr., 30 March 1905.

Mary, 7 June 1908.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ Admitted to Suffolk Bar October 2, 1896. Have practised law in Boston since.”

GUY STEVENS CALLENDER

Born at Hart's Grove, Ohio, 9 November 1865, of Robert Foster Callender and Lois Winslow.

Entered from Oberlin.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married Harriet Rice at Cambridge, 14 June 1904. Child: Everett, born 10 April 1905.

Now Professor of Economics at Yale.

“ About the only things out of the ordinary that are likely to happen in the experience of an undistinguished college professor are a sabbatical year and the publishing of a book. Both of these happened to me. I spent the sabbatical loafing about the Mediterranean in Spain, Egypt, Greece and Southern Italy, primarily concerned in improving my health, but incidentally getting some fun and considerable instruction from a sojourn in these socially backward lands. The book was the first fruits of a long-cherished plan and ambition. Years ago while a student in the Harvard Graduate School I became interested in American economic history and formed a project of writing a treatise that should cover that whole subject. A bad case of ‘nerves’ nine years ago interrupted my work and delayed the completion of any part of it, but in 1909 I got out the first of a series of volumes which will when completed realize my project. This is the one job outside the regular work of teaching I hope to be able to accomplish before I am put on the shelf. In the field of recreation and amusement the most important thing for me that has happened in recent years is the development of the device for playing the piano and organ by means of perforated rolls of paper. In my opinion this invention is one of the greatest events affecting the esthetic life of the average man that has ever occurred. It has made it possible for any person who desires and who is willing to give a reasonable amount of time and effort, to play those instruments—not merely to run a machine; and accordingly to become familiar with the great masterpieces of music. It has done for this greatest form of art in our time what the invention of printing did for literature in the fifteenth century. It is of vastly greater importance to the welfare of the average man than the discovery of the poles or the invention of the aeroplane. I never had a hobby until this thing appeared, but now I have one that supplies me about three-fourths of my recreation and amusement."

PATRICK THOMAS CAMPBELL

Born at Jersey City, 14 April 1871, of Thomas Campbell and Mary Houghton.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Edith Hayer at Boston, 28 August 1899. Children:

Thomas, born 7 April 1902.

Edith, 9 February, 1910.

Now teaching at Boston Latin School.

"Please correct maiden name of my wife. I've only had one and your record gives me great difficulty in explaining to the real Edith. It may be of interest that for the last six years I've been head of the department of history and general steering committee in heading our best athletes to Cambridge."

EVERETT PASCOE CAREY

Born at Port Elgin, New Brunswick, 18 December 1869, of Henry Carey (farmer) and Arabella Goodwin.

Entered from Mt. Allison College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Elizabeth Beharrell at Lexington, Massachusetts, 1 November, 1896. Children:

Dorothy B., born 18 October 1898.

Donald A., 20 December 1900.

Dana, 3 February 1908.

Now teaching in High School at San Francisco.

"Status unchanged. Still teach in S. F. in Polytechnic High School. Health good."

EDWARD HEMAN CARPENTER

Born at Chicago, 28 March 1870, of George Nathaniel Carpenter (insurance) and Agnes Anthea Williams.

Fitted at Brookline High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lillian Sanders Cummings at Brookline, 1 January 1895. Children:

Elizabeth, born 29 December 1895.

George Nathaniel, 26 July 1899.

Charles Cummings, 7 July 1902.

Now manufacturing deep sea fishing lines at Castine, Maine.

“Since the last Report my life has been uneventful, and my only political office during the past five years has been superintendent of schools. I held this office four years and retired last spring when a new arrangement was made whereby the superintendent was required to give his entire time to school work. Am a member of the Republican town committee and also president of our local board of trade, whose object is to boom Castine as a summer resort, and to develop the town. With the exception of the above, my life is spent in the usual and normal routine of the average mortals.”

FREDERICK JAY CARR

Born at New Lisbon, Wisconsin, 13 March 1869, of Willard P. Carr (real estate) and Caroline Sophia Ramsey.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90; with Class Sophomore year.

Married Ada Couch Elwell at Brooklyn, 21 April 1892.

Now bank president at Hudson, Wisconsin.

“After leaving college engaged in the banking business as cashier of the Bank of Hammond, Wis., remaining four years and then took the position of cashier of the Bank of Hudson, Wis., becoming president two years ago. My wife and I are fond of travel and each year make a sightseeing trip, so we have now covered quite well our own country and a part of Europe and the Orient. Was pleased to notice some excavation work up the Nile and in Palestine being carried on under the supervision of Harvard University. In the country we have more time for trout fishing, hunting, and automobiling than many do in the city where much leisure time is given to club life. Belong to the Harvard Club of Minnesota and attend most of the meetings which are held in St. Paul and Minneapolis.”

WALTER CARY

Born at Milwaukee, 26 April 1871, of Alfred Levi Cary (lawyer) and Harriet Maria Van Slyck.

Fitted at Milwaukee High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now in electrical work at New York City.

“You ask us not to be modest so I will admit that I have lost about fifteen pounds in weight and am now almost beautiful. I hope that I will remain so until next June so that I can prove it to my classmates. I am still working at the same old stand, manufacturing electric incandescent lamps, and connected with the Westinghouse Lamp Company, in Bloomfield, N. J., in the capacity of vice-president and general manager. Nothing very much out of the ordinary has happened to me during the last five years and I am still able to enjoy the annual '93 dinners given in New York by Collamore. I am not married.

WILLIAM ERNEST CASTLE

Born at Alexandria, Ohio, 25 October 1867, of William Augustus Castle (farmer) and Sarah Fassett.

Entered from Denison University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Clara Sears Bosworth at Wellsville, Kansas, 18 August, 1896.

Children:

William Bosworth, born 21 October 1897.

Henry Fassett, 23 July 1900.

Edward Sears, 25 December 1903.

Now Professor of Zoölogy at Harvard.

“ The past five years have been the busiest ones of my life. They have been devoted, with scarcely a month's interruption to scientific investigation and teaching at Harvard. Several invitations have come my way to go to other universities where larger sounding titles and heavier responsibilities would be mine, but these have all been declined with appreciative thanks; appreciative in part perhaps because the ‘folks at home’ like to know that we don't stay with them because we have to, but because we want to. My specialty is the study of heredity. In 1910 I delivered a course of lectures on this subject before the Lowell Institute, which formed the basis of a little book on the subject published the following year. I have also been part-author of two other books of general interest, ‘Fifty Years of Darwinism,’ and ‘Heredity and Eugenics.’ My investigations have been supported in part by the Carnegie Institution of Washington, which has also published the results obtained. In the fall of 1911, I made a short trip into the Southern Hemisphere in search of animals for my investigations, viz. wild guinea-pigs. These I found in southern Peru and brought safely back to the Bussey Institution where they are now flourishing. I have kept out of politics, religion and society, and everything else which might interfere with the main purpose of my life, to advance human knowledge (my little corner of it). My friends tell me that I am unsocial, unsympathetic, self-centered, and have lost the capacity to play, and they are doubtless right. But I am starting the last lap of the race and it is no time to slow up or change the course now."

CLIFFORD HOFFMAN CHASE

Born at Haverhill, Massachusetts, 21 November 1871, of Robert Stuart Chase (accountant) and Ada Harvey.

Fitted at Haverhill High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now health-seeking: home at Haverhill.

"My past five years have been spent principally between the Atlantic and Pacific coast. I have been engaged in literary work of various kinds, and find it remunerative and interesting. I have had stories and articles in different magazines, and novels and plays under consideration by publishers and managers. I shall be pleased to hear reports from all my classmates."

SAMUEL CHEW

Born at Philadelphia, 28 April 1871, of Samuel Chew (treasurer) and Mary Johnson Brown.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Philadelphia.

"Since you ask for a history since leaving Harvard, I repeat that I studied law at U. of Pa. Law School and in the office of George Wharton Pepper, Esq. In 1898, being in Seattle on business, I got the Klondike fever and went to Alaska on a water-logged schooner called the 'Swan,' and swan-like she had her nose under water most of the time. I accompanied a classmate who sold me a gold brick for the neat little sum of $400. I have been trying to 'get' him ever since. We parted on landing at Valdez. He has successfully eluded me ever since as I have never found him at any reunion since his return in 1899. I believe he lives in Apple Orchard or some such place. Kindly wire me if you hear of him or if he turns up near Cambridge. I returned to fight the Spaniards in the Phila. City troop in June and served with distinction through the campaign in Porto Rico, never being off the firing line for a day through wounds or typhoid, and never missing a meal. After patriotically serving my country, I proceeded about the beginning of the century to serve my home city loyally in the city solicitor's office in Court of Common Pleas, No. 1. After about four years of this self sacrifice not considering that justice (to myself) was being properly served, I retired and engaged in very active private practice with such success that I made two trips to England for material for comparison of the English law courts with our own, and incidentally several weeks' pursuit of health in pursuit of sly Reynard in the Shires. Care of large estates has been my specialty, more especially improved real estate, with a preference for negotiable securities, and large bank deposits. I did condescend ten years ago to act under appointment of the court in defence of a negro charged with murder. He was convicted of 1st degree in 20 minutes. I carried it to the Supreme Court, thence three times to the Pardon Board, succeeding in commuting his sentence to 'life.' Two months ago he was given his liberty. The total fee amounted to about $350, This I paid out of my own pocket. I went to considerable expense (about $25—but considerable for me) in investigating some matters in an estate for one of our classmates of the Massachusetts Bar several years ago, and am still hoping to be reimbursed and will compromise on charging no fee if only the original $25 is returned. Last year my income was curtailed somewhat by a visit to my sister in Egypt which took three months. Health good. Appetite voracious. Thirst extravagant."

WILLIAM ANTHONY CLARK

Born at Mineral Point, Wisconsin, 13 July 1868, of William Henery Clark (insurance) and Jane Nancolas.

Fitted at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois.

Class Status: Entered Junior with '92. Joined Class Senior year.

Married Frances Marie Freese at Boston, 10 February 1894 (died 20 November 1895). Child:

William Anthony, Jr., born 16 November 1894.

Now with Clark, Foster & Co., Inc., Securities, 85 Devonshire Street, Boston.

That's all.

ALBERT SIDNEY GREGG CLARKE

Born at Iowa City, 5 February 1872, of Rush Clarke (lawyer) and Sidney Ormsby Robinson.

Fitted at the Gunnery School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Florence Nightingale Kline at Washington, Connecticut, 28 October 1896 (died 20 July 1904). Children:

Rush, born 19 August 1897.

Gregg, Jr., 29 May 1899 (died 2 November 1900).

Florence Gregg, 30 October 1901.

Frederick Lawrence Mansfield, 20 July 1904 (died 20 July 1904).

Married (2) Suzanne Carlyle Anderson (Mrs. Barstow) at Asheville, North Carolina, 25 January 1906.

Now practising law in New York.

“Since graduation I have been both teaching school and practicing law; but the Keewaydin Camps, which I started soon after leaving college, as a side-issue, have grown to become really my first care. These camps are on Lake Temagami, Canada, and are the largest and perhaps the best known in the country. They were started primarily as a boys’ camp, but have become general camps now, with a division for boys, another for men, another for families and so on. My family has not grown since the last Report and I have just the two children, a boy and a girl, the boy nearly ready for Harvard.”

ALEXANDER LYNDE COCHRANE

Born at Malden, 25 April 1870, of Alexander Cochrane (merchant) and Mary Lynde Sullivan.

Fitted at Groton.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now health-seeking; home at Boston.

“The last five years have been rather uneventful. My health has improved although have not returned to business. Have been abroad from time to time.”

JOHN IRA COCHRANE

Born at East Dorset, Vermont, 31 March 1870, of John Luther Cochrane (farmer) and Sarah Elizabeth Roberts.

Fitted at Burr and Burton Seminary.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Randolph Jones at Charlottesville, Virginia, 16 August 1898. Children:

Sarah Roberts, born 29 January 1901.

David Duke, 20 September 1902.

Now practising medicine and writing stories at East Dorset, Vermont.

“ From 1893 to 1895 taught the sons of wealthy malefactors how to get into college, at Westminster School in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., meanwhile spending the proceeds on Broadway. Two years in the Medical School of the University of Virginia and two in New York hospitals taught me a whole lot not in books, especially the winter spent as penitentiary physician on Blackwell's Island. Here I learned most of the things that have been changing the political map by coming to the surface during the last campaign—such as the boss-rule, the gospel of graft and the principle of Every Man After His. Then I got married and went into the wilds of Vermont to practice medicine, settling finally on the ancestral acres (principal crop, taxes) at East Dorset. Result, a more or less satisfactory existence and two husky kids—Sara, 12; and David, 10. In the last year or so I have cashed in the penitentiary experience by writing it up for Everybody's. The editor returned it with the remark that it was—hold your hat on—‘Too good to be wasted in that way,’ and advised ‘Half a dozen short stories.’ I wrote 'em, and he took 'em, stuck 'em together and then published them in the first number of ‘Adventure’ under the heading ‘The Crook and the Doctor.’ Also he asked for more, and other letters from publishers here and abroad so stunned me that I have made no attempt to keep up with the demand. But I have written two more ‘Novellettes,’ since published in Adventure, ‘Cupid and the Crook’ and ‘The Open Night.’ They are referred to, in the letters I get from publishers, as ‘The Dan Wheeler Stories,’ and I am told they ‘have the punch!’ Grant Richards, London, and Small Maynard and Company have offered to put them in a book, but recommend making a sure-enough novel of them. I am now grinding out another Dan Wheeler story. Oh, yes—there is the O. Henry Finish. Everybody's offered a prize for the best finish of an uncompleted story by O. Henry, published in the December, 1911, issue of the magazine. I made a stagger at it with the result that I got a check and a paragraph in the May, 1912, number to the effect that ‘Dr. John I. Cochrane's ending, of the six hundred submitted, was unanimously adjudged—,’ etc., and that it wound up with ‘the true O. Henry twist.’ I still wear a 7 1-2 Stetson. I am the rankest kind of Bull Moose, and contributed my share of endeavor to bring about the result in this town, November 5. It was—Taft, 54; Wilson, 68; Roosevelt, 117.

You can't steal and get away with it all the time. In closing let me state that I blame B. Wendell and English 12 for what fun I have had to date out of the magazine game. Mighty cold winters up here, but we crawl out in the spring. And I hope to see Harvard Square again some day."

GILMAN COLLAMORE

Born at New York City, 25 December 1871, of Gilman Collamore (merchant) and Mary Alethea Jenkins.

Fitted at Wilson and Kellogg's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now with A. L. Causse, commission broker at New York City.

My fifth history must needs be much the same as the fourth, for with the exception of the looting of my abode and a touch of chills and fever with consequent loss of weight little has occurred to disturb the even tenor of the way. Though exporting was a flash in the pan, I am still permitted by the indulgence of a kind uncle to make my headquarters at 105 Hudson Street. So much for the vocation of a drone. As to avocation, there is more to be said. The revival of the Class Dinners in New York City in 1908—if memory serves, one was held in 1893 or 1894 at the old Martin on University Place—has flourished. Every year has seen Chorister Cary swelling the "Farewell, Farewell." In 1911 the New York men invited the class at large to be their guest. This year the same programme is planned as a preliminary bout before the Vicennial. Bill Baker, counsellor extraordinary, Walter Cary, kapellmeister nonpareil, Bobby Bowler, gourmet par excellence, Goodrich, Nutter, et al., have given their time to make these affairs successful. As for myself, to quote from the Fourth Report: "The work on the Committee is a labor of love, from which I derive genuine pleasure." Two years ago, Charley Nutter, the live wire, introduced me to a new line of avocational activity. He conceived the idea of refurnishing the '93 Room in the Harvard Club, and having planned the details, etc., prevailed upon me to help collect the funds. Then, having made the room the most comfortable and desirable in the club and initiated the nucleus of a '93 library, he was called to Boston and left me an embryo librarian. The members of the class have been very generous in donating their chêf d'oeuvres, but many shelves are yawning to be filled. Authors, literary, philosophic, historic, scientific, emerge from your innate modesty and fill them! Donations of class photographs and memorabilia for the transformation of this room into a veritable '93 museum are also earnestly requested. For the rest, music and the drama claim attention. My interest in athletics waxes rather than wanes. Football brainstorms are recurrent and sometimes make their devastating way into the columns of the New York Sun by kind permission of William B. Hanna, Special '12. The hockey season is ever welcome. I am much interested at present in the movement to place this splendid winter sport upon the major list. And then, when summer comes, what is more stimulating and invigorating than the shouts of the bleachers or the tight finish of a distance race! I have also acquired of late a growing interest in another line, the manifold activities of the Harvard Club, and have served during the past year on three committees, the Nominating, the Associated Harvard Clubs, and the Dinner. I still dine at Browne's Chop House, 1424 Broadway, every evening except Sunday at seven o'clock. Kindly refer, classmates, to the Fourth Report, wherein you will find my invitation printed in italics by the grace of our genial Secretary. It holds as good now as five years ago. Drop in and dine with me. I'll try to brush away your nostalgia and soften the noise of our rancous burg."

CHRISTOPHER WALTER COLLIER

Born at Westbury, Wiltshire, England, 23 February, 1866, of David Allen Collier (farmer) and Louisa Slade Collier.

Fitted at Betts Academy, Stamford, Connecticut.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Jennie Orcelia Wheeler at Williamstown, Massachusetts, 6 September, 1893.

Now Minister of Hammond Street Congregational Church, Bangor, Maine.

"Graduated, B.A., Williams College, 1892. Graduated Yale Divinity School, B.D., 1896. Winter of 1897-'98 University of Berlin. 1898-1905 minister Congregational Church, Orange, Mass. 1905 till present time minister Hammond Street Congregational Church, Bangor, Me."

Married Emma C. Tudor at Brookline, 6 June 1894. Children:

Emma Louise, born 1 April 1895.

Charlotte Augusta, 7 September 1896.

Marie Tudor, 2 November 1897.

Virginia, 16 February 1899.

Frederick Shepherd, Jr., 12 January 1903 (died 10 September 1910).

Elizabeth, 26 November 1904.

Now composing music at Westwood, Massachusetts.

“ Soon after graduation I went into the stock-brokerage business, but found it uncongenial for me, as I was always at heart a musician. So I decided to become one in fact, and to devote my life to the artistic and aesthetic development of our country, in so far as I was able to help. I studied two years in Boston and then went to Munich, where I graduated from the Academy of Music in 1898. I then returned to Boston and was connected with the New England Conservatory of Music as teacher and as a member of the executive committee for some years, and still serve in latter capacity. Was also Assistant Professor of Music at Harvard for some time. Of late years have devoted myself entirely to composition, and assisting in the organization and management of the Boston Opera Company, of which I am vice-president. Have written many symphonic works and two operas, besides a considerable number of smaller works, all of which have been produced. In 1894 I married Miss Emma Tudor, of Boston, and have had six children, and we are living happily on my farm at Westwood, Mass.”

GEORGE CRAM COOK

Born at Davenport, Iowa, 7 October 1873, of Edward Everett Cook (lawyer) and Ellen Katharine Dodge.

Entered from Iowa University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Now novelist, magazine writer and associate literary editor of the Chicago Evening Post, living in New York City (42 Bank Street).

" The years 1908, 1909, and 1910 were the last of the seven lean years during which I tried out truck-farming. My object in that was that of the literary man who, to protect his writing from prevalent commercialism, wishes to make a living in a non-literary occupation. I choose truck-farming as calculated to round out the half-life of the merely intellectual worker. For this I gave up the work of a university teacher. But the produce of my years of truck-farming has been eaten, not read. There are two fatal defects in truck-farming as an occupation for a writer. The present economic status of agricultural work is so low that twelve to fourteen hours a day of one's own hard labor is necessary eight months in the year in addition to the labor of hired men and boys. During these months most of one's total vitality goes into uncannily hard muscles. After the day's work there is no surplus of unexhausted life to pour itself into any intellectual activity, much less the intense activity of creation. In winter one has time; but for writing not only time but stimulous is needed, and isolation of country life does not afford stimulous. Instead of writing one goes mad. Overwork with low pay and isolation are the things against which I can warn those captives of city desks who get to dreaming of three acres and liberty. The cities are our creative centers. They may be discordant and exhausting, but the new life of the world is in them. It is in them that nature now creates new types. The thinker and the artist of our time cannot cut himself off from them and remain alive. I have but one novel, 'The Chasm,' published in 1911, to show for my agricultural years, and a few studies such as 'Evolution and the Superman.' Since leaving the farm the bulk of my time has been given to critical writing as associate literary editor of the Chicago Evening Post. A poem, 'Though Stone be Broken,' appeared in the April Forum, 1912, and a fiction story of the New York waiters' strike and some student strike breakers which ought to interest university men is about to appear in the Metropolitan Magazine. I am finishing some articles on American colleges and some short stories including one which shows the chief source of the weakness and lack of influence of American college teachers. I am working on a novel dealing in part with life in a university faculty."

HOWARD HAMBLETT COOK

Born at Salem, 1 November 1870, of William Stevenson Cook (expert accountant) and Sarah Elizabeth Mansfield.

Fitted at Salem High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now assistant secretary, American Iron and Steel Institute at New York City.

"On April 1, 1907, was appointed special agent of the Bureau of Corporations, Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C. On August 1, 1910, was appointed assistant secretary of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Hudson Terminal Building, New York City."

LOUIS CRAIG CORNISH

Born at New Bedford, 18 April 1870, of Aaron Cornish (physician) and Frances Virginia Hawkins.

Fitted with G. D. Hale.

Class Status: Special 1889-91 and 1892-93. "Certificate without academic degree" 1893.

Married Frances Eliot Foote at Boston, 14 June 1906.

Now in Unitarian ministry at Hingham, Massachusetts.

"I continue to be a minister of the First Parish in Hingham. The work takes all my time, but it makes rather poor biography. However, a few items from the events of the past five years may be of interest. On the tenth anniversary of my ministry in this parish I was given an assistant or 'parish worker.' This has been a great help to me personally. A tower has been built on the parish land near the meeting house in memory of the founders of the Hingham Plantation, and an excellent peal of English bells now hangs in its belfry. I acted as secretary to the memorial committee and did most of the begging. Four years ago we purchased a farm in Peterborough, N. H., and have spent part of our vacations there. This has given me a keen interest in farming and in forestry. Next June I shall have served fourteen years in the ministry.

The parish has granted me a six months' leave of absence in recognition of my long pastorate, and Mrs. Cornish and I expect to go to Italy early in April. I regret that for this reason I shall miss the twentieth anniversary celebration."

JAMES COPPINGER COTTER

Born at Castine, Ohio, 1 September 1869, of Terence Cotter (civil engineer) and Hannah Driscoll.

Fitted at High School, Paducah, Kentucky; at schools in Indianapolis; by private instruction in England and Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Married Victoria Charleville Whyte at St. Louis, 27 November, 1901.
Child:

John Maurice Esmonde Coppinger, born 13 December 1902.

Now practising law at Indianapolis.

"The time has been taken up almost entirely by work. I have been to the Pacific coast three times; several trips to the mining districts of the West and Mexico; an occasional visit to Washington, and other eastern cities; and many to the Gulf country; and while the motif was professional work, there was much incidental pleasure. While speaking of pleasure I must recall the Indiana Harvard Club and its meetings and dinners. My interest in Harvard is kept very much alive by my boy who is expected to make his appearance in the Yard in due time."

JOHN FERGUS CROSBY

Born at Neponsett, Illinois, 30 January 1862, of Thomas Crosby (farmer) and Eliza Parker.

Entered from Andover Theological.

Class Status: Sophomore year only.

Married Eva Elizabeth Hale at Barrington, New Hampshire, 22 June 1892. Children:

Eliza Hale, born 18 April 1893.

Robert Shakford, 16 March 1895.

Ethel May, 1 September 1896 (died 19 August 1897).

Gerald Parker, 1 January 1898.

Thomas Prince, 17 October 1899.

Evelyn Hayes, 22 March 1901.

Howard Fergus, 22 July 1902.

Lucy Bell, 14 May 1904.

Lester, 30 May 1905 (died 30 May 1905).

Gilbert Stanforth, 2 April 1906.

Now farming at Dover, New Hampshire.

“ Not to be ‘brief, cold or indifferent,’ when I left Harvard, June, 1891, I became pastor of the Congregational Church, Barrington, N. H. Some years before I had met Eva Elizabeth Hale and on her graduating from Bradford in June, 1892, we were married. I remained two years in Barrington and then took a pastorate in the 2nd Congregational Church of Medway, Mass. At the end of four years we moved to the farm near Dover, N. H., where we have lived since. Thoroughbred Holstein cattle are our specialty here in New Hampshire, and No. 1 northern wheat in Manitoba, Canada, where we have a small ranch. I still keep my standing in the Congregational ministry and the last few years have supplied the pulpits in Lee Congregational Church, three years; Barrington Congregational Church, two years; Greene Street and Main Street Baptist Churches of Somersworth, N. H., each one year. Ten children have been born to us, of which eight are living. Our daughter Eliza graduates from Smith College in June, 1913. Robert, although registered in Dover High School as fitting for Harvard, I think will go to Cornell. Six are still working from kindergarten to high school in Dover. A wedding livens up the house at times, and many calls to officiate at the funerals of former friends in the several parishes reminds me that I am growing old. Mine is an uneventful but busy life. Cattle do not develop of themselves alone. Neither do mules take to the furrow of their own accord. Nor yet wheat spontaneous grow. I either hold or drive, or both.”

EDWARD CONWAY CULLINAN

Born at Groveland, New York, 14 November 1869, of Jeremiah Cullinan (merchant) and Margaret Conway.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Freshman year only. Joined '94.

Now in general insurance business in New York City.

“ Five years have passed and much grist has been ground since I last took my pen cheerily in hand to chat with you, Mr. Secretary, I've really not a thing of moment to say, that should be said here. I am satisfied to forget the untoward things that have come to me and glad to own that I am still able to give birth to a smile. I have given over agrarian pursuits and joined the throngs of men in the mad, glad city. My Yonkers rancho is for sale. The vanishing of one great illusion is the cause and I may say that your Fourth Report is inferentially to blame. I am therein glorified as a Producer. In a studious, Burbankian way I tried in Yonkers to produce a new food product by the crossing of the bean and the clam, an edible delicacy that combined at once the succulence of the bean and the silence of the clam. C'est impossible. I failed!! I am now trying to earn an honest dollar in general insurance. Ethical or unethical, I wish to include in this tale of sorrow and anguish—at your club rates—that any '93 man may get the best of insurance goods off my counter at regular prices. Unsubsidized by any Moloch of the business, I give the best in my box and guarantee a grin on receipt of every premium."

CHARLES KIMBALL CUMMINGS

Born at Boston, 25 September 1870, of Charles Amos Cummings (architect) and Margaret Kimball.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lydia Lyman Paine at Boston, 18 May 1898. Children:

Francis Hathaway, born 22 April 1899.

Charles Kimball, Jr., 27 November 1901.

Ethel, 16 December 1903.

Evelyn, 14 March 1907.

Margaret, 9 July, 1910.

Now practising architecture at Boston.

"Life very uneventful of late. Practising architecture all the time with as many diversions as possible, yachting on the Maine coast in summer being perhaps the best of these."

FRANK JOSSLYN CURRIER

Born at Lynn, 8 June 1872, of Benjamin Willis Currier (merchant) and Louise Carlton Martin.

Fitted at Lynn High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Marie Ingalls Newhall at Lynn, 30 April 1908.

Now manufacturing shoes at Milton, New Hampshire.

"Travelled a lot in 1908. In spring of 1909 started shoe factory in Milton, N. H. The business has prospered in a small way. Fortunately for my peace of mind I do not have to spend much of my time there. The town boasts a population of 800, is delightfully free from all modern municipal conveniences, the towns-people seeming well satisfied with oil lamps, pumps and open air plumbing. My room, steam heated, costs $1.25 per week; meals (excellent), 25 cents per (transient rate). There are a few Democrats in town and they are confident that from now on living will be cheaper. Have just started a new factory in Portsmouth, N. H., which promises well. Am trying hard to raise my share of our 25th presentation fund, but gasoline, tires, etc., cost real money and we must have them. Haven't written any books, had any honors thrust on me, nor can I report any little fairies in my home. Am not discouraged however."

GEORGE DE CLYVER CURTIS

Born at Chester, Pennsylvania, 27 November 1870, of Edward Curtis (physician) and Augusta Lorler Stacy.

Fitted at F. G. Ireland's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now bee-keeping and farming at Foster, California.

"Five years ago I emigrated to the great Southwest; and though I did not cross the plains in an ox-wagon, I have enjoyed since then a rather primitive mode of life in these large regions. After some experience of different kinds of ranching in California and Arizona, I bought a small apiary in the mountains back of San Diego,—35 hives of bees, and a little cabin in the wilderness, just large enough for a bunk and a cooking-stove and the honey-extractor—and then filed a homestead claim on the surrounding ten acres of scenery. The bees, God bless them, make enough to pay my bills, or very nearly; I am busy in the spring and summer directing their labor, and in the autumn and winter I exercise myself in clearing land, felling the brush and grubbing up the roots. I have cleared about an acre for my kitchen-garden, orchard, grapes, and the beginnings of an eucalyptus-grove, and I expect to pass my declining years literally under my own vine and fig-tree, in a land flowing with condensed milk and honey;—by no means forgetting a five-foot shelf of books for rainy days. Beekeeping, scientifically followed, I find is in itself quite an intellectual pursuit; and for one who likes a quiet life out-of-doors in the kindest of climates, I can hardly imagine a more pleasant occupation."

WALTER HOWARD CUSHING

Born at Medford, 8 February 1871, of Henry Harrison Davis Cushing (packer) and Anna Bramhall Herriot.

Fitted at Medford High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Frances Louise Dudley at Medford, 15 November 1894. Children:

Howard Randolph, born 21 February 1896 (died 21 November 1896).

Sydney Hall, 30 September 1897.

Walter Kenneth, 15 November 1902.

Now headmaster of High School at Framingham, Massachusetts.

“ My efforts have been devoted to raising the quality rather than the quantity of the population. Am just finishing 13th year as secretary of the New England History Teachers’ Association. Have been one of the editors of the History Teachers’ Magazine (Philadelphia) since its inception in September, 1909.”

FREDERICK WILLIAM DALLINGER

Born at Cambridge, 2 October 1871, of William Wilberforce Dallinger (treasurer) and Elizabeth Folsom Kingman.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Blanche Lucy Russell at Lovell, Maine, 29 August 1900. Children:

John Russell, born 8 October 1901.

Anna Elizabeth, 20 July 1903.

Lucy Kingman, 17 January 1905.

William Stearns, 3 September 1908.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ Since our last Class Report I have continued to practise law in partnership with Harry N. Stearns, ’99, ‘under the firm name and style’ of Dallinger and Stearns, at 28 State Street, Boston, but in May of the present year we were forced to move to our present offices at 89 State Street owing to the tearing down of the old Merchants’ Bank Building where I had been located since my admission to the bar. In my profession I have been honored by being chosen a member of the council of the Middlesex Bar Association and as acting chairman of the committee on amendment of the law and by being continued as chairman of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts Conveyancers’ Association. I was also appointed by the President and Fellows of Harvard College lecturer in Government for the second half year of 1911-12, giving a course in constitutional law, known as Government 21,—a new and very interesting experience in my life. During the last five years I have devoted a great deal of time to the affairs of my native city, having served as vice-president of the Cambridge Young Men's Christian Association, chairman of the Citizens' No-License Committee, a member of the committee to draft a new city charter, and as president of the Cambridge Board of Trade, in which latter position I am now serving my third term. In this capacity I had considerable to do with getting the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to locate on the Cambridge side of our beautiful Charles River Esplanade. This year I was foolish enough to become a candidate for Congress from the Cambridge district, having long had an ambition to represent the old College at Washington. After a hotly contested primary contest I won the Republican nomination, only to be defeated at the election owing to the mistaken and misdirected energy and enthusiasm of the 'Bull Moosers,' chief among them being my old teacher Professor A. B. Hart. I have therefore joined the ranks of those who believe that political preferment is nothing but dust and ashes any way. I expect to continue to reside at 4 Hancock Park, Cambridge, in the bosom of as nice a family as any man ever had, looking forward with pleasure to the twentieth reunion of the glorious Class of '93."

EDWARD CROSBY DARLING

Born at Hudson, Ohio, 23 September 1869, of George Darling (clergyman) and Catharine Elizabeth Crosby.

Entered from Ripon College, Wisconsin.

Class Status: Entered Sophomore.

Married Elizabeth Patton Kent at Wytheville, Virginia, 1 December 1898. Children:

Kent Crosby, born 12 November 1899.

George Edward, 15 July 1902.

Now manufacturing aluminum at London, England.

"Was engaged in manufacture of aluminum at New Kensington, Pa., from 1893 to 1908. Since 1908 have been in same business in London, England, as director of Northern Aluminum Company, Limited, Caxton House, Westminster, S. W.

BRADLEY MOORE DAVIS

Born at Chicago, 19 November 1871, of Charles Wilder Davis (publisher) and Emma Moore.

Entered from Stanford University.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Annie Elizabeth Paret at Germantown, 22 September, 1908.
Child:

Margery French, born 17 October 1912.

Now Professor of Botany at the University of Pennsylvania.

"I have been connected since September, 1911, with the University of Pennsylvania and I find Philadelphia quite rapid enough for my habits. Discovered McDaniel to be a near neighbor in the same block of houses, all as alike as peas, a not uncommon feature in this city of homes on the installment plan. My time is chiefly taken up with the study of evening primroses which I grow by the thousands for certain experimental studies. The appearance in the family of a young daughter has given a very different outlook on life and its ways."

PHILIP WHITNEY DAVIS

Born at Jamaica Plain, 27 June 1871, of William Whitney Davis (merchant) and Julia Wilder Robinson.

Fitted at Browne and Nichols.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now with Eastern Metal & Refining Co., at Boston.

"About the time Taft was elected to the Presidency I found myself more or less tangled up with a concern called the Eastern Metal and Refining Company, having inadvertently purchased some stock in it. This adventure has shown me the truth of what I have often been told that a man never can tell what kind of work he will find himself doing no matter how much he may specialize while getting his education. So after all the broader you can make the foundations of your education the better it may be for you later. I have gradually drawn out of electrical work and am devoting myself to the technical end of the E. M. R. Company with, on the whole, fair results and better prospects. As a diversion I have taken up horseback riding and I am wondering that so many people cling to the auto at any rate in good weather."

SAMUEL CRAFT DAVIS

Born at St. Louis, 13 June 1871, of John Tilden Davis (merchant) and Maria Jeannette Filley.

Fitted at Smith Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Emma Whitaker at St. Louis, 16 July 1904. Children:

Alita, born 11 November 1905.

Samuel Craft, Jr., 20 January 1910.

Now trustee at St. Louis.

“As you will be overworked writing up the balance of the Class I will let you off on my history which has been mostly dry grind in the financial line without any high lights to give it color. When the skyrockets begin to fly I will let you know, but at present the Pujó Com. is busy with Mr. J. P. and others so I do not want to bother them either.”

WILLIAM HORACE DAVIS

Born at Holyoke, Massachusetts, 21 July 1871, of George Washington Davis (physician) and Julia Hastings.

Entered from Amherst.

Class Status: Entered Sophomore.

Married Mabel Amanda Crown Johnson, at Milton, Vermont, 3 December 1898. Children:

Crown Hastings, born 9 June 1900.

George William, 9 June 1901.

Dorothy, 6 August 1904.

Roger Maxfield, 22 November 1905 (died 15 September 1906).

Richard Mackworth, 12 June 1908 (died 26 October 1908).

Kenneth, } twins, 29 August 1910.

Barbara, }

Now practising medicine at Boston.

“Appointed medical inspector of Boston Health Department, April, 1908. Later in 1908 given charge of the vital statistics of the department and am still ‘figuring.’ But the great event was in August, 1910, ‘twins—two of ‘em,’ boy and girl, one light the other dark, one with blue eyes the other with brown. Take my advice classmates of ‘93—have twins.”

JASPER NEWTON DEAHL

Born at Kasson, West Virginia, 19 April 1859, of Henry Deahl (farmer) and Catherine Kline.

Entered from University of Nashville.

Class Status: Special, 1891-92. Joined Class Senior year.

Married Mary Anderson at Wingo, Kentucky, 1 August 1901. Children:

Martha Kline, born 21 June 1904.

Henry George, 1 April 1907.

Now Professor of Education at West Virginia University.

“ My educational experience since 1893 has been as follows: From 1893 to 1898 principal of West Liberty, W. Va., State Normal School. 1898 to 1900 student in Columbia University. Ph.D. degree conferred in 1906 by Columbia University Professor of education in West Virginia University 1901 to date. Since 1908 I have been a member of the State Board of Education. In 1912 I was appointed a member of the State School-Book Commission of West Virginia.”

AMBROSE COLLYER DEARBORN

Born at Melrose, 31 January 1873, of George Henry Dearborn (insurance) and Bessie Berry Godfrey.

Fitted at Melrose High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Louise Frances Beane at Melrose, 29 July 1906.

Now educational editor with Henry Holt and Company at New York City.

“ The years since the last Report have been chock full of interest, but not of the kind that can go into a Report. They have been spent largely in incessant travelling through the Middle West, the Far West and the South, visiting the universities and better class of colleges, partly to further the use of Henry Holt and Company's textbooks and partly to dig up embryo authors who shall write more books. It's a curious kind of work with a good bit of the fascination of fishing in it, for a big fellow might strike your hook at any moment. After a day's round of interviews however ranging from the department of hydraulics to the department of psychology, one is apt to feel either that he knows something about everything or nothing about anything. Just this fall I have been able to give up a large part of the travelling and to spend most of my time at headquarters in New York, which is a blessed relief even with the lures of the pleasant visiting in the youthful, growing parts of the country. For, after all, a home is to live in and not to pay brief visits to at irregular intervals. Nevertheless I shall always regard these Wanderjahre as an important, if belated, part of my education. So here I close, temporarily, my brief chronicle, once more settled by such a fireside as a New York apartment provides and ready to look forward to what the years before our twenty-fifth may bring.”

HARTLEY DENNETT

Born at Saco, Maine, 15 September 1870, of Roscoe Gilpatric Dennett and Annie Olivia Berry.

Entered from Technology.

Class Status: I. Graduate School 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Mary Coffin Ware at Boston, 20 January 1900. Children:

Carleton, born 23 December 1900.

Appleton, 11 December 1903 (died 31 December 1903).

Devon, 12 May 1905.

Now practising architecture at large (!) and agriculture at East Alstead, New Hampshire.

“ You see I don’t know my audience: is it a serious crowd that is hungry for life, that wants the tragedy, the struggle of the soul, or is it a holiday bunch out for laughter, or would they have something pastoral? Life at my lovely ‘Mill Holler’ is full of all these. I am deep in my task of learning farming. These mill hamlets are very primitive, the frills of social intercourse are few, the ox-team has not yielded to the traction engine, but one who loves these hills and woods and fields can wring out of them all the comforts of home.”

CLARENCE BIGELOW DENNY

Born at Boston, 7 August 1871, of Daniel Denny (merchant) and Mary De Forest Bigelow.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson’s.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Married Elizabeth Winsor Tilden at Boston, 1 June 1897. Child:

Daniel, born 29 May 1898.

Now manufacturing submarine signals at Boston.

“ I still live at Brush Hill, Milton. My family record is the same. In February, 1910, went to Havana and from there to Guantanamo Bay where I joined the fleet and had the privilege of coming up to Hampton Roads on the U. S. S. Louisiana. In the spring of 1911 went to Bermuda, and in 1912 to Panama, where I hoped against hope to have the good luck of meeting my old friend Rufus Thomas whom we all hope is coming up from Costa Rica to see us this spring. This, except for a number of pleasant and instructive side trips to Canada, Washington, and New York City, completes to date both the history of my travels and of the simple life of an obscure suburban resident.”

CHARLES LUNT DE NORMANDIE

Born at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, 26 September 1870, of James De Normandie (clergyman) and Emily Farnum Jones.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

Returns "story" blank unsullied.

LOUIS EUGENE DESBECKER

Born at Buffalo, 2 April 1871, of Samuel Desbecker (merchant) and Marie Weil.

Fitted at Buffalo High School and Buffalo Latin.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Now practising law at Buffalo.

"After graduating from Harvard I went to the New York Law School; took degree of LL.B. 1894; came back to Buffalo and practiced law; took a slight interest in Democratic politics and accepted nomination for corporation counsel in 1905 and was elected on a reform ticket which swept the town: served four years; had a strenuous time of it; great experience. Had a large force under me—tremendous pressure of work. Absolutely declined another nomination for that or any other office though many have been tendered me since then. Am practicing law with my partner, Irving L. Fisk, who is a Harvard man, both law and academic. I devote my entire time to our practice and keep very busy at it."

ALBERT JAMES DIBBLEE

Born at San Francisco, 25 February 1870, of Albert Dibblee (manufacturer) and Annie Meacham.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ethel Rodgers at Columbus, Ohio, 19 April 1899. Children:

Anne Rodgers, born 1 December 1900.

Margaret Jane } twins, 22 June 1909.

Marian Eliza }

Now practising law at San Francisco.

"I am still practicing law in San Francisco, and about two years ago formed a partnership with W. F. Williamson under the firm name of Williamson and Dibblee. I have been confined pretty closely to my office and have found it very difficult to get away long enough to enable me to visit the East as often as I should like. However, I am determined to be present at our 20th rennion this year, and will be there unless something very unexpected should happen in the meantime to prevent my going. On June 22, 1909, my family was increased by the birth of twin daughters. My residence is still in Ross, Marin County."

JOSEPH PHILLIPS DIMMICK

Born at Montgomery, Alabama, 28 September 1872, of Joseph Wesley Dimmick (banker) and Annie Savage.
Entered from University of Alabama.
Class Status: Entered Sophomore.
Now Postmaster of Montgomery.

"Nothing of any importance to report."

SILAS DINSMOOR

Born at Bellevue, Kentucky, 30 September, 1852, of Thomas Dinsmoor (farmer) and Nancy Eugenia Wadsworth.
Entered from State University of Missouri.
Class Status: Entered Senior.
Married Laura Brashear Bulkley at Higginsville, Missouri, 29 April 1895. Child:
 Daughter (died at birth), 4 October 1896.
Now practising osteopathy at Sewickley, Pennsylvania.

"Record of the past five years: 'The daily round, the common task.'"

WILLIAM BROWN DINSMORE, JR.

Born at New York City, 1 November 1870, of William Brown Dinsmore and Helen Frances Adams.
Fitted at St. Paul's.
Class Status: Regular A.B.
Married Marion de Peyster Carey at New York City, 4 June 1895.
Children:
 Marion Carey, born 11 July 1897.
 William Brown, 3d, 31 March 1902.
 Clara Foster, 21 April 1907.
Now an engineer at New York City.

Reports nothing further.

ROBERT GRAY DODGE

Born at Newburyport, 29 July 1872, of Elisha Perkins Dodge (manufacturer) and Katharine Searls Gray.

Fitted at Newburyport High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Woolley Childs at Amesbury, Massachusetts, 11 September 1900. Children:

Katharine Gray, born 1 July 1901.

Eleanor Childs, 13 November 1902.

Sarah, 24 April 1907.

Alice Langdon, 30 April 1910.

Now practising law at Boston.

“Have continued to practise law in Boston, with E. P. Saltonstall, '94, and A. P. Carter, '94, until April 30, 1910, and since then as a member of the firm of Storey, Thorndike, Palmer and Dodge. Have held no public office since the last report except that of ballot law commissioner for a three-year term. My travels have been bounded on the north by the Maine woods, on the east by London, on the south by Washington and on the west by Wyoming.”

HUGH DODSON

Born at Fort Smith, Arkansas, 10 December 1866, of John Dodson (real estate) and Elizabeth O'Keefe.

Entered from Johns Hopkins.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Married Katharine Weston Boltwood at Van Buren, Arkansas, 14 February 1900. Children:

Boltwood, born 1 December 1900.

Joseph, 22 September 1902.

Now in Post-office at St. Louis.

“I am still a post office clerk in the city of Saint Louis. I have never seen Harvard since I left there more than twenty years ago. I suppose the trees in the Yard have grown larger and the houses older and the red bricks redder or dingier. No more horse cars clatter in and out of Harvard Square and the subway has brought Boston much nearer. I don't know that I shall ever go back to see the gleam of the State House dome, or board the car for Cambridge in Bowdoin Square. I am a contented family man of 46. I am not wealthy or prominent, scarcely prosperous, but I am gratefully content. I need glasses to read with and have occasion to visit the dentist betimes, but what else can one expect after 45. We can not all be like Moses, whose teeth were not moved. I await your reports with pleasurable anticipation.”

JOHN JOSEPH DOLAN

Born at Boston, 18 February 1872, of Lawrence Edward Dolan (mechanic) and Catherine Dunn.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Annie Grace Spencer at Boston, 31 December 1896. Child: Grace, born 15 August 1898.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ Nothing to add.”

CHARLES THURSTON DOLE

Born at Charlestown, 6 March 1869, of Charles Augustus Dole (manufacturer) and Edith Veronica Dalton.

Fitted at Berkeley School, Boston.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92.

Now manufacturing paper at Lawrence, Massachusetts.

“ I have nothing to add to previous information except to say that I have made the progress that would naturally be expected from experience.”

WALTER CAZENOVE DOUGLAS, JR.

Born at Liberty, Virginia, 17 July 1870, of Walter Cazenove Douglas and Ellen Johnson.

Fitted at Berkeley School, Boston.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ellen Hewson at Philadelphia, 1 June 1908. Child: Ellen Hewson, born 21 April 1909.

Now practising law at Philadelphia.

“ Practising law, with offices at 701 Stephen Girard Building, Philadelphia. Also first assistant United States attorney at Philadelphia; solicitor for the State Anatomical Board of Pa.; professor of the Law of Torts, Insurance and Pleading, Temple Law School; president Volcanic Oil and Coal Company. Abroad with Mrs. Douglas summers of 1910 and 1912. Returned this year on same boat with Trafford and his family.”

HENRY ABIJAH THOMPSON DOW

Born at Woburn, Massachusetts, 7 July 1871, of Stephen Henry Dow and Emma Tryphena Thompson.

Fitted at Woburn High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Mary Celende Whitcher at Woburn, 5 April 1898 (died 20 April 1902). Child:

Henry Kenneth, born 18 February 1901.

Married (2) Etta May Willard at Cambridge, 6 June 1904. Child:

Lois Willard, born 24 September 1905.

Now bank clerk at Boston.

“ Five years, busy ones, not full of stirring events, but every day crowded with duties which an active man always performs, such, in a few words, is a summary to complete Dow’s record of the twenty years since Commencement in 1893. In business, I am still with the First National Bank, Boston, Mass. Being interested in coöperation as a means to human betterment I have devoted some time and energy to the Needham Coöperative Bank of which I have been a director for five years. The civic affairs of my adopted town interest me and I have worked on various committees selected to advance the interests of her citizens, but have not cared for the publicity attendant upon public office. In looking backward to 1893, yes to 1871, I feel that the most important event in my life has been the coming into it of Christian Science. The acceptance of its teachings has changed completely my viewpoint of life, so that my greatest pleasure and satisfaction comes in the endeavor to help myself or assist some fellow mortal to overcome disease and sin. It has been my privilege to serve First Church of Christ, Scientist, Needham, Mass., as first reader for a term of three years.”

TRACY DOWS

Born at New York City, 2 November 1871, of David Dows (merchant) and Margaret Esther Worcester.

Fitted with J. A. Browning.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92. A.B. 1894.

Married Alice Townsend Olin at Rhinebeck, New York, 11 November 1903. Children:

Stephen Olin, born 14 August 1904.

Margaret, 15 April 1906.

Now a trustee at New York City.

“There seems nothing to add to what I wrote for the Fourth Report. The conditions of my life as there set forth have remained unchanged.”

WILLIAM DUANE

Born at Philadelphia, 17 February 1872, of Charles Williams Duane (clergyman) and Emma Cushman Lincoln.

Entered from University of Pennsylvania.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Caroline Elise Ravenel at Philadelphia, 27 December 1899.
Children:

William, Jr., born 17 October 1900.

Arthur Ravenel, 16 November 1901.

Charles Prioleau, 28 July 1909.

Margaretta, 3 May 1911.

Now in radium research at Paris, France.

“I have been spending the last five years carrying on research work in the Curie Radium laboratory of the University of Paris, where I have had at my disposal about as large a quantity of the fascinating substance as has ever been gathered together in any one piece of apparatus. These years in Paris have been not only very delightful for Mrs. Duane and myself, but also of great advantage to my older children.”

DIVIE BETHUNE DUFFIELD

Born at Detroit, 3 March 1870, of Henry Martyn Duffield (lawyer) and Frances Pitts.

Fitted with H. G. Sherrard and G. L. Gorton and Phillips Exeter Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Detroit.

the past summer, although 42 years of age, I was rowing in an eight that won many races. In this line the most interesting thing I did was to go down to Cambridge in the year 1903 and secure the services of James Wray as coach for my club. His ability as a coach seemed to be recognized out here before it was in Cambridge. How he did it no one can explain but he made a fairly good sculler out of me. I have been connected with the Michigan Naval Brigade since leaving the Law School and am now the ranking naval officer of the state. I served on the Yosemite in 1898 and received a good check from the government at the end of my services for having helped in the destruction of an enemy's vessel in the face of superior odds. This entitled us to double prize money and was the only case of such double prize money during the war. I have, for the last five years, been in command of the U. S. S. Don Juan de Austria, one of the vessels captured by Dewey at Manila Bay. I have been all over the lakes with her and came round with her from Portsmouth, N. H., and so far have kept her off the rocks. This work is not classed as recreation; it's too 'd' hard. At the end of next year I shall be placed on the retired list which reminds me that the old gentleman with the scythe is beginning to eat up the handicap with which I started out in life. In a civic way I have served on the local public library board for the last nine years. During that time I have seen many changes and now see a fine new building for the city. I presume the most important law suit which I have had was the litigation that I carried on for the library and the school board making their bonds available for improvements. This matter involved three million of bonds and was carried to a successful issue practically singlehanded, but alas, it was gratuitous service gladly accepted by the community, but without the formality of any expressed thanks. I used to play raquets, but after nearly losing an eye in spite of very careful sewing up, I decided to stick to the water. This is the only serious time I have had with my physical make-up since graduating. From what has gone before you may infer that my profession is not making me rich, and your inference will be correct. As far as I can see I am just as happy as though a millionaire. I am very glad of the chance to send greetings to the Class. At the behest of the secretary I have spoken more frankly than is my custom."

MORRILL DUNN

Born at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, 26 June 1871, of William McKee Dunn (United States Army) and May Ella Morrill.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's.

Class Status: Freshman year only. Joined '94.

Married Anna Chapman at Chicago, 27 May 1899. Children:

Anita, born 16 August 1900.

May Morrill, 15 February 1904.

Morrill, Jr., 21 December 1906 (died 23 February 1908).

William McKee, 16 October 1908.

Now manufacturing at Chicago and Detroit.

“ No particular change from previous report. Still married with no modification in family. Started an automobile accessory company, an offshoot of a department of McCord and Company, in Detroit, in 1909. Called it the McCord Manufacturing Company, and am its vice-president.”

HORACE AINSWORTH EATON

Born at Quincy, Massachusetts, 13 October 1871, of Horace Eaton (merchant) and Rebecca Phipps Baxter.

Fitted at Adams Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Emily Russell Lovett at Brookline, 3 September 1902. Children:

Rebecca, born 11 June 1903.

Sidney Lovett, 1 May 1906.

Robert Endicott, 11 June 1910.

Elizabeth Russell, 25 May 1912.

Now Professor of English at Syracuse University.

“ The last five years have been quiet ones—divided between Syracuse and work, and Sargentville, Me., (bless it!) and play. College activities take up most of my time; but I am, on the side, still secretary of the Syracuse Harvard Club, which is an active organization, and I have been more or less concerned in a local improvement association. I am at present secretary of the Federated Improvement Associations of the city. It has been a great pleasure from time to time to welcome and help entertain old Harvard men as they have for one reason or another stopped off at Syracuse. The last '93 man thus caught being Hoppin. On the whole I find the world a pleasant place to live in.”

JOHN EDGAR EATON

Born at Truro, Nova Scotia, 26 February 1871, of David Hamilton Eaton and Carrie Matilda Eaton.

Entered from Acadia College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Anna Marie Hathaway at Westerly, Rhode Island, 20 March 1897. Children:

Ruth Hathaway, born 6 June 1898.

John Edgar, Jr., 8 March 1901.

Now practising law at Boston.

“Am still practising law as a member of the firm of Eaton and McKnight with offices at 45 Milk Street, Boston. The last five years have been uniformly happy and successful ones. No blushing honors have come fast upon me, and no aspirations for political office have overcome my better judgment. Outside of legal work my time has been somewhat occupied as a director in the Hyde Park National Bank, and in the Guaranty Trust Company, of Cambridge, and other corporations. Frequent business trips to different parts of the United States and Canada have varied the monotony of too much work. Altogether I realize that the last twenty years have gone all too quickly since graduation, but I still feel just as young as I used to be when I left Harvard in '93.”

JOHN WALDO EICHINGER

Born at Decatur, Illinois, 14 February 1875, of Michael Eichinger (farmer and stockraiser) and Lucy Helen Huff.

Entered from Eureka College.

Class Status: Junior year only.

Married Stella Johnson at Marshalltown, Iowa, 10 September 1902. Child:

John Waldo, Jr., born 10 September 1904.

Now farming in Alberta.

“In newspaper work at Des Moines till 1912. Now manager of 7000 acres wheat and stock ranch near Gleichen, Alberta, Can.”

SAMUEL WALKER ELLSWORTH

Born at Weymouth, Massachusetts, 29 March 1870, of Alfred Augustus Ellsworth (clergyman) and Angelina Clementine Cook.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising medicine at Quincy, Massachusetts.

"I am now assistant physician to the X-Ray Department, Boston City Hospital. My residence, as before, is 18 Russell Park, Quincy."

ROBERT EMMET

Born at New York City, 23 October 1871, of Thomas Addis Emmet (physician) and Katherine Duncan.

Fitted at F. G. Ireland's.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91. Joined Class Junior year. A.B. 1897 as of 1893.

Married Louise Garland at New York City, 25 November 1896. Children:

Robert, 2d, born 25 September 1897.

James Albert Garland, 19 October 1898.

Thomas Addis, 3d, 19 June 1900.

Aileen, 26 December 1903.

Now living at "Moreton Paddox," Warwick, England.

"Still hunting for health but time looks like beating me before I succeed in my search. Fox hunting, fishing, shooting and travelling occupy all the time I do not spend in my garden, farming or reading. An annual trip home to New York keeps old memories green and fresh."

MAURICE HENRY EWER

Born at Dedham, 24 July 1872, of Alfred Ewer (bank examiner) and Elsie Hannah Curtis.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Gertrude Sophie Durkee at Dorchester, 6 June 1894. Child:

Elinor Gertrude, born 15 December 1897.

Now cashier of National Park Bank, New York City.

No report enclosed.

CLARENCE RUDOLPH FALK

Born at Milwaukee, 27 November 1869, of Franz Falk (brewer) and Louise Wahl.

Fitted at Milwaukee Academy.

Married Margaret Sawyer at Milwaukee, 14 May 1901. Children:

Louise Sawyer, born 5 March 1902.

Margaret Sawyer, 10 January 1904.

Nancy Sawyer, 25 October 1907.

Now manufacturing steel castings, kerosene engines, and helical gears at Milwaukee.

“ All I have to add to my last report is: A few years ago I bought a small 12 acre farm near the Milwaukee Country Club where I have gone into apple raising for a pastime. Besides this the raising of my family keeps me pretty busy. Further than this I have very little to add to my last report.”

FRANK EDGAR FARLEY

Born at Manchester, New Hampshire, 25 April 1868, of George Washington Farley (machinery) and Lucina Cofran Baker.

Fitted at Lawrence High.

Married Mrs. Crane (Amy Elwell) at St. Louis, Michigan, 5 August 1903.

Now Professor of English at Simmons College.

“ My life during these twenty years since graduation has been, with the exception of one interruption, a never ceasing round of study and teaching, accompanied by the various sorts of executive tasks and the ‘literary’ performances that go with a college job. And I must say that on the whole I have enjoyed the grind. If my health had allowed me to accomplish more, and to work with less physical discomfort, my enjoyment would have been unqualified, for my profession still seems to me in most respects an enviable one, and I have never seriously regretted my choice. From 1893 to 1897 I was a student in the Harvard Graduate School and assistant in English at Harvard and Radcliffe; in 1897-98, instructor at Haverford College; from 1898 to 1903 a member of the faculty of Syracuse University. In 1903 I was married, and since that time I have had charge of the Department of English in Simmons College. The interruption I speak of came in 1909-10, when I had the privilege of spending a ‘sabbatical’ of fifteen months in Europe with my family. My object was rest and change,—not study. Consequently we drifted about rather aimlessly from one country to another, spending the most of our time in Italy, the French Alps, and England. I would not have believed that doing nothing could be so easy, or so pleasant, or so profitable.”

WILLIAM OLIVER FARNSWORTH

Born at Damariscotta, Maine, 27 October 1871, of Lewis Farnsworth (merchant) and Lydia Augusta Mathews.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now Instructor in Romance Languages at Columbia University.

“ There seem to be great possibilities in the life of a teacher of languages, yet here is one who is dissatisfied with the results; and yet one consoling thought persists in cropping out, that among the many hundreds of unwilling students who have listened to me, there must be a handful to whom I have succeeded in communicating something of my own appreciation of our neo-Latin line. Since the last report there have been no tangible rewards in the shape of promotions or increased earnings. Nor have I written much; three text-books in all. For three years I have been at Columbia, helping a little to build up the department of extension teaching, and studying much.” Have just taken my Ph.D. there.”

ROBERT DAVID FARQUHAR

Born at Brooklyn, New York, 23 February 1872, of David Webber Farquhar and Sarah Malvina Joslyn.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Marion Jones at New York City, 29 September 1903. Children:

David, born 7 July 1904.

John Percival, 20 March 1912.

Now practising architecture at Los Angeles.

“ After two years’ study in the architectural course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, I received the degree of S.B. and started in June, 1895, for Paris. Passing through the various stages of the Ecole des Beaux Arts, including six months of preparation, I left France in June 1901, with the Ecole diplôme in architecture, many well-treasured memories of pleasant hard work, travels on bicycle and on foot, and the companionship of four Harvard men, four M. I. T. men and one Columbia man, who with myself, installed ourselves in economic comfort in a ménage on the rue Soufflot by the dome of the Pantheon. Here we lived, and were visited by many relatives and friends, not once adding to our number, until the déménagement in 1901, when I returned to New York and worked in the office of Hunt and Hunt, and Carrere and Hastings. In January, 1904, I came to southern California and have continued here ever since, practising architecture and enjoying the opportunities for out-of-door life. P. V. K. J. is here too. We are trying to settle the ’93 championship at squash for southern California. I have been appointed a member of the architectural commission of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which will be held in San Francisco in 1915, and am now preparing drawings for one of the buildings."

SIDNEY EMERSON FARWELL

Born at St. Paul, 14 April 1870, of George Lyman Farwell (merchant) and Sara Gardner Wyer.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Fannie Sophia Rhodes at Lakewood, Ohio, 14 December 1898 (died 10 January 1900). Child:

Daughter, born 9 January 1900 (died 10 January 1900).

Married (2) Mrs. Joseph W. Barrows (Elizabeth Colwell Beatty) at West Chester, Pennsylvania, 27 December 1906, with children: Wilfred W. Barrows and Howard F. Barrows.

Now Treasurer American Zinc, etc., Company at Boston.

"For some years the usual ups and downs of the young man engaged in company with unbounded ambition in chasing a competency. For the last six years I have lived in Boston. Was married a second time just before returning to Boston. Have travelled much and seen much of interest. Have been chiefly to West Indies and Panama—the latter several times. Perhaps the most interesting part of the world just now. Have studied some of the problems of Panama and its future. The most interesting event recently, the marriage of my youngest son and the acquisition therefore of a daughter. In 1911 won a little modest fame by helping to re-finance a small church in which I am much interested. It was along the lines of national progress and our success attracted some attention. Altogether am enjoying a very interesting life, including an occasional football game, and beginning to realize how much there is to do and how little I know. Compared to my oldest son who will be graduated from Technology next June, I may say I know next to nothing. I may seem old from this story, but I can assure you 'I am just as young as I used to be.'

HARRISON GILBERT FAY

Born at Natick, 10 May 1869, of Gilbert Park Fay (merchant) and Laura Sophia Brigham.

Fitted at Chelsea High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ella Chloe Colt at Winsted, Connecticut, 31 March 1900. Children:

Henry Colt, born 26 January 1901.

Priscilla Brigham, 22 February 1902.

Gilbert Jefferson, — April 1912.

Now teaching at Columbia.

“ Now teaching in Columbia University Extension and Stuyvesant Manual Training, New York City.”

GEORGE RICHMOND FEARING, JR.

Born at New York City, 20 February 1871, of George Richmond Fearing and Harriet Travers.

Fitted at A. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Hester Sullivan Cochrane at Boston, 12 May 1897. Child:
George Richmond, 3d, born — March 1898.

Now an investor at Boston.

“ Practically nothing to add to last report; condition of affairs the same. Interested in Boston Opera Company and Free Hospital for Women, Brookline. Have taken considerable interest in securing P. D. Haughton for coach of Harvard football team and hope that he will continue.”

JAMES HENRY FENNESSY

Born at New Baltimore, New York, 14 July 1865, of James Fennessy (merchant) and Elizabeth Gorman.

Fitted with W. T. Baden.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91. Law School, 1891-94.

Married May Caroline Seep at Titusville, Pennsylvania, 30 January 1900. Children:

Alma Elizabeth, born 5 June 1903.

Eleanor Seep, 17 October 1905.

Marcia Seep, 23 October 1907.

Now President Mine and Smelter Supply Company at New York City.

“ If you will repeat the substance of the last report it will cover the situation—as far as I am concerned—fully.”

OTIS DANIELL FISK

Born at Cambridge, 29 April 1870, of James Chaplin Fisk (treasurer) and Mary Grant Daniell.

Fitted with M. S. Keith.

Class Status: I. Scientific, 1889-90. Joined '94.

Married Ethel Fiske at Cambridge, 10 April 1913.

Now manufacturing cottons at Boston (Fiskdale mills).

“ At present on his honeymoon. Expects to settle in Peter-sham, Mass.”

CHARLES HENRY FISKE, JR.

Born at Boston, 18 February 1872, of Charles Henry Fiske (lawyer) and Cornelia Frothingham Robbins.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Duncan Thorndike at Cambridge, 20 June 1895. Children:

Charles Henry, 3d, born 3 December 1896.

Cornelia Robbins, 20 November 1898.

Rosanna Duncan, 4 July 1900.

Now practising law in Boston.

“The practice of the law, however interesting to the fellow who is doing it, contains, so far as my experience goes, not much of public importance. My winters have been spent in Boston, and as much of my summers as I could spare from business at York Harbor, Me., where I have had thrilling golf matches with C. C. Goodrich, '93, and where with him I have endeavored to keep myself young at tennis. I have had one or two vacation trips to Europe, and have visited Spain, Italy and Sicily, and last spring I went with C. Merriam, '93, on a trip to Panama. As special counsel for my home town (Weston) I have succeeded in obtaining the abolition of two grade crossings by overhead reinforced concrete bridges, and am now at work on a third petition for a similar improvement.”

AUSTIN BRADSTREET FLETCHER

Born at Cambridge, 19 January 1872, of Ruel Haseltine Fletcher (teacher) and Rebecca C. Wyman.

Fitted at Cambridge High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91. Scientific, 1891-93. S.B. 1893.

Married Ethel Hovey at Cambridge, 1 March 1894. Children:

Dorothy, born 12 May 1895.

Norman, 27 September 1899 (died 7 July 1906).

Now highway engineer, Department of Engineering, State of California.

“I am still a licensed highwayman. Beginning a week after Commencement in 1893 I have followed the roads. Professor Shaler of blessed memory shunted me into the work, and in the vernacular of the West, I have ‘stayed with it.’ Until January, 1910, I was secretary and chief executive officer of the highway commission of Massachusetts, going from there to take charge of a road project in San Diego County, Calif., with $1,250,000 to spend. There I stayed until August 4, 1911, but before I had spent all of the money, the authorities, tiring of my methods of management, discharged me. Five days later, the governor of the state sent for me to be the chief engineer of an $18,000,000 state highway scheme. Upon that work I am now engaged. Under me I have a corps of engineering assistants, about 275 in number, all appointed on my recommendation without political interference. It is the finest organization of its kind in the country."

HERBERT LINCOLN FLINT

Born at Cambridge, 30 October 1870, of Francis Flint (manufacturer) and Celestia Frederika Barnes.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Caroline M. Cobb at Cambridge, Massachusetts, 4 October 1911.

Now landscape architect at Boston.

" Since taking up landscape work in 1905 have enjoyed better health, being able to work six out of the seven years. Have done all kinds of estate construction work in the field and since September, 1909, have had broad office training in the employ of Warren H. Manning, landscape designer, Boston. Have had charge of construction on several large estates with the engineering, executive and minor designing that implies. Was 14 months on Galen L. Stone's 500 acre estate on Buzzard's Bay, 10 months at 'The Blind', estate of J. L. Breeze, Havre de Grace, Md., and since July, 1911, have been located near Lake Forest, Ill., turning 60 acres of Lake Michigan's bluff into estates for A. A. Sprague and Stanley Field of Chicago. Shall be at this until fall, 1913. Was interested to note that though there was no landscape work in Harvard in our day, I took almost exactly the courses now included in that department, with the exception of design as applied to landscape art. Have certainly enjoyed my work and feel now that I am in a thoroughly congenial line and consequently making good progress. I have rounded out life in another particular by marrying on October 4, 1911, at Cambridge, Miss Caroline M. Cobb. No other little items to record to date!"

ELMER HOLLINGER FRANTZ

Born at Millersville, Pennsylvania, 12 August 1867, of Abraham M. Frantz (farmer) and Mary Ann Hollinger.

Fitted at Millersville State Normal School.

Class Status: Junior year only

Married Carrie Smith Bowser at Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, 22 June 1899. Children:

Dorothy Bowser, born 12 May, 1900.

Haller Bowser, 6 August 1902.

Marion Bowser, 14 August 1907.

Lillian Bowser, 6 October 1909.

Now practising law at Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

“ My family, during the last five years, has had an addition of one daughter, born October, 1909. We have, therefore, four healthy children, two boys and two girls, all of whom show general promise although too young to disclose special direction of talents. The last five years following as they do the panic of 1907, have been years of trouble for me consequent on that panic. It fell like a blight on matters of great importance, and caused me corresponding worriments and losses. It's going better again. The greatest single thing I am now doing, is the attempt to write a novel interpreting the life of the Pennsylvania Dutch. It should be finished the spring of 1913 and be ready for the publisher that I hope to find. I am teaching my boys to look forward to Harvard. While, through reasons of health, my stay at Harvard was cruelly cut short, my heart was in the right place, and is now, most decidedly. I have nothing but good will for Harvard and will hope to have my boys go through it.”

LOVAT FRASER

Born at Brooklyn, 4 September 1870, of Charles John Fraser and Mary Anna Whitfield.

Fitted at Rutgers Grammar.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92.

Now mineralogist and gem expert at New York City.

“ In the fall of 1912 I succeeded in purchasing the only emerald mine in North America. Having accomplished this stunt, and being dubbed in New York by some of my precious stone friends, as ‘Emerald King,’ and in the South the title of southern ‘captain,’ the next effort was to secure emeralds. While it is ‘not yet,’ we hope it will be ‘soon.’ We have, however, secured some emeralds. Nobody has asked if I’m married, but suppose that is due to very unfavorable report last time. Nevertheless, I'm not going to get gay, for see what happened to our legal friend. Hope to be able to make more favorable report next time (I mean in regard to emeralds.)"

ALFRED JULIUS FREIBERG

Born at Cincinnati, 7 March 1873, of Isaac Freiberg (distiller) and Charlotte Newburger.

Fitted at Hughes High.

Class Status: A.B. 1893 from '94.

Married Cecile Hellman at St. Louis, 27 June 1907. Children:

Cecile, born 13 April 1908.

Charlotte, 29 March 1911.

Now practising law at Cincinnati.

Returns a blank sheet.

SOLOMON LOUIS FRIDENBERG

Born at Philadelphia, 23 August 1870, of Louis Edward Fridenberg and Della Isaac.

Fitted with T. H. Walls.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now in private research at Buffalo.

"I am occupied here in special research work. I hope to have something ready in the near future, for publication."

LEE MAX FRIEDMAN

Born at Memphis, 29 December 1871, of Max Friedman (merchant) and Tillie Marks.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin and with M. Winkler.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

"Time has gone so swiftly that I can hardly realize that we are crossing the line and joining the ranks of old grads. The prospect of a 'twentieth' is a sort of shock to make a man sit up and take account of stock. I suppose we all are making trite reflections of how much we had planned at break of day and now at high noon how far away our youthful goal still seems and how different the prospect is. With me the last few years have been full of hard work, a little play and nothing very exciting—just the regular routine of a lawyer's life. My late partner, Godfrey Morse, '70, died in 1911, and I am now associated with Percy A. Atherton, '00, as Friedman and Atherton, 53 State Street, Boston. Still unmarried and just a bit envious of those of my classmates who are picking out a college for the next generation. A little travelling, some writing, dabbling in politics just a little, and attending to some charities are my by products."

LEONARD ALDEN FRINK

Born at Boston, 22 September 1870, of Alden Frink (architect) and Roxanna Folsom.

Fitted with A. Hale.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92. Law School, 1893.

Now practising law at Boston.

"I am still practicing law in Boston with Judge F. J. Hutchinson, Dartmouth, '78. Since the last Report I have received no honors or distinctions and as President Wilson has given notice that he will receive no office seekers at the White House, unless invited, my chances of a diplomatic post or a possible cabinet portfolio are fading away. I must say, however, it is a pity that the government should be forced to lose the services of one so well fitted for most any position. I am still a member of the 'outs' in politics and look with pride upon my vote on every occasion for Louis A. Frothingham. I can note no honors, travels, experiences or incidents of a nature that should be worthy of record in this report, and I can be found at the same old stand in Boston or at the Belgrade Lakes in Maine. When at the last mentioned place I should be pleased to welcome any '93 man to the best fishing trip of his life."

ARTHUR BOWES FRIZELL

Born at Boston, 14 July 1865, of Joseph Palmer Frizell (civil engineer) and Julia Bowes.

Entered from Technology.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Now Professor of Mathematics at McPherson College, Kansas.

"My exodus from the Lawrence Scientific School in 1906 led me through the wilderness of effete culture in Rome and Göttingen to bring me out in 1908 into a land overflowing with peaches and cream, a land rejoicing in perpetual sunshine and the near neighborhood of William J. Bryan. It is great to live in a state where everybody is good, but since the last election

I am less disposed to brag about it. The method adopted for counting the votes jars certain Harvard prejudices. My first chair in Kansas was at an institution where the odium theologicum had incautiously been set in motion. The operation of the same is like unto a buzz saw—gay to watch as long as you keep your fingers away from it. After withstanding this temptation for a year I heard a louder call from the State University, which puts all religious and irreligious idiosyncrasies on the common level of a pure democracy. The pay roll was on the same bed rock basis. So in spite of the degree of Ph.D., granted in 1910, it was not long before my ear was again applied to the receiver and after rejecting an offer from Seattle, I accepted that of McPherson in December, 1911. This is an attractive little city at an altitude of over 1400 feet, on the Santa Fé, Rock Island, Mo. Pac. and U. P. Here I lead the simple life and save enough in term time for a vacation trip to Europe. Last summer I attended the 5th International Congress of Mathematicians at Cambridge, England. There I renewed old acquaintances and found a handful of people who listened courteously while I read them a paper which none of us understood.”

LOUIS ADAMS FROTHINGHAM

Born at Jamaica Plain, 13 July 1871, of Thomas Bumstead Frothingham (lawyer) and Anne Pearson Lunt.

Fitted at Adams Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ After re-entering public life in 1908 and serving for three years as Lieut-Governor of Massachusetts I am once again a private citizen. Not by voluntary retirement as I was defeated at the polls after winning the nomination for Governor on the Republican ticket. To be out of the wear and tear and free from the constant demands made on one who is holding office is a great relief. The only office I have run for since was that of Overseer of Harvard, to which, thanks to my classmates, I was elected. A quiet life, practicing law, with leisure enough to see one's friends and to take such a trip as I did last March when I visited Jamaica and Panama, makes life pass smoothly. To have time to go to New York and occupy the '93 room at the Harvard Club previous to enjoying a victory at New Haven or to going to Long Island to play golf with a classmate, is a great delight. President Blackstone Savings Bank, treasurer Frothingham Buildings Corporation, director Laconia Car Company."

WILLIAM HARRY FURBER

Born at Boston, 20 October 1870, of George Edward Furber (merchant) and Maria Louisa Ames.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mabel Harriet Holden at Brookline, 27 March 1901. Child: Holden, born 13 March 1903.

Now in lumber business at Boston.

Returns a blank "story."

FREDRIK HERMAN GADE

Born at Christiania, Norway, 12 August 1871, of Gerhard Gade (United States Consul) and Helen Rebecca Allyn.

Fitted at Anderssen's Skole, Christiania and Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Alice Garfield King at Chicago, 25 May 1897. Children:

Gerhard, born 30 September 1898.

Alice King, 9 December 1899.

Now in diplomatic service at Christiania.

"Mayor of Lake Forest four terms, viz: 1903 to 1906 and again 1909 to 1910. Norwegian consul at Chicago five years, viz: from December, 1905, to October, 1910. Left America in October, 1910, to accept offer of a post in Norwegian diplomatic service. Entered Liberal party of Norway and had adopted in its platform a plank for re-organization of the foreign service. The plan drawn up and in behalf of which I have written and lectured extensively (before Chambers of Commerce as well as in the recent political campaign, which resulted in a Liberal victory) will in all likelihood be followed when the Liberal party soon assumes the reins of government."

HOWARD SCHIFFER GANS

Born at New York City, 23 October 1872, of Levi Lieberman Gans (manufacturer) and Addie Schiffer.

Fitted with Dr. J. Sachs.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Birdie Stein (Mrs. Louis Sternberger) at New York City,

2 July 1908, with adoptive children: Marion Stein Gans, born 12

June 1889 and Robert Stein Gans, 14 August 1890.

Now practising law at New York City.

“ Since the publication of the last Report there have been no changes in the date or place of my birth or in the names of my parents. The data with respect to my marriage have also remained constant, as have the names, dates and birth places of my children; nor has their number or distribution between the sexes been affected by the lapse of time. Their respective ages have increased. I am still engaged in the practice of the law, and have sometimes even been retained to practice it. I have not yet died; hence, a biographical sketch would seem presumptuous.”

CHARLES MERRICK GAY, JR.

Born at Newton, 23 January 1871, of Charles Merrick Gay and Sarah Maria Shaw.

Fitted at E. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Louise Gallatin at Tuxedo Park, New York, 18 September 1909. Children:

Catherine Gallatin, born 31 August 1910.

Louise Bigelow, 20 January 1912.

Now practising architecture in New York City.

“ The chief events of my life during the last five years and, I do not hesitate to say, the most important happenings to me in forty-two years have been my marriage to Miss Louise Gallatin on September 8, 1909, and the births of my daughters, Catherine Gallatin on August 31, 1910, and Louise Bigelow on January 20, 1912. Our time has been spent for the most part upon my farm in the Ramapo Valley with four or five months each winter in New York. I find the interests of agriculture always more and more absorbing and, combined with a moderate amount of architectural practice and of human society, to give to me a very satisfactory existence.”

THOMAS ASHLEY GIFFORD

Born at Springfield, Massachusetts, 25 December 1866, of John Henry Gifford (manufacturer) and Rebecca Ann Gifford.

Fitted with H. L. Coar.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now in insurance at New York City.

“ I am still in the fire insurance business, holding the position of cashier with the City of New York Insurance Company, at 63 Maiden Lane, New York City. Life has run smoothly, and almost monotonously, for the last few years. Am still unmarried."

LOUIS WHITMORE GILBERT

Born at Chicago, 3 June 1871, of Selden Gilbert (clergyman) and Sarah Louise Whitmore.
Fitted at Boston Latin.
Class Status: Regular A.B.
Now practising medicine at Brookline.

"Still practising medicine. This year I have been appointed assistant physician to the Children's Out Patient Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital."

JAMES WATERMAN GLOVER

Born at Clio, Michigan, 24 July 1868, of James Polk Glover and Em-erette Maria Neff.
Entered from University of Michigan.
Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1895 as of 1893.
Married Alice Durfee Webber at Ann Arbor, 29 August 1900. Children:
James Webber, born 16 September 1901.
Sanford Webber, 8 October 1903 (deceased).
Now Professor of Mathematics and Insurance at University of Michigan.

"I am teaching at the University of Michigan; was made professor of mathematics and insurance in 1911. In 1902 I organized the courses in financial, statistical, and actuarial mathematics. Interest in this branch of applied mathematics has steadily grown. One result has been that I have trained many young men and women who now hold responsible positions as actuaries in the home offices of life insurance companies and departments of insurance in various states. I served as expert in insurance to the Royal Commission on Insurance of Canada in 1906, as consulting actuary to the Wisconsin Legislative Insurance Investigation Committee in the same year, and to the Wisconsin Legislative Joint Committee on Banks and Insurance in 1907. Was appointed as expert special agent of the United States Census Bureau in 1910 to prepare a special volume of mortality tables based on the population and vital statistics of this country. Have also been tendered a similar appointment this year under the Department of Agriculture to prepare a report on the valuation of securities and plans of issuing highway bonds. My study of the applications of mathematics to financial and actuarial transactions has not infrequently brought my services in demand as a consultant and expert witness. My outdoor interests are hunting and walking and sleeping out of doors eight months of the twelve. During the summer months I spend a great deal of time fussing in my flower garden. Am interested in the movement for the conservation of the national public health and am doing what little I can in the way of writing and speaking to promote legislative and public interest to the point of giving financial support to the cause. My health is good and up to the present time there are no decided signs of old age. I have one son, James Webber, who is just entering the high school; he is greatly interested in athletics and is keeping close tab on Harvard.”

PHILIP BECKER GOETZ

Born at Buffalo, 20 July 1870, of George Goetz (merchant) and Katharine Hausauer.

Fitted at Buffalo High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Linda Alvord Graves at Buffalo, 7 July 1897. Children:

Theodore Becker, born 23 April 1904.

Esther Becker, 7 August 1907.

Now teaching in the Nichols School, at Buffalo.

No “story” to tell.

CHARLES CROSS GOODRICH

Born at Akron, Ohio, 3 August 1871, of Benjamin Franklin Goodrich (manufacturer) and Mary Marvin.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Anna Gellatly at Orange, New Jersey, 22 April 1895.

Now living at Orange.

“My business interests are not very active, although I have had enough to occupy me pleasantly in trying to ‘direct,’ as a director in several companies, as well as operating a small timber property in Pennsylvania and opening up some gas territory in the same state. I have tried to enlarge my knowledge of the world by travelling for a part of each year. In 1912 I visited our Pacific Coast, Hawaii, Japan and Korea, returning via Trans-Siberian road and Europe. In Hawaii our stay was made particularly pleasant through the efforts of James A. Wilder, '93, his delightful wife and friends. Their hospitality was most cordial. One of my companions on this trip was Charles W. Keyes, '93. Another was Miss Phebe Reynolds, now his wife. I keep my weight down and my health good by golf, tennis and polo, in all of which I am greatly interested."

ARTHUR HALE GORDON

Born at Boston, 2 March 1872, of Adoniram Judson Gordon (clergyman) and Maria Hale.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Harriet Louise Manning at East Orange, New Jersey, 15 September 1910. Child:

Frances Hale, born 31 July 1911.

Now in Baptist ministry at Atlanta.

"Several events of importance to myself have happened since the last Class Report. First has come my removal from New England, where practically all my previous life had been spent, to Atlanta, Ga. Here I have assumed the charge of a new and flourishing church. The change seems to have proved its wisdom, and has been followed by several years of congenial and fruitful work. Another event of first magnitude has been my marriage to Miss Harriet Manning of East Orange, N. J., and only of less importance has been the coming into my home of a wholesome and promising little girl. As I am engaged constantly in creative work of a type that exercises the mind, and in a personal and public ministry which enlarges the heart I am conscious through the passing years of an inward growth which makes for the highest satisfaction. So far as appearances can be trusted, I shall make my home permanently in the South."

CLIFFORD ALLEN GOULD

Born at South Orange, 27 March 1871, of William Banks Gould (manufacturer) and Eleanor Margaret Allen.

Fitted with D. Morgan.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Helen Fyfe at Nutley, New Jersey, 8 June 1903. Child:
Girl, born 6 April 1908.

Now manufacturing hardware at Newark, New Jersey.

"Am still at the old works grinding out trunk hardware and praying that every new trunk's first trip will be its last. I don't expect ever to be elected President of the United States and am perfectly willing to vote for either side or both."

FREDERICK LOUIS GRANT

Born at Winsted, Connecticut, 25 December 1871, of James Eugene Grant (manufacturer) and Jeannette Maria Watrous.

Fitted at Winsted High.

Class Status: Left Junior year.

Married Ettaline Harriet Ladd at Windsorville, Connecticut, 1 January 1896. Child:

Eleanor Ladd, born 13 November 1896.

Now in Congregational ministry at Plainville, Connecticut.

"There is a great deal in the life of the average minister day by day which is of great interest to him, but which he can hardly flatter himself is of moment to others. This enhances the difficulty of giving a very extended report. I have been constantly in the harness for the last seventeen years with no more than the usual summer vacation, and if happiness consists largely as the philosophers tell us it does in regularity of life then I ought to be among the happiest. And indeed I confess to have gotten a great deal of satisfaction from the passing years. By temperament a student I have had large opportunities for intellectual research which I have improved to at least some extent. Always interested in the great out-of-doors I have done something in the way of popular lecturing upon various aspects of nature study, and have become somewhat of a local authority upon the subject. Am a member of the Connecticut Botanical Society, an organization which has recently issued a very admirable complete flora of the state. My principal hobby is photography from which I have derived a vast amount of satisfaction and a very slim pocketbook. I am a member of the Connecticut Harvard Club and take a great deal of pleasure in attending the meetings. I do not meet any classmates these days as there are very few '93 men in the state. I have been seven years in this town which is a busy manufacturing community, and as it is exactly in the center of the earth as regards trains and trolleys the latch string is always out for any Harvard man who may come this way. I regret that I have not more facts of general interest to communicate, but it would be merely the story of the day's work."

HARRY EDWARD GRIGOR

Born at Taunton, 30 January 1869, of Edward Grigor (merchant) and Lucy Peabody Price.

Fitted at Taunton High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Now in Custom House at Boston.

“ The even tenor of toil in the Custom House has only been interrupted during the last half-decade by a short trip to Italy. ‘Sitting at the receipt of customs’ has, I fear, been my only imitation of Scriptural folk, unless a limited amount of writing for the Boston Herald makes me a ‘scribe.’ Most of my spare hours during the past two years have been taken up with these journalistic activities, a late harking back to a career I hoped for when in college. It may interest those who still think about such things to know that I have just announced my engagement to Olive C. Ambler, Wellesley, ’01, and plan to be married soon. I was deeply pained by the number of bachelors still remaining at the time of the last Report and resolved firmly to do my part in perfecting the record.”

MICHAEL HENRY GUERIN

Born at Chicago, 27 December 1871, of John Guerin (physician) and Mary Jackson.

Fitted at Harvard School, Chicago.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Esther Glenn at Oakland, California, 8 April 1896.

Children:

John Glenn, born 2 February 1897.

Mary Carmelita, 9 October 1898.

Thomas Edmund, 16 August 1901.

William Jackson, 26 June 1903.

Now practising law at Chicago.

“ I am practicing law the same as ever. On the side, I still hold down the chair as professor of the law of private corporations in the Chicago Kent College of Law. My greatest pleasure is watching my three boys and the only girl grow. I am gradually becoming known as Jack Guerin’s father, among the boys. I wonder if some of my classmates know from experience the queer feeling of age this gives?”

FREDERIC PUTNAM GULLIVER

Born at Norwich, Connecticut, 30 August 1865, of Daniel Francis Gulliver (physician) and Mary E. Strong.

Fitted at Norwich Free Academy.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Now with Chestnut Blight Commission at Philadelphia.

“After eight years as science master at St. Mark’s I had to leave in 1905 in consequence of a severe case of ‘appendy.’ During a long and uncertain convalescence I lived at home in Norwich, tinkering on physiography research, text-books of home geography, observational science, etc. With the American Association for the Advancement of Science I enjoyed a wonderful trip through Canada as a guest of the British Association. My health continuing shaky, I came to Boston in 1911 for a general abdominal ‘exploration.’ This located the trouble, but has left me still busy in recuperating. Last September I was allowed to take up ‘light occupation’ again, and selected the post of geographer to the Pennsylvania Commission on the Chestnut Tree Blight. It is an outdoors job—varied and interesting. My headquarters are in the Zoological Building of the University of Pennsylvania.”

ANDREW HAHN

Born at Newton, 1 December 1869, of John Hahn (carver) and Elizabeth Itchner.

Fitted at Newton High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now in Unitarian ministry at Duxbury, Massachusetts.

“Am still at Duxbury, Mass., minister of First Parish Church (Unitarian), also instructor at Powder Point School.”

ALBERT HALE

Born at Jamaica Plain, 19 April 1872, of Albert Hale (teacher) and Katharine Davenport Wood.

Fitted at Hale’s School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now in bond business at Boston.

“Since graduating I have been continuously engaged in business, in Boston, dealing in bonds and general investment securities. For many years I was in charge of the bond department of Messrs. Parkinson & Burr but am now in business on my own account under the name of Albert Hale & Company. My home continues to be at Dedham although a considerable portion of each year I usually pass at Newburyport. I regret that my life seems to have been so devoid of incidents of general interest."

JOSEPH HENRY HALL

Born at Norwich, Connecticut, 31 August 1870, of Joseph Hall (manufacturer) and Sarah Rogers.

Fitted at Berkeley School, New York.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92.

Married Grace Manning Smith at Brooklyn, 13 June 1897. Children:

Joseph Henry, Jr., born 17 June 1898.

Lloyd Grosvenor, 9 July 1899.

Philip Sidney, 5 January 1902.

Now Superintendent of Hall Woolen Mills at Norwich, Connecticut.

"No increase in size of family, no deaths, no change in occupation since last Report. Insert as before without change."

SAMUEL PRESCOTT HALL

Born at South Boston, 13 September 1872, of David Prescott Hall (lawyer) and Florence Marion Howe.

Fitted with J. Leal.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Sarah Kidder Thomson at Ossining, New York, 21 December 1901. Children:

David Prescott, born 5 April 1904 (died 5 April 1904).

Maud, 27 October 1905 (died, 1 November 1905).

Eleanor, 17 January 1907.

Samuel Gridley, 11 January 1909.

Now practising architecture at Columbus, Ohio.

"This is a report of a rather quiet life, unmarked by any very startling vicissitudes either of good or evil fortune. When I sent my last report I was a resident of the good town—I say town advisedly—of Philadelphia, and very fond of it had I become. But after many years' experience in my profession, I became very wearied of selling my knowledge to another: so I migrated to Ohio and joined the firm of Marriott & Allen, which then became Marriott, Allen & Hall. The last two years have been years of good hard work, by no means without reward; and I am happy to say that we seem to stand about as high as any of them, even if not quite as broad as some of the older men. We have done much work for the state, and for educational institutions, and, on the whole, I am much satisfied with my move. Always a recluse, and content to do the work without claim to the credit, it is mighty good for me to see more of my kind, particularly in a community like this. The most noteworthy event to me, since the last Report, has been the birth of Samuel Gridley, now well started on his way, I hope, for the class of '28. All of which is respectfully submitted."

Thomas H. H. -

THOMAS HALL, JR.

Born at Boston, 5 November 1869, of Thomas Hall (physician) and Mary Putnam.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Died at Baltimore, 19 August 1911.

Thomas Hall, Jr., died at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, August 19, 1911. He was born at Boston, November 5, 1869, the son of Dr. Thomas and Mary (Putnam) Hall. His parents on both sides were of the purest New England stock—his mother a direct descendant of General Israel Putnam. He fitted at Noble's, and was a regular member of '93. Graduating magna cum laude, he immediately took up the teaching of prescribed English Composition in the college, first as assistant and the next year as instructor. The latter post he retained continuously till his death. Steadily engrossed in the exhausting labor of theme-reading, he found time to continue his studies in literature, which from his youth had been his absorbing interest, to assume the editorship of the Cambridge Literature Series, and to collect rare books—now bequeathed to the University Library. The summer vacations he often spent abroad. His nature was reserved and sensitive, but he possessed boundless stores of tact and kindness, and an unusual influence over young men. As class after class came under his instruction, he not only helped to form the style of practically every undergraduate, but in many instances discovered and developed unsuspected powers of expression in the most unpromising subjects. His executive ability, too, was marked, and enabled him to be of additional service to the College. In 1904, during the absence of Dean Hurlbut, he carried on the exacting routine of the Dean's office. In 1907, he became assistant to the Secretary of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Fifteen years of unremitting toil, however, took their inevitable toll. His eyes began to fail. But no man ever had greater loyalty to his daily task and to the University which had become his second home. He became totally blind; yet with the aid of readers and stenographers he clung to his post, and even assumed the additional duties of a proctor. At last his general health gave way, and he was found to be suffering from a tumor on the brain. From the necessary operation he seemed to rally, but pneumonia set in, and he was too weak to resist it. His memory will long be cherished in affectionate reverence by all with whom he came in touch. He never married.

J. G. II.

FRANK WALTON HALLOWELL

Born at West Medford, 12 August 1870, of Richard Price Hallowell (merchant) and Anna Coffin Davis.

Fitted with W. Nichols.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Jessie Coburn Donald at Chestnut Hill, 27 June 1896. Children:

Richard Price, 2d, born 15 December 1897.

Cornelia, 24 March 1901.

Now in wool business at Boston.

"The last five years have been uneventful ones for me. We '93 men are all getting to the age where our children are growing up and that in itself constantly brings new and interesting problems. I find I am five years older too, though I keep in good shape by plenty of physical exercise, golf and tennis in summer, tramping through the woods in the fall with a fine setter dog I have trained myself, and snowshoeing and squash racquets in winter, and I don't expect to join the retired list until my boy, now fifteen, can do me up in any of these activities. He can't now, but shall I have to admit it in the next Class Report? As time passes I find that college associations mean more and more. At class reunions and dinners some of the men are almost strangers but they are classmates and that means a lot and I am looking forward to having the time of my life getting together again at our 20th anniversary in June."

LEARNED HAND

Born at Albany, 27 January 1872, of Samuel Hand (lawyer) and Lydia Coit Learned.

Fitted at Albany Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Frances Amelia Fincke at Utica, 6 December 1902. Children:
Mary Deshon, born 28 March 1905.
Frances Lydia, 9 April 1907.
Constance, 21 July 1909.

Now United States District Judge for the Southern District of New York.

“ I have nothing to report.”

JOHN GODDARD HART

Born at Newport, Rhode Island, 12 February 1870, of James Nicholas Hart (boat-builder) and Annie Frances Goddard.

Fitted at Rogers High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ethel Hastings at Andover, Massachusetts, 13 June 1899.

Now Secretary of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences at Harvard.

Reports nothing further.

JOHN HENRY HARWOOD

Born at Newton, 4 June 1869, of George Shaw Harwood (manufacturer) and Ellen Anne Barnard.

Fitted at Newton High and E. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Annie Bowlend Reed at Chicago, 14 April 1904. Children:
John, born 24 September 1905.
Reed, 1 September 1907.
Sydney, 7 April 1909.

Now manufacturing woolen machinery at Boston.

“ I have been actively engaged for the last five years (as for the previous five) in the business of manufacturing woolen machinery. I now live at 64 Dudley Street, Brookline, bought that house three years ago, and in the summer on Misery Island, off Beverly Farms, where I built a house three years ago. My third son was born four years ago.”

DRAYTON FRANKLIN HASTIE

Born at Flat Rock, North Carolina, 7 September 1871, of William Smith Hastie (banker) and Julia Drayton.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Charlotte, South Carolina.

"Occupations: law and planting. Resigned as assistant U. S. attorney for S. C. in 1911. Sport: shooting, fishing and riding—as much of each as possible in its season. General health good. Eyes improving. Getting a little older, like the rest of us, but try to forget it. Hope that the entire class voted for Wilson electors but fear that some of them didn't. Advise all the nervously prostrated to have a look at the South and get a new lease of life. Either is well worth doing and it can be arranged so easily."

HORATIO HATHAWAY, JR.

Born at New Bedford, 12 September 1870, of Horatio Hathaway (merchant) and Ellen Rodman.

Fitted with L. B. Stedman.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Married Mabel Lovering at Taunton, 15 January 1898. Child:

Lovering, born 8 November 1899.

Now a trustee at Boston.

"Residence in Dedham, Mass. Served one year in the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1911 representing Dedham and Needham."

CHARLES SUMNER HAWES

Born at Chelsea, 7 June 1869, of William Hawes (merchant) and Marianna Jane Locke.

Fitted at Chelsea and Winchester High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Frances Wilson at Winchester, 15 December 1897.

Now with the Spirella Company, Meadville, Pennsylvania.

"The fall and winter of 1907-08 was spent in southern and New England states in sociological work for Uncle Sam, among cotton mill operatives, followed by several different assignments to work of a similar nature in our largest cities. After a brief experience in manufacture and more government work relating to the census of 1910, I came West to establish a sales force for the William Frank Waist Company, of Bradford, Pa. This concern was finally absorbed by The Spirella Company, of Meadville, Pa., and is represented by me in Minnesota and Wisconsin for the sale of children's and ladies' waists."

OSCAR BROWN HAWES

Born at Montclair, New Jersey, 24 February 1872, of George Elias Hawes (dentist) and Adelaide Dunning.

Fitted at Mrs. Shaw's School, Boston.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anne de Pourtales Day at Germantown, 17 February 1903.

Children:

Adelaide Dunning, born 21 November 1903.

Elizabeth Day, 3 April 1908.

Eleanor Cope, 3 April 1911.

Now in Unitarian ministry at Philadelphia.

“ The chief item of interest in my life for the last five years has been the coming of a new daughter into the midst of our family, who has since grown in health and happiness. This makes three of a kind, and so far, I am well content. In 1910 I took my family for a somewhat extended trip abroad, and had the pleasure of preaching in a number of historical churches in England. I attended the meeting of the International Congress of Religion in Berlin, and had much pleasure in being present at that time of religious awakening upon the Continent. I have been busied in helping along the reform movement in Philadelphia, which culminated so splendidly a year ago in the election of Mayor Blankenburg. I am still active in various organizations for the public good in the city, and in addition to my ministry in Germantown continue to be president of the Nicetown Club for Boys and Girls, which institution I am glad to say, is doing a splendid work in the midst of a great manufacturing district.”

JOHN HEISS

Born at Crestline, Ohio, 5 October 1863, of John Heiss (contractor and builder) and Elizabeth Pottiger.

Entered from Wittenberg College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Maud Souders at Dayton, Ohio, 3 September 1900. Children:

John Paul, born 7 January 1906.

Elizabeth Madeleine, 1 May 1907.

Ruth Miriam, 17 February 1910.

Now Professor of German at Purdue University.

“ I'm sure that anything I may add about myself will seem from—hm—mossy to the men of '93 who are really doing things. It may be worth mentioning that after thirteen years in Purdue University I still enjoy the work and still like the place and the people with whom I am associated. A few modest plums have come my way—hardly worth exhibiting—but they help to make life seem worth living. However, when all is done, I feel, and I'm sure that many of my classmates in similar callings feel, that we are richer in what we strive to give from day to day than in the tangible things which we achieve. Since the last Report, a delightful, three-months' Wanderschaft about the old towns and valleys of Germany and Switzerland, and one of the same length about the Montana mines, the Yellowstone National Park, the Garden of the Gods, and many other Colorado places, have left two of the brightest spots in my memory."

FREDERIC GRANTHAM HENDERSON

Born at Brookline, 21 May 1873, of Charles Alan Henderson (British Consul) and Helen Elizabeth Power.

Fitted with C. L. Rideoute.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Now living at Boston.

" Since the last Report I have retired from the business of manufacturing pianos; bought a farm, sold it, and am now contemplating farming again, unless something occurs to make some other occupation look more attractive."

WILLIAM JULIAN HENDERSON

Born at Lima, Peru, 10 February 1871, of Clarks Alan Henderson (British Consul) and Helen Elizabeth Power.

Fitted at ———

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married (1) Ethel Josephine Garey at Newton Centre, 22 August 1899 (died 22 January 1907).

Married (2) Mrs. Mabel Louise Reynolds, at —, 21 November 1911.

Now manufacturing at Hyde Park, Mass.

" Since October, 1908, I have been engaged in business of making electrical apparatus. Now treasurer and manager of the Electric Economy Company, office Hyde Park, Mass. Married November 21, 1911, to Mrs. Mabel Louise Reynolds."

WILLIAM CARTER HEYWOOD

Born at Boston, 23 February 1872, of George Alpheus Heywood (merchant) and Martha Carter.

Fitted with J. C. Patton.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at New York City.

No "story" to thrill us with.

JAMES HENRY HICKEY

Born at Boston, 13 October 1871, of William James Hickey and Catharine Amelia Graham.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at New York City.

"Add to previous report: candidate of National Progressive party for Congress, 15th C. D., New York City, Manhattan, 1912."

HENRY ARTHUR HILDRETH

Born at Lowell, 7 September 1871, of Henry Albert Hildreth (manufacturer) and Marion Estelle Welch.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now living at Boston.

"Since the date of the last Report I have gone into the business of manufacturing tissue paper (used exclusively for paraffining and waxing purposes). The mill is at Ithaca, N. Y., and the main office at 153 Franklin Street, Boston, and outside the struggles incident to the familiar job of tackling a non-paying manufacturing proposition and licking it into such shape that at least as much money will come out of it as goes in, there is nothing much that I can report at this time."

JOHN LEWIS HILDRETH, JR.

Born at West Townsend, Massachusetts, 17 August 1870, of John Lewis Hildreth (physician) and Achsah Beulah Colburn.

Entered from Dartmouth.

Class Status: I. Graduate, 1892-93. A.B. 1893.

Married Harriet Munson Bigelow at New York City, 1 June 1897.

Children:

Harriet Smith, born 3 February 1900.

John Lewis, 3d, 4 June 1906.

Robert Faulkner, 11 August 1909.

Elizabeth Bigelow, 22 July 1911.

Now Assistant Engineer Board of Water Supply, Cornwall-on-Hudson, New York.

“In 1909 I moved to Cornwall-on-Hudson to take charge of Section 4 of the Moodna Pressure Siphon of the Hudson River Division of the Catskill Aqueduct. This is a tunnel lined with concrete and from four to six hundred feet below the surface of the ground. The tunnel was drilled and lined from shafts varying in depth from 350 to nearly 600 feet deep, and will carry 500 million gallons of water a day. This work is nearly completed at the present time and the cost will be about $1,500,000. The shaft work has been especially exciting as there is at best considerable risk, and when you are down 300 or 400 feet and stones commence to fall, everybody flattens themselves up against the sides and waits to see what will happen next. One very long form was used here probably the longest form ever used in concreting a tunnel; it was composed of an arch form of 105 feet in length, and a side wall form of 105 feet in length, giving 105 feet of finished lining in about one day and a half. Owing to the care taken by the contractor very few serious accidents have occurred. The work will probably be finished this spring.”

ERNEST OSGOOD HILER

Born at Jamaica Plain, 4 December 1871, of Thomas Greenleaf Hiler (cashier) and Mary Jane Clark.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

“My former senior partner, B. L. M. Tower, H. '69, died in June, 1909. Since then I have continued the practice of law in partnership with Edmund H. Talbot under the same firm name of Tower, Talbot and Hiler, at 35 Congress Street, Boston. April 13, 1911, I was admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States. Since 1905 I have been an official examiner of the Land Court. Have visited Europe in the summers of 1907, 1910, 1911 and 1912, taking in the Passion Play and various music festivals, and also purchasing for the library of the H. M. A. of which I have been librarian since 1900. Am treasurer of the Choir Guild of the Diocese of Massachusetts, chairman of the executive committee of the Footlight Orchestra, member of the advisory graduate committee of the Harvard Musical Review, and have until the present year been a member of the musical council of the Cecilia Society. Am a member of the Boston and New York Harvard Clubs and Boston City Club. Still rejoice in single blessedness."

JAMES EDWIN HOLLAND

Born at Cincinnati, 1 May 1871, of John Holland (manufacturer) and Catherine Elizabeth Ohlen.

Fitted at St. Xavier's Jesuit College.

Class Status: Special, 1889-93.

Now manufacturing pens at Cincinnati.

"Nothing new with me—am unmarried—still busy making pens—make my home with my parents in the hill top residential distret—have but few amusements and of them take most enjoyment out of my association with a local dramatic critic, but retain healthful enjoyment from my membership in our Riding Club, in which I have been active for eighteen years. Am closely confined with details in business and have travelled but little the past six years, but hope to do a good deal, for pleasure, before another year goes around. Belong to most of the good clubs here, but use them but little. Queen City, University, Riding, Business, and in New York to The Lambs and New York Harvard. Have entirely ceased social activity and spend most every night at home reading, of which I do a great deal. Take keen enjoyment in correspondence with several of my old Harvard friends."

JOSEPH CLARK HOPPIN

Born at Providence, 23 May 1870, of Courtland Hoppin and Mary Frances Clark.

Fitted at Groton.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Dorothy Woodville Rockhill at Washington, District of Columbia, 26 November 1901. Child:

Courtland, born 12 March 1906.

Now living at Washington.

"The only incident worth noting during the last five years is my share in the expedition sent out by the Archaeological Institute of America under the leadership of Richard Norton, '92, to excavate the site of Cyrene, North Africa. The first campaign lasted from October, 1910, to May, 1911, and the work was carried on in the face of a great deal of hardship and physical discomfort, intense opposition on the part of the natives and political intrigue, which resulted in the murder of H. F. DeCon, senior member of the staff. He and I had joint charge of the actual work of excavation and on the morning of March 11, 1911, he was ambushed by three Arabs while walking to his work, shot and instantly killed. Nothing but the fact that on this particular morning he had started for the work before me prevented my sharing his fate. Although his death was a great shock to all of us, the work was not stopped and continued in fact for another six weeks until the adjournment for the summer. The campaign had been very successful and some of the finds, especially the statues, were quite remarkable. Just before the second campaign was to begin the war between Italy and Turkey broke out and the expedition arriving at Malta in October, 1911, found the door to the Cyrenaico tightly shut, and in spite of all efforts was forced to disband. Now, although peace is declared, it is very doubtful whether the expedition will be allowed to resume work and so all our efforts seemingly go for naught. In spite of all the dangers and hardships my six months at Cyrene represent the most wonderful experience of my life and I would give anything to get back there once more. I never expect to be in such magnificent physical condition again as I was at the close of the first campaign. Beyond this there is little of interest to relate as my time is divided between Washington in the winter and the Normandy coast in the summer. This present winter (1912-13) I am spending on the Rivera at Bordighera, and it bids fair to be a successful one, certainly as far as our health is concerned, for the past year has established the unenviable record of two cases of appendicitis and one of typhoid within six months, among three people. That record I hope never to repeat."

TRACY HOPPIN

Born at Providence, 9 January 1871, of Frederick Street Hoppin (lawyer) and Clara Tracy.

Fitted at Berkeley School, Providence.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Constance Burlingame at New York City, 23 April 1907.
Child:

Son, born 13 September 1912.

Now painting at New York City.

"After graduating from Harvard and spending one year at the Harvard Law School, I went abroad where I remained eight years. Since that time I have lived in New York City, making painting my profession. On April 23, 1907, I married Constance Burlingame of New York City. On September 13, 1912, a son was born to us, whom I certainly intend to send to Harvard when he is old enough. I am especially interested in painting portraits and have exhibited in the New York Academy and each summer I have had an exhibition in my own summer studio at Annisquam, Mass. These are the bare facts and all those who want further details, can get them from me in person at our twentieth anniversary celebration next spring."

ELWIN LINCOLN HOUSE

Born at Lebanon, New Hampshire, 4 April 1861, of Jerome Bonaparte House (manufacturer) and Nancy Jane Fowler.

Entered from Boston University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Sherlie De Forest Grow at Lebanon, 10 May 1883. Children:

Elmer Elwin, born 8 December 1884 (Harvard '97).

Ray, 1 March 1887 (died 28 March 1887).

Arthur Everett, 16 November 1896.

Now in Congregational ministry at Spokane.

"Still fighting the devil; trying to offset some of the work of '93 men, but I am far behind. I am praying for the Class, and here and now say: 'Absolvo te.' My biggest trouble is with myself. I find myself more 'frisky' with years. I have had but very few Blue streaks the past five years. And if Haughton will 'stay by the stuff,' need never have another one. I own two big apple ranches in Hood River, Ore., and shall be glad to furnish every Adam with an apple that has the Harvard red. All is well with me and family, no complaints, no sorrows. My best trip the last five years was through Scottish Rite Masonry and the Shrine. I hope every member of the Class can take the same trip. Best to all."

WILLIAM De LANCEY HOWE

Born at Fort Washington, Maryland, 19 November 1869, of Albion Paris Howe (United States Army) and Elizabeth L. Mehaffey.

Fitted at Browne and Nichols.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92. Joined Class Senior year.

Married Clara Horton May at Cambridge, 1 June 1901. Children:

Elizabeth May, born 5 March 1903.

Katharine, 5 September 1905.

Margaret De Lancey, 16 April 1907.

Dorothy Sewall, 16 December 1912.

Now practising law at Boston.

"During the past five years nothing has occurred in my life that is of sufficient importance to deserve special mention. I have continued living in Concord and practising law in Boston, and, barring a few trips here and there, have thus kept on in the quiet and even tenor of my way."

IRA WOODS HOWERTH

Born in Brown County, Indiana, 18 June 1860, of John Howerth (painter) and Elizabeth Bright.

Fitted at Northern Indiana Normal School.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Cora Olive Cissna in Wayne County, Illinois, 16 August, 1881.

Now Professor of Education and Director of University Extension in the University of California.

"On leaving Harvard entered the University of Chicago as graduate student. Received A.M. in 1894 and was appointed member of Faculty; Ph.D. in 1898; assistant professor of sociology in University of Chicago until 1912; secretary Illinois Educational Commission 1908-1910. The chief event in my experience since the last Report is the change in my university connection from the University of Chicago to the University of California. The offer of a professorship in education and the directorship of university extension was the sufficient inducement. Although a Hoosier by birth I entered Harvard from California. I have therefore merely come back to my adopted state. I found a Harvard Club in San Francisco and a Harvard welcome. You will find the same in 1915 when, as we hope, the Associated Harvard Clubs will accept our invitation to meet in San Francisco. I have attended the two last meetings, and I know we should have to 'go some' to meet the expectations of Harvard men, but I hope the meeting will be held here and that many '93 men will attend."

CHAUNCEY GILES HUBBELL

Born at New York City, 16 November 1870, of John Edward Hubbell (merchant) and Elmira Ostrander.

Fitted with D. Morgan.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Denslow Slade at Cambridge, 1 July 1896. Children:

Richard Van Arsdale, born 27 March 1897.

Roger Kingsley, 23 May 1898.

Ruth Elsa, 14 October 1899.

Rosalind Elizabeth, 26 May 1902.

Ronald Edward, 16 October 1903.

Ednah Eloise, 24 June 1905.

Now Examiner and Inspector for the Massachusetts Highway Commission.

“ Well and prosperous, as the world goes, I am still working for the Commonwealth, toning down the raging chauffeur and speed maniac, and making the streets safer for my classmates and others. Almost every Sunday, for the past three years and more, I have served some New Church Society as minister, and for two years have been regularly engaged at our school in Waltham. Besides, I have supplied a weekly contribution to a church paper. In 1910 I completed successfully a one year's course of study in the Boston Y. M. C. A. Law School. This makes a unique experience, perhaps unparalleled in the Class. The doing of my varied work and educating the children brings the most solid satisfactions.”

JOHN HOMER HUDDILSTON

Born at Cleveland, 9 February 1869, of George Kennedy (farmer) and Armina Robinson. Adopted son of Adam Huddilston.

Entered from Baldwin University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Roselle Baker Woodbridge at London, 8 May 1896. Children: Rachel, born 7 February 1905.
Homer, 10 March 1909.

Now Professor of Greek and Classical Archaeology at University of Maine.

and several others, too, in this one department at Harvard have finished their work. Well, I am glad I was born far enough back in the last century to come easily by the courage that started me towards the ancient Greeks; for, surely, if I were to come on the stage now the 'tendencies' would be dead against anything so hard as Greek and Latin. The poor things have been 'on the go' with buffalo and caribou and at last have all but taken refuge in conservation areas; where we may hope that they will still be cherished, even, if necessary, as illustrating what the present generation (and others yet to be) may avoid. But we shall still have with us the Marathon Run and the Olympic Games even if all else fails us. Why can't we Greeks sing one verse of 'Blest be the tie that binds' and smile and be happy? I went to Northwestern University for two years after leaving Cambridge; was set to teaching a class of mature men who came to Garrett Biblical Institute for short courses in theology and as a result of this work in later Greek published my Essentials of New Testament Greek with the Macmillan Company. This little book has been reprinted some ten times since 1895 and I suppose it is the most helpful thing I have produced. I have received little from my other publications beyond a personal satisfaction in doing at least in one instance what the Germans thought well enough of to bring out under the form of Die Griechische Tragoedie im Lichte der Vasenmalerei. The translation was made by the wife of a professor in the University of Freiburg I-B. In more recent years I have been interested in developing courses in Kulturgeschichte in the University of Maine. I have made two trips to Europe, since my years of graduate work at Berlin and Munich, to collect photographs and other apparatus. My side line is farming, and immediate proximity to a place of about three hundred acres offers plenty of opportunity for 'back to the farm' theory and practice. We all enjoy the best of health and Maine winters no less than Maine summers are doing nobly by this humble member of '93."

JOHN THOMAS HUGHES

Born at Watertown, Massachusetts, 24 August 1871, of Michael Hughes and Sarah Dolan.
Fitted at Boston College.
Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Margaret A. Purcell at Cambridge, 19 October 1898. Children:

John Thomas, born 21 September 1899 (died 29 September 1901).

Edward F., 24 March 1901.

Thomas, 16 April 1904.

Now practising law at Boston.

No further tale to tell.

GEORGE EDGAR HUME

Born at Indianapolis, 19 March 1869, of James Madison Hume and Mary Elizabeth Culley.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lucy Fitzhugh Holliday at Indianapolis, 16 November 1898.

Children:

William Mansur, born 6 June 1900.

Jaquelin Holliday, 17 July 1905.

Now in insurance at Indianapolis.

“ For seven or eight years I have been a director and treasurer of the American Central Life Insurance Company, an Indiana old-line life company with its home office in Indianapolis. My work has been the supervision of the investment of its funds. This has necessitated much travelling and has given me glimpses of many interesting places. The company is comparatively small but is prosperous and growing. I have also devoted much time and thought to the improvement of the considerable holdings of real estate in Indianapolis which has been owned for years by members of my family. The growth of a city like Indianapolis as shown by the growth of business and the increase of real estate values is most interesting and it is worth while to have taken an active part in such development. My family life during all these years has been very happy. I have two fine boys, one of whom is in Roland Mulford's school in Ridgefield, Conn. The other who is only seven, is, I hope, an ornament to the public schools in his native city. With these two youngsters constantly outgrowing their clothes and demanding automobiles and aeroplanes as a right, my wife and I are beginning to feel that we belong to a vanishing age and are growing old.”

JOHN STROTHER HUMPHREYS

Born at Bardstown, Kentucky, 28 April 1872, of Samuel Carpenter Humphreys (clergyman) and Mattie Scott Thurman.

Fitted at Georgetown, Kentucky.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Sue Hite Maxey at Louisville, 22 December 1896. Children: Samuel Maxey, born 13 August 1898.

Attie Eugenia, 18 August 1902.

Now President of Howard Payne College.

No report enclosed with above.

WILLIAM PENN HUMPHREYS

Born at San Francisco, 11 September 1871, of William Penn Humphreys (civil engineer) and Mary Stincen.

Entered from University of California.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Paula Zeila Wolff at San Francisco, 22 February 1905. Child: Matilda May, born 18 March 1908.

Now practising law at San Francisco.

“ Am practically settled for about the first time since the fire of April, 1906. You will observe I use the word ‘fire,’ for had there been an ‘earthquake’ merely, and no fire, this city would have pursued the even tenor of its way despite the very severe shaking which disturbed us at an early hour that April morning. Our home is in West Clay Park, in this city, and am a member of the firm of Green, Humphreys and Green, attorneys-at-law, with offices in the Mills Building, Rooms 337-342. Occasionally see A. J. Bowie, Jr., ’93, and George E. Stoker, ’93, but seldom meet any other members of our Class. The last football game with Yale will undoubtedly produce the greatest enthusiasm at the next local Harvard Club dinner, especially as we never suspected that such a victory was in store for us. Would be most happy to have any of the fellows who are in this city look me up.”

EDWARD LIVINGSTON HUNT

Born at New Orleans, 2 February 1871, of Carleton Hunt (lawyer) and Georgine Cammack.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Margaret Emily Tobin at Austin, Texas, 8 October 1902.

Now practising medicine in New York City.

"He is practising medicine in New York at 54 West 50th Street, confining himself entirely to the specialty of nervous and mental diseases. He is an instructor in neurology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, is consulting neurologist to the Workhouse, Penitentiary, and Lincoln Hospitals, associate consulting neurologist to St. Luke's Hospital and assistant chief of clinic in neurology in the Vanderbilt Clinic."

CHARLES PRATT HUNTINGTON

Born at Logansport, Indiana, 22 November 1871, of Edward Staunton Huntington (editor) and Julia Ann Pratt.

Fitted at Adams Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Maude Mary Bayly at Florence, Italy, 5 May 1894. Child: Vivienne Maude, born 25 April 1902.

Now practising architecture at New York City.

"I have been practicing architecture since last Report and have built some well known buildings in New York. The high cost of living, including drinks and cigars, has prevented me from amassing a fortune; but I have been enabled to give my family and myself enough to eat with the rent of an ante-diluvian brown stone shack at 109 E. 80th Street paid regularly. I go abroad nearly every summer to absorb architecture and other things ('I don't mean what you mean' as Harley Parker says). Thanks to Collamore, and others, the yearly '93 dinner here at the Harvard Club, is always a pleasant re-union. I often meet many classmates and am secretly delighted to see signs of baldness or embonpoint in some. We all think we look five years younger than our age. Southwick especially, who, despite a bushy beard, thinks he has the air of a man of thirty. If it interests anybody I still have my hair and svelte figure."

CHARLES EDWARD HUTCHISON

Born at Boston, 29 September 1872, of Charles Edward Hutchison and Mary Ann Elizabeth Sargent.

Fitted at E. H. Cutler's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Louise Humphreys Kendall at Cambridge, 26 June 1902.

Now in Episcopal ministry at Christ Church East Orange, New Jersey.

“ I am the happy person (like nation) who has no history. I continue in the Christian ministry, in the Episcopal Church, and enjoy it. Outside of my rectorship I have no other position, except that of chairman of the Social Service Commission of the Diocese of Newark, which is a very active branch of our diocesan activities.”

ALPHEUS HYATT

Born at Salem, 30 May 1871, of Alpheus Hyatt (naturalist) and Andella Beebe.

Fitted with P. B. Marcou.

Class Status: Left Class Junior year. II. Scientific, 1891-92.

Married Clara Carter at New York City, 30 April 1895. Child:

Clara Hunter, born 6 January 1898.

Died at New York City, 29 March 1911.

Alpheus Hyatt was born May 31, 1871, in Salem, Mass. He died of pneumonia in New York City on March 29, 1911. He was the son of the late Professor Alpheus Hyatt (Harvard, '62), the distinguished paleontologist, and Andella (Beebe) Hyatt. He prepared for college at Browne and Nichols School, and with Professor P. B. Marcou, and entered as a special student. He joined the Scientific School, and left college in his junior year to go into business. For three years he was with the New York Central Railroad, and then entered the accounting firm of Barrow, Wade, Guthrie and Company, as auditor and expert accountant. He lived in or near New York, and married there on April 30, 1895, Clara Carter, who, with one daughter, Clara, survives him. After travelling in Europe and South America, he became interested in farming and stock-raising in Southern Maryland. Here in 1904 he bought a large farm at Porto Bello, on the St. Mary's River, near Drayden. This he made over completely, introducing modern methods in agriculture, and becoming the leader and counselor of the neighboring farmers. He secured the establishment of a post-office, built a pier on the river, and had an express office established to increase the facilities of the vicinity, while his wife organized district nursing. Hyatt found his mission in this active out-of-door work, he was very happy in it, and was an influence in improving and elevating the whole community in which he lived. He did more than merely the material building up of a run-down farm, and was peculiarily fitted by his patience, steadfastness, and optimism, and his high ideals, for the sort of life he took up at Porto Bello. In a community so backward and provincial that a man from a neighboring state is quite seriously called a "foreigner," and looked upon with suspicion, and new methods are refused with scorn, he was able in a short time to make himself beloved and trusted by all, even those most opposed to his "book-farming" ideas. It was a new experience for men of the kind that make up such a neighborhood, illiterate for the most part,—to have one of Hyatt's stamp as an intimate friend: and that he could be this shows his character, and has left a lasting impression upon those with whom he came in contact. He is mourned as one of themselves, and the things he stood for are being attempted by the least likely of his followers. At the same time his scholarly inheritances and inclinations led him to take a great interest in the history of his adopted state, and he was at work on a bibliography of Maryland at the time of his death. His peculiarly genial and lovable nature, and helpfulness of others, endeared him to a devoted circle of friends.

Alphons Idyatt

R. J. M.

GEORGE HOADLY INGALLS

Born at Boston, 28 July 1872, of Melville Ezra Ingalls (railroads) and Abbie Stimson.

Fitted at Franklin School, Cincinnati.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Katherine Davis Hinkle at Cincinnati, 12 November 1898.
Children:

Katherine Elizabeth, born 6 September 1899.

George Howard, 13 August 1904.

Melville Ezra, 2d, 25 December 1906.

Now in transportation at Chicago.

"As to business, my life seems to be taken up in trying to fathom the various intricacies of the Interstate Commerce decisions and also to keep within the law. Probably am not working any harder than others, but I trust others are having as much pleasure in it as I am. My game of golf does not seem to improve nor does the hair on the top of my head get any thicker. Am looking forward with the greatest amount of pleasure to the coming meeting in June."

FREDERICK GIBBS JACKSON

Born at Lowell, 22 October 1870, of Edward Payson Jackson (teacher) and Helen Maria Smith.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ida Singer Robinson at Dorchester, 25 July 1894. Child:

Karl Frederick, born 18 December 1895.

Now teaching at Dorchester, Massachusetts.

“ After teaching, chiefly science, in the high schools of Lincoln, Neb., Springfield, Mass., and Montclair, N. J., I at length found my apparently permanent station in the Dorchester High School, Boston, where I am head of the science department. I spend most of my summers at Newfound Lake, N. H., where I have recently bought a cottage and learned some of the vagaries of a motor-boat. However at intervals of four years I seem to get a touch of reiselust, for in 1905 I took a bicycle trip in five countries in Europe; in 1909, being appointed exchange teacher to Hildesheim, Prussia, I took my family and went over with them the same and other ground; while now in 1913 I expect another pilgrimage as conductor of a party to Germany. Join now before the books are closed! Son Karl graduates this year at Dorchester High School, entering Harvard in the fall.”

PATRICK TRACY JACKSON, JR.

Born at Cambridge, 9 November 1872, of Patrick Tracy Jackson, Jr., (merchant) and Eleanor Baker Gray.

Fitted at Browne & Nichols.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anne Smoot at Chicago, 11 April 1898. Children:

Anna Loring, born 5 October 1904.

Patrick Tracy, 3d, 19 November 1906.

Now cotton mill treasurer at Boston.

other companies. In the summer of 1910 I had a severe operation for appendicitis but came through it successfully and have been much stronger since. I have spent my last two vacations hunting in Florida in the country west of the Everglades. It is very wild, game is abundant and my wife and I have enjoyed it thoroughly. I am looking forward with much pleasure to our 20th celebration and hope we may have a large gathering."

THOMAS AUGUSTUS JAGGAR, JR.

Born at Philadelphia, 24 January 1871, of Thomas Augustus Jaggar (clergyman) and Anna Louisa Lawrence.

Fitted at Delancey School and with H. H. Brown.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Helen Kline at San Francisco, 15 April 1903. Children:

Kline, born 29 September 1905.

Eliza Bowne, 2 November 1911.

Now Professor of Geology at Technology, and Director of Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

"I have been getting more aggressively interested and involved in the Scientific investigation of volcanoes, both from the purely scientific point of view and from the standpoint of protection of human property and life. After earlier studies in the Caribbee Islands in 1902, Vesuvius 1906. Aleutian Islands 1907, and getting some help for Perret's Work on Etna and in Messina 1908, I went with my wife to Hawaii and Japan in 1909 and in the August "Century" of 1910 published some account of the systematic work under the government which the Japanese are doing "to prevent disaster by earthquake." In 1910 I went to Costa Rica and Guatemala. In 1911 Technology sent Mr. Perret to Hawaii under my direction to study the active crater Kilauea, and he was assisted by a high temperature expert of the Carnegie Institution. In 1912 I came to Hawaii to take charge of a newly organized Observatory for permanent record and measurement of the activities of Hawaiian Volcanoes. This observatory is operated by the Institute of Technology and supported largely in Honolulu. H. O. Wood, Harvard 1904, is my associate, in charge of seismology. My job is chiefly sleeping near the inner pit where the lava boils, photographing it, surveying it, measuring temperatures of vapor cracks, occasionally going on an exploring expedition and writing weekly and quarterly reports. About once in five to eight years an eruption from the greater neighboring volcano Mauna Loa is to be expected, and when that starts I shall be kept busy, as it is the most active and largest volcano in the world.

My family are out here with me and at present Kline is going to school in Honolulu. There is a good hotel with cottages at Kilauea where the family join me occasionally. If any of my classmates want to see the most wonderful scene on earth, they should come and visit Kilauea where they will be heartily welcomed.

My interests are rather specialized at present until I get this establishment endowed, so that I am not doing so many outside things as I was in Boston, but I'm still interested in education, chickens, motoring, legerdemain, photography, social dramatics, eugenics, Bergson, country life and religion. The order has no significance. The Institute of Technology is booming ahead in Cambridge, and closer coöperation with Harvard is in sight. I hope my boy will go to both. I'm on five years leave of absence and what will happen when the five years are finished remains to be seen. Hawaii is a land whither '93 men commonly go to stay."

ALBERT CHENEY JOHNSON

Born at Glens Falls, New York, 26 September 1871, of Frederick Avery Johnson (banker) and Harriet Elizabeth Locke.

Fitted at Glens Falls Academy.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Helen Bugg at New York City, 18 January 1894. (Died February 12, 1913.) Children:

Dorothy Locke, born 12 February 1895.

Two children who died in infancy.

Frederick Avery, 18 March 1908.

Now First Vice-President and Director New England Casualty Company.

"After leaving college, I entered newspaper work in my old home, Glens Falls, New York; editor and proprietor of the Glens Falls Evening Record and the Weekly Messenger, until shortly before my father's death in 1893. In 1894 I went into the insurance business in Glens Falls; continued for a year or more and then went South to Atlanta, Ga., being engaged in a cotton seed cleaning business there and at Wilmington, N. C. After several months there, returned North, owing to the ill health of my family and after engaging in several different lines of business returned to the insurance business in New York City as manager of the burglary department of the Aetna Indemnity Company. Remained with them for two years, until my health failed, and I returned to Glens Falls and secured employment after a few weeks as time-keeper and pay-master on a large construction job which kept me out doors from early until late and which restored me to good health. In February, 1908, I came to Boston as manager of the burglary department of the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company, and in 1909 was elected assistant secretary, continuing my work in the burglary department and doing considerable special work outside for the company. In March, 1911, I resigned and came to the New England Casualty Company, being elected first vice-president and director, which position I have since held and continue to hold. Shortly after coming to Boston, I went to Hingham where I lived until the fall of 1911, when I moved to Concord, Mass., occupying the house known as 'Wayside,' the old home of Nathaniel Hawthorne and where on February 12, 1913, my wife died of pneumonia."

GEORGE HOWARD KELTON

Born at Hubbardston, Massachusetts, 20 September 1861, of Elihu Kelton, Jr. (farmer), and Susan Jane Hathorn.

Entered from Middlebury College.

Married Ruth Sarah Coolidge at Petersham, Massachusetts, 24 March 1893. Children:

Margaret Susan, born 24 October 1894.

Elihu Howard, 4 January 1897.

Lawrence Eliot, 22 December 1899 (died 15 December 1901).

Richard Coolidge, 13 June 1902.

Now steward, Lake Placid Club, N. Y.

"My provision business was not a success ultimately, though quite prosperous at first. This is the third year in managing for others. Now I am steward of the Lake Placid Club in the Adirondack Mountains. My daughter and older son are practically fitted for college and I am anxious to get them to Cambridge for they are enthusiastic over Harvard."

JOHN MARTIN KENDRICKEN

Born at Boston, 25 November 1870, of Paul Henry Kendricken (mechanical engineer) and Cecilia Garvey.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

Sends no details.

RICHARD HUNTER KENNEDY

Born at Little Rock, Arkansas, 25 May 1868, of James William Kennedy (publisher) and Mary Venable.

Entered from Vanderbilt University.

Class Status: Entered Sophomore; A.B. 1896 as of 1893.

Married Clara Ellen Gill at Brockton, 28 June 1892. Children:

Olivia Poindexter, born 14 May 1893.

Louise Venable, 25 July 1895.

Richard Merrill, 15 November 1896.

Theodore Adams, 20 April 1898.

Alfred Gill, 20 June 1899.

Laura Payne, 1 June 1902.

Now farming at Newberg, Oregon.

“ After leaving Harvard, I was pastor of Congregational Churches at Pepperell, Mass., San Mateo, Calif., and Albany, Ore., until 1902. Eleven years ago I gave up the work of the ministry, and since then have engaged in other work, giving most of my time to insurance and to farming. I am now living on my farm, near Newberg, Ore., and making a specialty of poultry. For three years I have been acting pastor of Presbyterian churches near my home. Until these boys of mine are ready to enter Harvard, I shall prefer the simple life of the country.”

WILLIAM HOWLAND KENNEY

Born at Leominster, 22 July 1871, of Clarence Kenney (manufacturer) and Elizabeth Carver Howland.

Fitted at Field High School.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Grace Lawrence Burrage at Leominster, 15 September 1903.

Children:

Elizabeth Burrage, born 25 August 1905 (died 13 September 1906).

William Howland, 2d, 29 October 1907.

Now managing Emerson College of Oratory at Boston.

“ No great change: still at Emerson. Am teaching Speaking Voice in Boston University Law School, and lecture oc-asionally on the same subject in the Liberal Arts Department of the same institution. Have joined the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants that I may wear a medal and march in the parade in 1920."

WILLIAM EDWARD KENT

Born at Binghamton, New York, 17 October 1870, of George Albert Kent (manufacturer) and Nancy Jane Dietrick.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Special, 1889-93.

Married Mary Louise Roberts at Binghamton, 20 January 1900. Children:

William Edward, Jr., born 9 December 1900.

Robert Percy, 26 December 1902.

Beatrice Jane, 24 June 1904.

Gertrude Louise, 27 October 1905.

Richard George, 26 December 1907.

Donald James, 19 September 1909.

John Walter, 20 November 1911.

Now farming at Binghamton, N. Y.

"My first year after college was spent in seeing Europe with my brother, also '93. We separated after a few weeks, as I wished to travel more leisurely than he. I had some illness, and was laid up in Milan several weeks. On arriving home I went into the basement of my father's cigar factory, was healthy and happy, with music and society as diversions, but did not appreciate a good thing, and must needs go abroad to study singing. The good Lord never intended me for more than an amateur, but I suppose I had to have my experience. I had a couple of disappointments abroad, and returned to New York, which was too much for me in my condition, and finally came home, where I was doing editorial work on a local paper when a serious illness nearly killed me, and left me a semi-wreck for the remainder of the voyage. After convalescing I was in the piano and music business with my '93 brother for a while, then knocked around Philadelphia and environs, earning a living as tutor to three boys. My eyes have always troubled me and the lack of proper glasses at times had a great influence upon my life. I finally got fitted to comfortable glasses and get along fairly well, though still suffering from strong light. This ailment caused my breakdown while in my father's office after my return from the Spanish War with Battery A of Philadelphia. My life has been a struggle for health, with ups and downs, I manage to keep going, but am 'fussy' about lights, noises, eating, etc. I get some pleasure and comfort from my pleasant home, my wife and children, books and music, the theatre, friends, and occasional trips. The last two summers we have spent at Oquaga Lake, N. Y., a pretty spot up in the hills. I saved my four year old boy from drowning one summer, and my wife the next, and don't know whether or not I shall 'tackle the job' next season. Motoring tires my eyes. My favorite exercise is walking and I have done 33 miles in a day."

CHARLES WALTER KEYES

Born at Newton, 16 January 1871, of Henry Keyes and Emma Frances Pierce.

Fitted with W. Nichols.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91. Joined Class Junior year.

Married Phebe Everett Reynolds at East Orange, New Jersey, 21 August 1912.

Now living at East Pepperell, Massachusetts.

"Since last report very busy manufacturing paper until December, 1911, when I retired. In January, 1912, started on trip around the world with Charles C. Goodrich '93 and party. We visited Hawaii Islands (had a bully time with Jim Wilder) for three weeks—then went to Japan, Korea, Manchuria, across Siberia to Moscow and St. Petersburg, then back to New York from Liverpool in time (just) for the meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs. We met Harvard graduates continually and had a wonderful and interesting trip, keeping away from tourists' routes. A trip Goodrich and I made down the Teurugawa rapids exceptionally exciting. Just as fond of my dogs and sports as ever.

DAVID KIMBALL

Born at Boston, 7 July 1870, of David Pulsifer Kimball (railroads) and Clara Millet Bertram.

Fitted at Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Amalia Ingeborg Gardiner at Bath, New Hampshire, 21 September 1903.

Now living at Berck-Plage, France.

"1908 we spent quietly in France where Mrs. Kimball, who is an invalid, was under the care of an eminent physician, and where I wrote and adapted plays. 1909 and 1910 several of my plays, one of which is called 'The Worm Turns,' were produced throughout those years. 1910 we saw the Passion Play and took a trip through Holland and Belgium to Paris as the guests of my parents. 1911 we witnessed the coronation of King George V and we spent the summer in romantic Scotland. 1912 we returned to Boston and now once more we are leaving for France where we shall remain for the summer."

ROBERT EVERETT KLINE

Born at Miamisburg, Ohio, 17 February, 1868, of Jonathan H. Kline and Mattie Stanfield.

Entered from Otterbrin University.

Class Status: III Scientific 1892-93, S.B. 1893.

Married Agnes Louise Lyon at Dayton, Ohio, 5 June 1895. Children:

Robert Everett, Jr., born 29 April 1898.

Donald Chenoweth, 23 May 1904.

Now an engineer at Dayton, Ohio.

"Served as county and city engineer of Dayton, Ohio, 1895-1907; president of Ohio Society of Civil Engineers, 1905, 1906, 1907; president and general manager of The Lebanon and Franklin Traction Railway Company, 1907 to date; also consulting and contracting engineer at Dayton—Specialties, Railways and Mass Concrete Structures. Height, 6 ft., 1-2 in.; weight, 200 lbs., excellent health. Active in business. Fond of social life, golf and autoing."

GAILLARD THOMAS LAPSLEY

Born at New York City, 14 November 1871, of Howard Lapsley (stockbroker) and Katherine Aldis Willard.

Fitted at Berkeley School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge.

"On taking my A.B. degree I returned to the Harvard Graduate School, where after a year's work in History, I obtained the degree of A.M. The next year I passed in Europe, chiefly in Italy, returning to Harvard in the autumn of 1895 to begin work for the doctorate. This, combined with some small teaching work both at Harvard and at a school in Boston, I continued for two years. On receiving my Ph.D. in 1897 I removed to London where I passed a year working at the Public Record office and the British Museum. In 1898 I returned to New York where I remained a year during which I completed a book on the County Palatine of Durham. In the autumn of 1899 I went to Harvard to act as locum tenens for Professor Gross who was absent on his sabbatical year. The next autumn (1900) I was made lecturer in History on a short appointment, but early in 1901 (January) I went to California to help break the academic strike at Leland Stanford. After a couple of months I refused an assistant professorship at that university out of sympathy with the strikers. On the completion of my term there I was offered and accepted an instructorship at the University of California. This I held for two years when I was promoted to an assistant professorship. At the same time I was offered and accepted a like post at the University of Pennsylvania. There I remained one year and then (1904) removed to England having accepted the offer of a Fellowship and Lectureship in Trinity College, Cambridge. Soon after coming here the university conferred on me the degree of M.A. honoris causa. The next year I was associated with the late Miss Bateson in the editorship of the Cambridge Mediaeval History in which we were presently joined by the Rev. Professor Gwatkin. This work I carried on until, early in 1908 I was overtaken by serious illness. After eight months in a sanatorium in the Cotswold Hills, where I endured two capital operations, I went to America and passed the winter in the West, partly in Colorado Springs, but mostly in southern California. For the summer I went to St. Moritz and returned to Cambridge for a couple of months in the autumn. For the next two years I was not in college but at a small house about three miles from Cambridge, near Dilton Hall. After a winter in Egypt, a spring on the Riviera, and a summer in Lenox I was considered well enough to return to work here. I am now in the third year and carrying it on without more than ordinary let or hindrance. I returned to my rooms in college a year ago last October. I habitually return to America for some months in the summer and I retain my American citizenship. Our work here with a large and increasing school of History is heavy but very interesting. The distinction between place and honours men insures that you deal only with those who officially at least, intend to work, and the tutorial system brings one into personal contact with undergraduates and often leads to very easy, friendly relations."

RALPH CLINTON LARRABEE

Born at Kalamazoo, 5 December 1870, of McIvah Larrabee (merchant) and Abbie Josephine Glover.

Fitted at Boston English High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ada Perkins Miller at Newton, 17 September 1900. Child: Martin Glover, born 25 January 1910.

Now practising medicine at Boston.

"After graduating from the Medical School in 1897 I served as house-officer at the Boston City Hospital, and since then have practised in Boston. I was assistant in histology in the Harvard Medical School for several years and afterwards became connected with the department of clinical medicine at Tufts. In 1910 I became assistant professor but resigned at the end of a year because of trouble in the faculty. I have recently been appointed instructor in medicine in the Harvard Graduate School of Medicine. Two years ago I formed a partnership with Horace D. Arnold, '85. I am still on the staff of the Boston City Hospital. My professional work keeps me so busy that there is little time for other interests. I find time for an occasional long walk and spend my brief vacation climbing in the White Mountains and building paths for the Appalachian Mountain Club, of which I am president. At home I take orders from Martin Glover Larrabee, aged three, who informs me that he is going to Harvard."

GEORGE WARRINGTON LATHAM

Born at Port Byron, New York, 28 September 1870, of George Warrington Latham (banker) and Mary Smith Kelly.

Fitted at Auburn High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Brockway at Waukegan, Illinois, 20 July 1902. Children:

Allan, born 21 February 1906.

Sylvine Elizabeth, 16 June 1909.

Now Lecturer in English at McGill University.

"Since the publication of the last Report I have continued to live in Canada, but have nothing of any importance to report. During that period real estate values have more than doubled in Montreal, but I have scrupulously abstained from profiting by it personally."

ARTHUR GORDNER LEACOCK

Born at Lehman, Pennsylvania, 27 May 1868, of John Clark Leacock (clergyman) and Lydia Gordner.

Entered from Syracuse University.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Anne Adams Brown at Little Boar's Head, N. H., 24 August 1911.

Now teaching at the Phillips Exeter Academy.

first social function of the new home was devoted to Harvard: a reception given to the men of the Harvard chapter of Delta Upsilon who came to Exeter to play Ralph Roister Doister. As the years pass I find that intellectual, social, and religious interests grow broader and deeper: opportunities to learn are many and inviting; marriage has marvelously enriched life and has added a new and larger circle of friends; church work claims more of my time. I have grown very fond of Exeter: it is a charming New England town, quiet, cultivated, and progressive, wherein the academy serves as a leavening and enlivening center of activity. I have everything to make me happy, and I believe that I am perfectly contented with my lot—with the exception, however, of the meager measure of personal attainment and achievement.”

CHARLES HENRY LINCOLN

Born at Millbury, Massachusetts, 22 April 1869, of William Henry Lincoln (physician) and Eunice Reid.

Fitted at Worcester Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Frances Angell at Lewiston, Maine, 28 August 1901.

Now in historical and literary work at Worcester.

“ After leaving Harvard I entered the Graduate School of the University of Pennsylvania. Excepting a year of teaching at Bates College, Lewiston, Me., I remained at Philadelphia until 1898, taking my Ph.D. in history and political science in 1896, and serving two years as Senior Fellow with work of instruction there. Following this period of education I was in the Manuscripts Division of the Library of Congress at Washington until 1907, engaged in arranging, calendaring and editing for publication, historical manuscripts in the Library's collection. In 1907 I came to Worcester to arrange and calendar the manuscripts in the library of the American Antiquarian Society and in connection with this work I have edited for publication by the society some of its most important documents, among which are its manuscripts of the French and Indian Wars, 1754-1765, the Hull-Eaton Correspondence of the Tripolitan War, and a Journal of the Pepperrell Expedition against Louisbourg of 1745. In 1910 I completed this work of arrangement and calendaring and have been working since then in the same general field, along private lines. Among my published books are 'The Revolutionary Movement in Pennsylvania,' 'Naval Records of the American Revolution,' 'A Calendar of John Paul Jones Manuscripts,' 'Manuscript Records of the French and Indian War' and 'The Correspondence of William Shirley, Governor of Massachusetts 1741-1756'' (two volumes). I have written also occasional less pretentious publications, articles, reports, etc., and assisted in the preparation of other volumes treating of American history. I am at present engaged on a volume of Narratives of the Early Indian and French Wars in America, to be published under direction of a committee of the American Historical Association. The field in which I am engaged is exceedingly interesting and although perhaps less remunerative than some, is one in which there is plenty to do and in which I hope to be kept busy."

EDWARD LIVINGSTON

Born at New York City, 26 September 1871, of Edward Livingston and Frances Hazeltine.

Fitted at Berkeley School, New York.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now farming at Manitou, Putnam County, New York.

White slip returned with nothing on it.

HARRY CHAMBERLAIN LOW

Born at Salem, 5 August 1870, of Daniel Low (merchant) and Elise Jane Stevens.

Fitted at Salem High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mabel Converse Chipman at Boston, 18 June 1902. Children:

Daniel Story, born 30 April 1903.

Carolyn, 18 March 1905.

Now specializing in orthopedic surgery at Boston.

"Having no recent changes to report in my family I can only add that I for several years continued my medical study as assistant pathologist in the City Hospital and the Children's Hospital and in the last five years have specialized in Orthopedic Surgery. Am now Assistant Orthopedic Surgeon to the Out Patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital."

FRANCIS CRUMP LUCAS

Born at Columbus, Indiana, 14 November 1868, of William Jones Lucas (banker) and Elizabeth Crump.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Jessie Lincoln at Chicago, 2 December 1901. Child:

Jessie Lynne, born 22 May 1903.

Now banking at New York City.

“ I had intended to become famous by this time but something seems to have prevented me. I still believe I have the greatest potentialities in that respect of all in the class. I should advise every one of its members to cultivate my acquaintance in the next ten years as things may be different. So far I have had to publish my own books and work for the most part for somebody else. And this brings me to the point I wish to lay some stress on. I am not worth a half million dollars as reported. In fact if any one in the class wants to loan me $200.00 I shall be greatly pleased and advanced toward the ultimate object—becoming the most noteworthy member of us. Indeed I do not think it a bad idea for every member of the class to loan me $200.00 if they wish to do anything in the world. Can be reached at my enclosed address.”

WILLIAM LUCE

Born at Fort Smith, Arkansas, 21 October 1868, of John Bleeker Luce (lawyer) and Cornelia Priscilla Forester.

Fitted at Berkeley School, Boston.

Married Katherine Williams McKinney at Fort Smith, 28 October 1908. Children:

John Bleecker, born 7 July 1909.

Stephen Bleecker, 30 January 1911.

Now farming at Fort Smith.

“ I am secretary and manager of Fort Smith Pure Milk Company which I run in connection with my farm. Have been delegate from Fort Smith 341 to Grand Lodge, B. P. O. E.; also director in Arkansas Oklahoma Fair. Take an active part in politics as progressive Democrat and would like to see President Eliot represent Mr. Wilson's administration at the Court of St. James. I hope other Harvard men will push on this idea. We have two sons, John Bleecker Luce, born July 7, 1909, and Stephen Bleecker Luce, born January 30, 1911.”

HOWARD LYON

Born at York, New York, 21 May 1860, of Ira Goddard Lyon (farmer) and Henrietta Powers.

Fitted at Geneso State Normal School.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Miriam Gould at East Aurora, 20 August 1884. Child:

Madeline, born 18 July 1886.

Now with Welsbach Company at Gloucester, N. J.

“ Resigned position in State Normal School at Oneonta, N. Y., in June, 1909. Since which time I have been connected with the Welsbach Company, at Gloucester, N. J., in the capacity of an experimental engineer. While I was an instructor in the State Normal School I had taken out patents on lighting apparatus which finally brought me in relation to the Welsbach Company. I am now carrying on research work as applied to commercial problems of the Welsbach Company. I have come to appreciate the fact that there is a marked difference between effort that is directed toward the attainment of ideals and the activity which has for its object the accomplishment of commercially practical results.”

RICHARD MACALLISTER

Born at Calcutta, India, 10 January 1870, of Richard Macallister (consul general) and Alma Charity Mears.

Fitted at C. W. Stone's.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90. With '94, 1890-92. Joined Class Senior year.

Married Josephine Anne Dickson at Ottawa, 12 October 1905. Children:

Alma Carol, born 2 March 1910.

Richard Dickson, 8 September 1912.

Now with Welland Canal Harbor works at Port Colborne, Ont.

“ Last Report left me married and settled at Ottawa,—manager of the lithographic and printing works of Mortimer and Company. I had to give up indoor work, however, and so took to the wilds. At first I went into the lumber business at Algonquin Park, P. Q., then in October, 1909, joined the survey for the Transcontinental Railway, with headquarters at Fauquier, Ont., only 160 miles south of James Bay. Great Winters! I've seen the thermometer at 67 below. Mortal healthy, though. I was on this job till March, 1912, when I joined the engineering staff of the Welland Canal—a canal which will run the Panama a close second. Shall be with you in June.”

GEORGE GRANT MACCURDY

Born at Warrensburgh, Missouri, 17 April 1863, of William Jasper McCurdy (farmer) and Margaret Smith.

Fitted at Warrensburgh State Normal School.

Class Status: Special, 1891-92; A.B. 1893.

Now Assistant Professor of Archeology at Yale.

“ Have continued along the old lines: curator of the anthropological section, Yale University Museum; secretary of the American Anthropological Association (since 1903); assistant professor of archeology at Yale. My magnum opus of the past five years appeared in 1911 as: ‘A Study of Chiriquian Antiquities,’ a quarto of several hundred pages published as volume III, Memoirs Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 1909 I was a guest of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at the Winnipeg meeting and the excursion to the Pacific Coast and northern Canada which followed. I have attended three meetings of the International Congress of Americanists as delegate from the United States Government, the Smithsonian Institution, and Yale University: Vienna, 1908; Mexico City, 1910; and London, 1912. I was also Government delegate to the International Congress of Prehistoric Anthropology and Archeology held at Geneva, September, 1912, and as such was chosen to respond for all the foreign delegates and members to the address of welcome at the luncheon given to the Congress in the historic castle of Chillon. In March, 1912, I represented the Ecole d’Anthropologie de Paris at the centenary celebration of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. During the past two years I have contributed to the American Year Book (D. Appleton and Company) the article on Anthropology, Ethnology and Prehistoric Archeology; have also contributed to the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics. Within the past year, I have installed a hall of European prehistoric archeology for the American Museum of Natural History, New York; given public lectures at Columbus, Ohio, and in New York; and pursued prehistoric studies in England, Channel Islands, France, and Spain. While in France I leased a small paleolithic cave and, with the help of local laborers, excavated it, obtaining important collections for the Yale Museum. The last honor that has come to me is my election as corresponding member of the Société des Américanistes de Paris.”

WALTON BROOKS McDANIEL

Born at Cambridge, 4 March 1871, of Samuel Walton McDaniel (lawyer) and Georgiana Frances Brooks.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Corinne Garlich at Saint Joseph, Missouri, 2 August, 1899.

Now Professor of Latin at University of Pennsylvania.

"The chief events of my life during the last five years have been visits to Europe. In the summer of 1909 my wife and I revisited Italy after many years, and while touring Switzerland discovered a most fascinating and delightful vacation-home at Gruyères. The next year the University of Pennsylvania found me so wearied by nine years of overwork in its service that it granted me leave of absence on generous terms to the following January. We sailed in May, and after some months in Gruyères, crossed the Alps once more into the land that means the most to a student of Latin. My chief purpose was to study intimately the sites of ancient Etruscan towns and the various museums that contained Etruscan antiquities. I visited scores of places, but on my arrival in Rome I had to submit to a doctor, who absolutely forbade my return to America. A spring trip in Sicily did much to restore my health, but on the voyage home I contracted typhoid fever, and went to the Massachusetts General Hospital to die. But the nurses and doctors of that unmatched institution would not allow it. The time was when I had rather have passed on than go to any hospital, but my weeks of convalescence there were about the happiest of my life, since for the first time in twenty years I had a taste of real rest and freedom from responsibility. My professorship is now again keeping me over-busy with teaching, lecturing, publishing articles, attending meetings, etc., but a newly purchased cottage on the shores of Martha's Vineyard affords at least a restful change of scene for the summer months, and the recreation of boating, swimming and fishing."

GEORGE LEARY McELROY

Born at New York City, 11 April 1867, of William Patrick McElroy (merchant) and Annie Dougherty.

Fitted with B. R. Abbott.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising architecture at New York City.

That is all we get.

FREDERICK CHASE McLAUGHLIN

Born at Bergen Heights, New Jersey, 9 December 1871, of Robert William McLaughlin (sea-captain) and Emily Louise Meredith.

Fitted at Somerville High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Sarah Sands Clarke at Binghamton, New York, 27 December 1898. Children:

Elizabeth, born 23 October 1899.

Frederick Chase, Jr., 21 March 1901.

Samuel Clarke, 3 July 1902.

Robert Meredith } twins, 14 August 1904.

Richard Meredith }

Margaret, 8 August 1906.

Now practising law at New York City.

“ I am practising law as a member of the firm of McLaughlin, Russell, Coe and Sprague, at 165 Broadway, New York City, and live at White Plains, N. Y. I expect to have a son ready for Harvard about the time of our twenty-fifth anniversary.”

LLEWELLYN JOHN MALONE

Born at London, 16 December 1864, of Edward Malone (lawyer) and Annie Clara Jones.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Left Senior year.

Married Fernine Du-Buisson Baird at Boston, 9 December 1899.

Now living at Wells, Maine.

“ There is little of anything new in my life to speak of. I go along in a quiet humdrum way. My poultry experience was of short duration, for while I could be on hand the plant did well, when I was away an aching void always developed on the wrong side of the account. When in Alaska in 1898 I became interested in mining and have been more or less interested in it ever since. Sorry I have nothing of especial interest to relate.”

PERCIVAL MANCHESTER

Born at Chicago, 15 January 1870, of George Otis Manchester and Ella Boynton.

Fitted with W. N. Eayrs.

Class Status: Left Junior year.

Married Nena A. Tillson at Evanston, 6 June 1901.

Now manufacturing railway appliances at Chicago.

“ After leaving college, spent a year in California with the thought of going into fruit growing. Decided, however, to go to Chicago, and in the summer of 1894, went into business with the Sargent Company, iron and steel founders. In 1905 joined with other interests and formed the Quincy-Manchester-Sargent Company, of which I was secretary and treasurer and afterwards vice-president. In 1909, formed the Railway Appliances Company, of which I am now president and treasurer. I still retain my interest in active exercise, but have given up tennis for golf, being a member of the Skokie Country Club and the Onwentsia Club. Every year or two manage to get in a trip after big game and have hunted in Wyoming, New Mexico, Alaska and the Yukon. Clubs: Chicago Club, University and Engineers’ Club.”

JOSEPH MANLEY

Born at Mount Vernon, Iowa, 13 June 1871, of Samuel Hamilton Manley (teacher) and Louise Catherine Albright.

Fitted at Illinois State Normal School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Florence Bosworth Lane at Cincinnati, 26 June 1901. Children:

Edward, born 8 April 1904.

Lucia, 6 February 1907.

Now Dean and Professor of Greek at Marietta College.

No report enclosed, but understood to be writing poetry on the side.

ERNEST LINCOLN MANNING

Born at Jamaica Plain, 25 December 1871, of William Wayland Manning and Abby Ripley Hobbs.

Fitted at St. Mark’s.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Now in banking at Boston.

“ I have continued in the investment business in Boston in association with my brother under the firm name of R. A. and E. L. Manning, as New England representatives of the New York banking house of William P. Bonbright and Company, Incorporated. I think my interests in matters other than business have lessened perhaps, rather than broadened, these last few years, but I have no regrets—results have been sufficiently satisfactory to compensate for the exclusion of other allurements, and save for a brief absence abroad I have pursued the same general programme of life."

SAMUEL HUBBARD MANSFIELD

Born at Gloucester, 27 June 1870, of Alfred Mansfield (ship-owner) and Sarah Jane Hubbard.

Fitted at Gloucester High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Now in electrostatic ore separating business at Boston.

"It is often difficult for people who live uneventful lives to write reports about themselves that are suitable for publication. This is the problem that confronts the writer. What I did after leaving Harvard is already embodied in former Reports. During the past five years our business (the separation and concentration of ores by means of electrostatic methods and processes of our invention) has increased and broadened in scope and is now one of the recognized commercial methods. Then I was assistant treasurer—now treasurer. One thing that impresses me as the years go by, is how little one really knows. For this reason I study and look into things as opportunity offers. In travelling back and forth from business each day, I find I cover about 19,200 miles a year, nearly four-fifths of the distance around the world. This fall I had the opportunity and walked over the Crawford trail to Mt. Washington. It is a great revelation to one who has never tried it. The only way to really appreciate a mountain and to understand its grandeur and magnitude is to get close to it and walk over it. I suppose most of the men in our Class have long since been married and have homes of their own. For some reason or other that state has not fallen to my lot as yet."

HENRY ORLANDO MARCY, JR.

Born at Cambridge, 2 July 1871, of Henry Orlando Marcy (surgeon) and Sarah Elizabeth Wendell.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Eleanor Hunnewell Nichols at Newton, 15 May 1909.

Now practising medicine at Boston.

"Since our last Report, little worthy of note has occurred with me. Am still practising medicine and surgery in Boston, but make my home in Newton. Summers we spend at our camp on Lake Placid in the Adirondaeks. During the past year, spent three months on the Riviera and at the Italian Lakes, owing in part to the poor health of my wife. Fortune has not yet favored us with children and we lead rather a quiet and uneventful life."

FREDERICK ROY MARTIN

Born at North Stratford, New Hampshire, 17 November 1871, of John Douglas Martin (merchant) and Caroline Taylor Thompson.

Fitted at Lowell High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anna Frances Wayne at Cambridge, 9 September 1909.

Child:

Nancy, born 31 January 1911.

Now Assistant General Manager of the Associated Press, New York.

"After six and a half years in charge of the Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin I resigned to become on September 1, 1912, the assistant general manager of The Associated Press. In April I had been elected a director and member of the executive committee of the board, succeeding General Taylor, the grandfather of our six-foot class baby. I am now the assistant of Melville E. Stone who has been the general manager of The Associated Press since the present organization was formed and is the father of two Harvard graduates. Am gradually discovering compensations for the necessity of living on Manhattan Island."

SELDEN ERASTUS MARVIN, JR.

Born at Albany, 1 December 1869, of Selden Erastus Marvin and Katherine Langdon Parker.

Fitted at Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now manufacturing boilers at Albany.

"I have continued in the manufacturing business and during the last two years and a half, have become interested to quite an extent in a company organized for the purpose of concentrating and nodulizing low-grade ores and treating in a similar manner the iron ore in flue dust. My headquarters are still in Albany. I am still an optimist, though were I asked to give a reason for this attitude I very much doubt if I could do so."

WALTER EFFINGHAM MAYNARD

Born at New York City, 17 November 1871, of Effingham Maynard (publisher) and Helen Maria Hollister.

Fitted at Berkeley School.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Eunice Ives at New York City, 19 April 1903. Children:

Walter, born 14 April 1906.

Audrey, 24 November 1908.

C'est tout.

CHARLES MERRIAM

Born at Milton, 3 August 1871, of Herbert Merriam (farmer) and Fannie Hawes.

Fitted at Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Georgiana Hemingway at Holyoke, Massachusetts, 2 December 1902. Children:

Charles, Jr., born 26 January 1904.

Helen, 23 November 1906.

Now farming at Weston, Massachusetts.

"I have no new information to give. Am still farming at Weston, but on a rather larger scale than at the last Report."

JAMES ANDREW MERRILL

Born in Rockcastle County, Kentucky, 6 April 1861, of Andrew Hanson Merrill and Ann Eliza Eustin.

Fitted at Missouri State Normal School.

Class Status: IV. Scientific, 1892-93; S.B. 1893.

Married Nellie Agnes Lowen at Trenton, Missouri, 23 December 1895. Children:

Robert Lowen, born 1 August 1900 (deceased).

George Lowen, 9 April 1902.

Helen Elizabeth, 11 January 1909.

Now teaching in State Normal School at Superior, Wisconsin.

"I am still doing business as of old. I am teaching geography and geology for a living and doing geological work on the iron ranges in Minnesota for a pastime. I have charge of the institution in which I teach one term out of the year and at that time have to get down to real work. Since last Report I have published a book 'Industrial Geography of Wisconsin' which is having a good sale. I am still much interested in Harvard and rejoice in all her victories, athletic and otherwise."

ALBION LEROY MILLAN

Born at Cambridge, 18 October 1870, of Alexander Millan (merchant) and Hannah Doane Townsend.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anna Elouisa Dane at New Boston, New Hampshire, 26 June 1900. Children:

Hollis Bailey, 1 August 1901.

John, 10 August 1902.

Now practising law at Boston.

" After graduating in 1893, I went three years to Harvard Law School. Since then I have been practising law in Boston. For six years I was in the office of Richard H. Dana, Hollis R. Bailey, and Charles E. Shattuck. Then for six years I had as office associates Joseph Wiggin and his father, Judge J. F. Wiggin. The following three years I had an office at 19 Congress Street, adjoining the offices of Mr. Dana and Mr. Bailey. I have always been associated more or less with Mr. Bailey in various law cases, and especially in bankruptcy matters. For the past two years I have had an office with the French Consul, Hon. J. G. Joseph Flamand, whose law work I do. The past five years I have been active in a diversified practice, ranging from organizing a synagogue to looking up a title for a Methodist parsonage, and from alienation of affections cases to drawing wills. In Boston today we have people from the ends of the earth, and the newcomers outnumber the native stock. Three years ago I moved to Acton, Mass., the next town to Concord. I belong to the Grange, and am now the steward of Acton grange. I am also a member of Mt. Olivet Lodge of Masons, Cambridge. There is considerable social life in Acton, and I was indiscreet enough to take the leading part—that of a villain—in a little play given in the Town Hall last winter. In spite of my acting we had a good crowd, and netted about fifty dollars for a new organ for the village church. Our nearest neighbor in Acton is Mrs. John Murray Brown, who was the last woman to leave the Titanic, and who was fortunate enough to survive the wreck. Acton is the third healthiest town in Massachusetts, so that we hope to enjoy our life there for many years to come."

W. V. Moody.

RALPH GIFFORD MILLER

Born at New York City, 18 October 1870, of Benjamin Rush Miller (merchant) and Almira Louise King.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Bowers Lee at Southampton, New York, 30 September, 1896. Children:

Alice Lee, born 19 July 1897.

Ralph Gifford, Jr., 23 December 1900.

Now stockman at Cody, Wyoming.

Too busy milking to write any more.

CHARLES EDWARD MOODY

Born at Canterbury, New Hampshire, 29 October 1865, of Howard Moody (clergyman) and Cornelia Ann Clough.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Irene Greenleaf Hartwell at Lowell, 4 September 1901. Children:

Howard Hartwell, born 6 August 1905.

Emily, 5 June 1909.

Paul Lyman, 23 April 1911.

Now in telephone work at New York.

“ 1. With New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, Boston, to October, 1902. 2. Travelling auditor for American Telephone and Telegraph Company, headquarters Boston, to April, 1910. 3. With American Telephone and Telegraph Company, at New York, since April, 1910, in charge of financial reports bureau (American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Bell Telephone System in United States).”

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY

Born at Spencer, Indiana, 8 July 1869, of Francis Burdette Moody (accountant) and Henrietta Emily Stoy.

Fitted at Riverview Military Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Harriet Tilden Brainard at Quebec, 7 May 1909.

Died at Colorado Springs 17 October 1910.

How irreparable a loss was Moody's early death, not only to American poetry, but to Harvard manhood, only those who knew him intimately yet realize; and they owe it to all who feel a pride in him to spread the knowledge. For he was more than the greatest poet of his generation in America—he was that rare thing, a consummate artist whose craftsmanship does not exceed his native richness of mind and spirit, his sincere humanity.

Probably few of his classmates, in undergraduate days, penetrated the husk of his personality; and this was natural, for in those days poverty and its attendant pride were added to his native reticence about personal affairs. Some one said of him that "It took Moody a pipeful to make a remark." He entered college with almost no money, and no help to expect from his family in Indiana. In spite of the hack-work that this meant, he distinguished himself in scholarship at once, and made Phi Beta Kappa, the O.K., and the Signet, besides contributing much verse to the Monthly. He satisfied the A.B. requirements in three years, and spent his senior year in Europe, making then the first of many trips to Greece.

After graduation he stayed at Cambridge two years, as graduate student and instructor in English. In the fall of 1895 he accepted an instructorship at Chicago University, which remained his headquarters for many years. By careful economy and by eking out his income with editorial work he managed to get fairly frequent and lengthy periods of freedom from the academic drudgery, always oppressive to him, though conscientiously discharged. These holidays were his true working times. He spent them sometimes in Boston or New York, more frequently abroad. He acknowledged gratefully the liberal treatment accorded him by Chicago University. In November, 1900, he published "A Masque of Judgment," the first to appear of his trilogy of poetic dramas, though the second in logical order. The following May saw the publication of "Poems," containing his best short pieces, carefully winnowed by his exacting self-criticism. "The Fire-Bringer," logically the opening drama of the trilogy, appeared in March, 1904; of the third drama, "The Death of Eve," only a single act exists, published posthumously in the collected "Plays and Poems." "The Great Divide," his first prose play, had a long run in New York in 1906 and 1907; the second play, "The Faith Healer," not a stage success, was published in 1910. In 1909 he married Mrs. Harriet Brainerd of Chicago. An attack of typhoid fever in the spring of 1908 left his health permanently undermined. In spite of his strong constitution, and of the tardy financial prosperity that "The Great Divide'' had brought him, his working days were over. Weary months of illness and of depleted powers, patiently borne, ended in death on October 17, 1910.

A casual acquaintance usually found Moody's reticence and complete lack of small talk, as I have suggested, somewhat embarrassing, especially as it was coupled with a frank, inquiring gaze that made one feel under examination. Further experience revealed the richness of his mental stores, the ardent humanity of his heart. In one of our frequent Marlave dinners, in the Cambridge days, he called himself "lover of life." The phrase describes him, poet and man.

There is much of paganism in his poetry. Perhaps he had just enough of the puritan to hate puritanism with an understanding hatred. For its cautious denials and gratuitous renunciations he felt contempt. The essence of his trilogy of dramatic poems is the praise of what in one of his letters he calls "a brave love of life and faith in its issues," as opposed to all asceticism and fanatical denial of life. Of the "Masque of Judgment" he writes in another letter: "To me the whole meaning and value of the poem lies in the humanistic attitude and character of Raphael, the philosophic outlook of Uriel, and the plea for passion as a means of salvation everywhere latent." Raphael's hymn to man, in Act III of that poem, is the summing up of his religion, with its marvellous imaginative grasp of the strange mixing of good and evil in human nature, and its emergent faith that "Darkly, but oh, for good, for good,

The spirit infinite
Was throned upon the perishable blood."

letter it is "this gigantic ink-blot of a town." Describing a period of unusually hard work, reading for a new course in addition to the giving of old ones, he says: "Good fun, . . . but rather hard on one's tire. I hasten to assure you that I am as yet unpunctured, though much worn at the rim, and rapidly losing resiliency by leakage. I relinquish the figure with reluctance." Imagine every subject that came up pondered in a spirit of investigation, with slight knitting of the brows and thoughtful inhalation of pipe-smoke or tapping-down of the ashes with accustomed forefinger, and every now and again a sudden flash of vagrant fancy penetrating undreamed-of recesses, or creating whole systems of figurative imagery to be demolished as suddenly, and you have a dim notion of Moody's talk. Surely it was worth the while to wait a pipeful for a remark.

It is not necessary here to discuss his literary work in detail. Those who have studied it carefully believe that by its noble enthusiasm for humanity, its rich imaginative beauty, its wealth of style coupled, at least in the later things, with rarest distinction, and its plasticity and subtle balance of rhythm, making it musical in a degree seldom paralleled in American verse, it will eventually take one of the highest places in our literature. Meanwhile, it is pleasant to remind Harvard men that Moody was loyal to the dearest traditions of our Alma Mater. He had the idealism, the courageous devotion to the best, the scorn of compromise, that is the essence of the Harvard spirit. Through years of poverty, for instance, he never condescended to write "magazine poetry." He wrote his own poetry; eventually the magazines printed it. And when "The Great Divide" made its popular sensation, and he was offered large royalties, if he would turn it into a novel, by four different publishers, with mention of such sums as twenty-five, and even fifty, thousand dollars, he told me quite simply that he considered such changes inartistic and had refused the offers, though he would have liked to buy a farm for quiet work.

That such a spirit of loyalty to the best is the most precious gift of Harvard to her sons, Moody well knew, as he showed, even as an undergraduate, in his class poem. Some stanzas of that poem, written by the youth yet unproved, as he stands gazing for the last time at the windows of Memorial Hall, with their pictures of the past, recur to us now as prophetic:

“So long as Homer clasps his lyre
Among us some shall still be found,
About whose brows the gods have wound
Song’s amaranthine buds of fire.

“While Shakespeare waits and seems to scan
Each form that passes in the dusk,
One here shall break away the husk
Which hides the fruit-sweet heart of man.”

So he calls in review the great spirits of the past; and particularly he tells of the graduates he sees as in a vision, bringing back their gifts to the mother. Finally he looks forward to the years when “We, too, may say as those have said :

“ ‘Fair Harvard! Mother fair and grand!
Behold, we are thy children too;
Great mother from whose breast we drew
The larger strength of brain and hand!

“ ‘Lo! have we borne a knightly sword?
Thy kiss was misty on the blade!
Lo! men’s hearts have we stirred and swayed?
Thou putttest in our mouth the word!’ ”

DANIEL GREGORY MASON, '95.

FRED WADSWORTH MOORE

Born at Independence, Iowa, 7 March 1870, of Lorenzo Moore (merchant) and Ellen Wadsworth.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Boston.

“I am still practicing law by myself in Boston. Incidentally I have for several years acted as ‘long distance’ treasurer and managing director of an amusement pier in Atlantic City. This with other outside matters has tended to keep me out of court work and my practice is mostly of the office variety. I am treasurer of the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead and spend most of my somewhat irregular vacations on the water. I am still unmarried and have never even been engaged. I have rooms at 234 Clarendon St., Boston, and eat any old place. This don't sound like a very interesting existence, but some of my married friends take pity on me occasionally and there are still numerous individuals of both sexes in my state and others who return to it temporarily, so that I have so far managed to worry along quite sociably and otherwise comfortably."

WILLIAM CHARLES MOORE

Born at Lawrence, 9 August 1864, of William P. Moore (mechanic) and Esther Ashworth.

Fitted at Bridgewater State Normal School.

Class Status: Scientific, 1890-93; S.B. 1893.

Married Lora Gertrude Davidson at Salem, 19 November 1898.

Now spending a year in recuperation.

" Nothing doing at present. I am spending a year or more in retirement, recuperating from a condition of overwork. Since the last Report have been for three years superintendent of schools in Southington-Cheshire, Connecticut. Future plans absolutely unknown. A.M. (Harvard) 1908."

ROLAND JESSUP MULFORD

Born at Friendsville, Pennsylvania, 27 May 1871 of Elisha Mulford (author) and Rachel Price Carmalt.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Margaret Biddle Guest Blackwell at Baltimore, 21 December 1901. Children:

Helen Blackwell, born 6 January 1904.

John, 1 August 1907.

Now Headmaster Ridgefield School at Ridgefield, Connecticut.

" Except for four years, two at the Harvard Law School and two at the Johns Hopkins Graduate School, have been teaching school,—the last twelve years as headmaster. Opened Ridgefield (Conn.) School for boys in 1907, renting the Inn in the town for four years. The school was incorporated and a board of trustees, one of whom is Howard C. Smith, elected. Money was raised and a tract of over a hundred acres, bordering on a lake a mile long, was purchased, and new buildings erected, into which the school moved in 1912. No school in the country has a better site—eight hundred feet above the sea and two hours from New York. In 1910 was ordained to the diaconate of the Episcopal Church by Bishop C. B. Brewster. I do not see why everyone does not keep school. Clubs: Harvard and University of New York.'

LOUIS CHRISTIAN MULLGARDT

Born at Washington, Missouri, 19 January 1866, of Christian Mullgardt (maunfacturer) and Wilhelmine Haeusgen.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Laura Rosette Steffens at Chicago, 9 June 1897. Children:

Alexander Steffens, born 3 January 1899.

John Louis Christian, 24 August 1906.

Now practising architecture at San Francisco.

"It does not seem to me that I have anything of special interest to relate. I am a member of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Architectural Commission, and have some important work on hand in that connection, but it seems too early to say much about it just now."

DAVID SAVILLE MUZZEY

Born at Lexington, Massachusetts, 9 October 1870, of David Wood Muzzey (real estate) and Annie Woodury Saville.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ina Jeannette Bullis at New York City, 20 September, 1900.

Children:

David Saville, Jr., born 6 September, 1902.

Elizabeth, 23 February 1904.

Now teaching at New York City.

"Only the just conscience that I am not running for office or seeking an appointment reconciles me to this chronicling of the things I've done, together with discreet silence as to the things I've misdone or left totally undone. Since our last Report my professional duties have not changed, except for a slightly different field of exercise. I am still assistant leader of the Society for Ethical Culture in New York, and in that capacity am an occasional speaker on the platform of the sister societies in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis, besides having some literary and editorial duties. After having served twelve years as teacher of Latin, Greek, and History, and head of the department of history at the Ethical School in New York, I was appointed lecturer and last year associate professor in the department of history at Columbia University. In 1909-

10 I enjoyed a sabbatical year in Paris. I have published a few books and articles from time to time—a Beginner's Latin Book, in 1907; an essay on The Spiritual Franciscans, in the same year; an American History, in 1911; and am fervently hoping that the royalties from the last named publication will enable me to contribute something more than fractional silver currency to the 25th anniversary gift to Alma Mater. My family, I regret to say, has not increased (except in stature and school-book lore) since the last Report. After being driven from one house in Yonkers by the flapping of the stork's wings and from another by flames, I am now permanently, I hope, settled in a third (at 492 Van Cortlandt Park Avenue), where the latch string hangs out for all the members of '93."

HOWARD PERVEAR NASH

Born at Roxbury, 8 December 1871, of Osborn Preble Nash (clerk) and Abby Annie Pervear.

Fitted at Chelsea High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Emma Augusta Jones at Brooklyn, 26 July 1899. Children:

Howard Pervear, born 8 September 1900.

Osborn Preble, 5 November 1902.

Alexander Allaire, 12 June 1904.

Winifred May, 31 July 1907.

Now a city magistrate at Brooklyn.

"Nothing new since my last report, except increased interest in charitable and correctional work, concerning which you already have information."

HERBERT VINCENT NEAL

Born at Lewiston, Maine, 3 April 1869, of John Neal and Caroline Augusta Noyes.

Entered from Bates College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Helen Phillips Howell at Southold, New York, 8 June 1899.

Children:

Margaret } twins, born 26 February 1901.
Helen }

John Howell, 13 July 1906.

Now Professor of Biology at Knox College, Illinois.

"Since the last Report my official status has remained the same, although I have had tempting offers to draw me elsewhere. I have been for six years associate director of the Harps-well Biological Laboratory, at, or near, Portland, Me. For two years I was secretary of the Central Branch of the American Society of Zoölogists. I am now secretary of the Zoölogical Section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science—for the next five years. I broke into Who's Who last year. One term's aldermanship from the bloody Sixth was enough for me and I got out leaving the job to a much better man. The size of my family remains stationary—but my three children are better than a dozen!"

JOSEPH LONGWORTH NICHOLS

Born at Cincinnati, 10 November 1870, of George Ward Nichols and Maria Longworth.

Fitted at St. Paul's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Morgan at Saranac Lake, 5 April 1910.

Now in medical research at Saranac Lake, New York

Returns such a vacant-looking blank!

DANIEL BENJAMIN NINDE

Born at Fort Wayne, Indiana, 28 July 1870, of Lindley Murray Ninde (lawyer) and Beulah C—— Puckett.

Entered from United States Naval Academy.

Class Status: Junior year only.

Married Mary E—— Coe at Boston, 27 February 1899.

Now practising law at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Ditto.

CHARLES READ NUTTER

Born at Boston, 8 November 1871, of Thomas Franklin Nutter (lawyer) and Adelaide Julia Read.

Fitted at Browne and Nichols.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Medora Cheatham Addison at Stamford, Connecticut, 31 October 1911. Children:

Thayer } twins, born 29 August 1912.
Morriss }

Now in the editorial department of Ginn & Co., at Boston.

“ The last turn of Fortune's wheel threw me back to Boston. For the last year and a half I have been in the editorial department of Ginn and Company. The three preceding years I was with D. Appleton and Company, in New York. During this time many business trips took me through the Middle West and the South, incidentally giving me the pleasure of meeting classmates and the advantage of shaking off New England provincialism. Not long ago I resigned from the association of class bachelors, so ably led by Tisdale, Batchelder, Collamore and others, and joined the more sensible majority. Now the Nutter twin boys are in line for some distant Harvard class. In the meantime, as Bob Sawyer remarked, I'm 'pegging away.' "

THOMAS EDWARD OLIVER

Born at Salem, Massachusetts, 16 December 1871, of Samuel Cook Oliver '49 and Mary Elizabeth Andrews.

Fitted at Salem High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Elisabeth Reinhardt at Cleveland, 9 June 1904. Children:

Elisabeth Andrews, born 12 May 1905.

Martha Reinhardt, 3 September 1907.

Sarah Chever, 23 March 1913.

Now Professor of Romance Languages at University of Illinois.

" I am still at the University of Illinois, and begin to look upon myself as one of the old settlers here, this being the tenth year of my service. In 1910-11 we took a trip abroad, this being my first sabbatical. 'We' includes both our children. Sailing in June, 1910, we reached Finland in a fortnight and spent a delightful summer with my wife's relatives at their island villa in the Baltic. Then we visited successively Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfurt, Strassburg and Paris, and spent the winter at the last named city. All along this journey I did work at the various libraries, especially in the Berlin Royal Library, and the Paris Bibliothèque Nationale. In June, 1911, I slipped across to London to work in the British Museum, and incidentally to help crown George V. by witnessing the coronation procession in company with a fairly large number similarly intentioned. It was quite worth while. Returning to the Continent I rejoined my family in Switzerland at Chamonix, where we stayed a month, finally returning to America via Strassburg, Frankfurt, and Hamburg. The Morocco affair loomed up dangerously the last weeks of our stay, but happily was settled peacefully. We have got now into the habit of going north, to Michigan, in the summer, as Urbana can be insufferably hot. As recreation I still take a deep interest in amateur dramatics and have played Sir Lucius O'Trigger in 'The Rivals,' Mike McInerney in 'The Work House Ward,' and similar rôles. Our local Harvard Club (Eastern Illinois) keeps alive Harvard traditions with an annual banquet and occasional smokers. Otherwise my life moves along with the normal pleasant monotony of the college teacher."

GILBERT FRANCIS ORDWAY

Born at Dorchester, 26 February 1870, of George Francis Ordway (accountant) and Julia Maria Gilbert.

Fitted at Dorchester High.

Class Status: Joined Class Senior year from '94.

Now practising law at Boston.

"No change since last Report."

LOUIS ERNEST OSBORN

Born at Boston, 14 April 1871, of Edward Field Osborn (railroads) and Helen Frances Watson.

Fitted at Franklin School, Cincinnati.

Class Status: A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Now railroad treasurer at Cincinnati.

"I have nothing new to add to my former report."

GEORGE ALFRED PAGE

Born at London, 30 May 1872, of Charles Albert Page (merchant) and Grace Darling Coues.

Fitted at Brookline High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mabel Hurd at Brookline, 15 June 1898. Children:

Charles Albert, born 13 March 1899.

Helen Bruce, 18 January 1902.

George Alfred, Jr., 11 December 1907.

Now in publishing at Boston.

"There is not much to say about myself except that each year I am surprised to find myself older, and not surprised to find myself stouter. I am still engaged in the publishing business, and spend a good deal of time explaining to my friends why their MSS are unavailable—for us, although they always have 'such merits as to make me feel certain that some other publisher will be glad to accept them.' My only excitement since the last Report was when in 1911 I took it into my head that I would like to be a baseball magnate, and, with my brother, bought an interest in the Boston Nationals. We thought we were going to do great things, but 'believe me' baseball politics can give the regulation kind cards and spades, and win out in a canter. At the end of six months we withdrew gracefully, and actually got our investment back—and then some. Since then I have been quite content to remain a ‘literary euss.’ Last November I had my first real vacation since leaving college and took a trip to Panama and Costa Rica. With my usual good fortune I managed to avoid most of the routine that the tourist indulges in. We made the acquaintance of a hurricane on the way down to Panama, and were tied up for an eventful 24 hours by a series of land slides in the mountains of Costa Rica. We also had a mild earthquake arranged for us, but it was a sad disappointment. I mislaid about 15 pounds of weight while on the trip, but found that, and more, once I was back in God’s Country.”

JOHN HARLESTON PARKER

Born at Boston, 27 November 1872, of Harleston Parker and Adeline Ellen Reynolds.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble’s.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Edith Value Stackpole at Nahant, Massachusetts, 12 September 1904. Children:

Edith Harleston, born 28 June 1905.

John Harleston, Jr., 12 July 1907.

James, 6 January 1909.

Now practising architecture at Boston.

“ Since the last Report I have no changes at home to record. I am still pursuing the noble profession of architecture in Boston and Baltimore and was glad this year to be awarded the commission to design the new club house for the Harvard Club of Boston.”

VERNON LOUIS PARRINGTON

Born at Aurora, Illinois, 3 August 1871, of John William Parrington (lawyer) and Louise McClellan.

Entered from Emporia College.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Julia Rochester Williams at Seattle, Washington, 31 July 1901. Children:

Elizabeth, born 26 April 1902.

Louise Wrathal, 28 April 1907.

Now Professor of English at the University of Washington.

Returns blank blank.

WILLIAM EDWIN PARSONS

Born at Kennebunkport, Maine, 25 August 1865, of John Parsons (clergyman) and Sarah Ayer Chase.

Fitted at Chauncy Hall.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Now living at Brookline.

“ Have retired from wool business, otherwise no change.”

GEORGE EVERETT PARTRIDGE

Born at Worcester, 31 May 1870, of George Partridge (real estate) and Sarah Boyden Capron.

Fitted at Worcester High.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Married Emelyn Smythe Newcombe at New York City, 31 August 1898. Children:

Elaine Newcomb, born 19 February 1900 (died 14 August 1901).

Miriam Newcomb, 6 July 1902.

Philip Newcomb, 31 July 1909.

Now in philosophical research at Worcester, Mass.

“ There is not much of interest to tell. I left college at the end of the freshman year. The record since is that mainly of a student. From 1890 to 1895, largely occupied in private studies in literature, psychology and philosophy. From 1895 to 1900, at Clark University, Ph.D. 1899. 1900 to 1904, taught psychology at State Normal School, Mankato, Minnesota. 1904 to 1906, lecturer, Clark University. 1906 to 1908, in Canada, business and contributor on educational topics to Canadian press. 1908 to date, Worcester. Stanley Hall), 1912; Studies in the Psychology of Intemperance, 1912; Story-Telling in School and Home (with Emelyn N. Partridge), 1912. Contributions to newspapers, etc. At present engaged upon a work in general philosophy, and some investigations in psychology and education. Minor interests, music and writing stories. light essays, etc.”

HORACE WILBUR PATTERSON

Born at Boston, 24 August 1872, of Thomas Fatzinger Patterson (merchant) and Flora Atkins Wilbur.

Fitted at English High.

Class Status: Left Junior year.

Married (1) Edith Hattie Roberts at Jersey City, 4 May 1896 (died 3 November 1898).

Married (2) Julia Champlin Morris at New Brighton, Staten Island, 4 April 1904. Children:

Dorothy Gittings, born 16 September 1905 (died 18 March 1906).

Helen Wilbur, 22 April 1907.

Died at Staten Island, N. Y., 5 February 1911.

⁶⁷Horace Wilbur Patterson, M.D., died February 5, 1911, at Staten Island, N. Y., of pneumonia. He was born at Boston, August 24, 1872, of Thomas Fatzinger and Flora Atkins (Wilbur) Patterson. He fitted at the Boston English High School, and entered as a regular member of the class. He left in junior year, and went to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, where he received the M.D. in 1895. For a year he was house-surgeon in the Newark City Hospital. He was assistant surgeon at the New Amsterdam Eye and Ear Hospital, New York, when the Spanish War broke out. Having already become interested in military matters he enlisted as first lieutenant and assistant surgeon in the 1st Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Infantry. This regiment was encamped in Virginia for the summer, but Patterson was detached and put in command of the Hospital and Ambulance Company of the 1st Division, 2d Army Corps—being in charge of more than 200 men. At the conclusion of the war he took up the practice of medicine at New Brighton, S. I. In addition to much private work he was at the head of the Division of Communicable Diseases for the Borough of Richmond, secretary and treasurer of the Richmond County Medical Society, pathologist of the Smith Infirmary of New Brighton, etc. He continued also his military avocations, was promoted to a captaincy in his regiment, did his share of riot duty, and was finally commissioned first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. A. A member of the Glee Club in college, he always kept up his fondness for music. His professional ability, winning personality, and varied interests made him esteemed and sought after throughout his community.

Horace W Patterson

A long-time neighbor and friend (Leopold A. Camacho, Rensselaer Polytechnic, '80) writes as follows:

"The salient points in the character and life of Horace Wilbur Patterson were his keen joy in living and in doing his work. He had as well a cheerful, patient persistency which he applied to all things and which never left him.

"I knew him for fifteen years, during eleven of which he took care of my family as medical adviser. To a man of his big heart this meant much more than the mere care of our physical ills. He was ever ready to 'stand by' and his sympathy and help were no small part of his offering.

"Patterson possessed a keenly analytical mind. I am told by his colleagues of the medical profession that he was most complete in his knowledge of medicine. A very determined man, when he believed himself right, he left nothing undone to accomplish his ends. Always considerate of others, full of promise, with his crop but just sown, he was called from his work here to other fields in the great beyond.

"Patterson was always an inspiration to me because of the qualities which I have tried to enumerate. He was a loyal, loving friend and a highly useful member of our community. May I not therefore be permitted to lay my tribute on the altar of memory to my old friend and to write him as one of Harvard's sons who was a man."

HENRY GREENLEAF PEARSON

Born at Portland, Maine, 26 December 1870, of George Henry Pearson (watchmaker) and Mary Frances Hitchcock.

Fitted at Portland High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Elizabeth Ware Winsor at Weston, Massachusetts, 6 September 1898. Children:

Anne Winsor, born 13 November 1899 (died 11 August 1901).
Theodore, 7 July 1903.

Mary, 31 January 1906 (died 30 October 1906).

Robert Winsor, 18 February 1910.

Henry Greenleaf, Jr., 10 November 1912.

Now Associate Professor of English at Technology.

"My life consists of steady, hard work in teaching and biographical writing. Whether it is helping to train the men who are to be leaders among the coming generation, or recording the deeds of men who have been leaders in the past, it is work which I like to do, and which I believe is worth doing with my whole strength. I rejoice in my family and friends, and am thankful for them; through membership on a few committees interested in various kinds of social service, I make some return,—I wish it were more,—to the community in which I live and have my work.”

WALTER ALBERT PEASE, JR.

Born at New York City, 14 December 1871, of Walter Albert Pease (stockbroker) and Mary Louise Hollister.

Fitted at Halsey's Collegiate School.

Married Martha Chambers Rodgers at Pittsburg, 8 June 1899. Children:

Calbraith Perry Rodgers, born 15 July 1901 (died 15 February 1902).

Perry Rodgers, 9 March 1904.

Martha Carroll, 5 May 1905.

Now in real estate at New York City.

“ When I left college in the spring of '92 I went into the banking house of J. Kennedy Tod and Company, in Wall Street, and became a first class messenger, getting the mail and cleaning the ink stands, etc. I did fairly well during the next few years and finally had charge of the foreign exchange department, but there seemed to be no very great chance of improvement so that when I was offered by Mr. John S. Kennedy the position of his private secretary, I jumped at it and for the next year and a half held that position, which was most interesting and in which I think I acquitted myself creditably. In 1897, at Mr. Kennedy's own suggestion, I decided to take up real estate, and in October of that year I joined with Lawrence B. Elliman, forming the firm of Pease and Elliman. In 1902 we incorporated under the name of Pease and Elliman and our business has grown very largely and we now have three offices,—a main office at 340 Madison Avenue, in a building which we own, a downtown office at 156 Broadway, and an uptown office at 165 West 72d Street. Last summer a friend of mine, M. C. Overman, invented an automobile tire which seemed to me to be a wonder. It couldn't puncture and it didn't skid. I became very much interested in it and am now a director in the Overman Tire Company, which is very successful, and of which I think you will hear a great deal shortly. Ever since I was married in 1899 we have lived at Hempstead, L. I., near Meadowbrook Club.”

ROLAND EDWARD PHILLIPS

Born at Cleveland, 30 May 1872, of William A. Phillips (physician) and Marion E. Nickerson.

Entered from Adelbert College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Mrs. William Hunter (Gertrude Mary Shepard) at London, 16 April 1894, with son Malcolm. Children:

Marion, born 16 January 1897.

Roland, Jr., 12 September 1898.

Gordon, 18 November 1901.

Now Editor Cosmopolitan Magazine at New York City.

Contributes no further details—being an editor, not a contributor.

CARL HORTON PIERCE

Born at Boston, 6 September 1870, of Charles Fletcher Pierce (manufacturer) and Jennie Morse.

Fitted at Harvard School, Chicago.

Class Status: A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married Edythe Gross at Brooklyn, 4 June 1900. Children:

Charles Wilder, born 11 December 1901.

Doris, 28 October 1903.

David Warren, 26 June 1908.

Now teaching salesmanship at New York City.

“Taking advantage of Sam’s invitation to be spontaneous, intimate and straightforward, I am going to say that the entire period since leaving college has been taken up with one hard, earnest struggle to make good in the business world, leaving me about as rich, at the present writing, as I was when I left,—this in spite of the fact that several companies have been organized by me, but failed either through competition or through industrial depression. Looking back through the years, and oft times being hard put to it as to whether a college education was worth a cent towards fitting a man to be a productive citizen, I can truthfully say that I think the greatest need today in our educational centers is for practical courses of business training. I admit the idea-creating value of a broad foundation, and also that our boys and girls need to be well educated in order to compete with the race now rising over the horizon, but probably many of the class will agree with me that a plain business school training is of more worth in many respects than the education we received in Cambridge. If President Lowell can be prevailed upon to run practical business courses alongside of history and philosophy, we shall not run the risk of being stigmatized as theorists. In talking with a leading New York rug merchant this week he said, 'In business the theorist has his place, but he is usually the poor man. The practical business man is the money getter.' While I would not have this report sound sordid, and while appreciating the ethical value of our alma mater's fitting, I feel that the age is coming when we must no longer turn our men at the age of 24 out into the highly organized commercial world, to draw office boys' salaries and expect to support a family. What we need is college education that shall keep pace with the organization that is daily growing more complex in the business world. The family is all well; we are in the best of health and feeling as if life had hardly begun with its wealth of work to be accomplished."

GEORGE BURGESS PIERCE

Born at Milton, 21 January 1872, of Edward Lillie Pierce (lawyer) and Elizabeth Helen Kingsbury.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now travelling.

"On January 1, 1912, resigned as treasurer of the Monadnock Paper Mills. Sailed for Europe (southern trip) February 5, 1912, stopping at the Azores, Madeira, Algiers and Gibraltar. The rest of the winter and part of the spring I spent at the Riviera Palace at Cannes, near Nice. Tennis in France at the Nice Lawn Tennis Club was pleasant. I reached the semi-finals in the handicap, but was beaten by a French lieutenant, who won the tournament. I defeated the man who had won for two or three years. On my journey to Paris, via Nice, met Charles G. Winslow, who had been with Samuel Chew in Egypt. Saw Robert P. Bowler at the races at Auteuil. Travelled with some of the Titanic victims. Had a good time with Morrill Dunn at Islesboro, Me., this summer. Sailing February 1 for Italy and the Riviera."

CHARLES BURRALL PIKE

Born at Chicago, 29 June 1871, of Eugene S. Pike (capitalist) and Mary Rockwell.

Fitted at Harvard School, Chicago.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Frances Aura Alger at Washington, 18 May 1898.

Now in business at Chicago.

“Practised law 1899 to 1902. Vice-president Western State Bank, 1902-03. President Hamilton National Bank and Merchants Safe Deposit Company. 1903 to 1910. February, 1910, sold Hamilton National Bank to National City Bank, Chicago. From July, 1910, to April, 1911, travelled abroad with wife. October, 1912, sold Merchants Safe Deposit Company to Central Safe Deposit Company. Now enjoying tending to my own business.”

J. MONROE TAYLOR POPE

Born at Syracuse, 10 August 1870, of Charles Clarus Pope (manufacturer) and Laura Maria Allen Taylor.

Fitted at Wilson and Kellogg's.

Class Status: Left Sophomore year.

Married Frances Cythera Twombly, at New York City, 4 April 1894.
Child:

Donald Twombly, born 3 February 1896.

Now in insurance at New York City.

“ Nothing new to report. I am making a success of the insurance business.”

JOHN REED POST

Born at New York City, 15 July 1872, of Jotham William Post (banker) and Eliza Chapman.

Fitted at Brookline High.

Class Status: Left Sophomore year.

Married Mabel Davis at Boston, 5 June 1902. Children:

Mary Lincoln, born 3 November 1903.

Madeline Blaau, 3 November 1907.

Now in cotton brokerage at Boston.

“ The last five years have not been eventful. Am still in the cotton business, a partner in the firm of E. L. Dorr and Company, in Boston, and thoroughly settled in Milton, where we have recently landed our classmate B. W. Trafford, and where I hope he will stay. Advancing years have not yet driven me off the tennis court, though I combine the game of golf for out-of-door exercise. On the whole I find life distinctly satisfactory.”

EDWARD PEARSON PRESSEY

Born at Salem, New Hampshire, 28 June 1869, of John Pressey (merchant) and Mary Ellen Colby.

Fitted at Pinkerton Academy.

Class Status: A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married (1) Grace Harriet Gibson at Londonderry, New Hampshire, 22 June 1897. Children:

Dorothea, born 13 July 1898.

Elizabeth, 3 March 1903.

John Emanuel, 5 November 1905.

Married (2) Grace deWolf Gamwell at Westfield, Mass, 22 May 1909.

Children by adoption:

Naomi deWolf, born 19 July 1901.

Philip Moseley, 5 April 1906.

Now working on the country problem, publishing occasionally at Montague, Massachusetts.

“ After graduating I studied two years in the Harvard Divinity School, and then was on the skirmish line of the Unitarian ministry for about a year, taking several temporary charges, particularly organizing a new society at Derby, Conn. Was ordained to the Christian ministry and settled in 1896 in the parish of the 1st Congregational Church at Rowe, Mass., a little run-down town in the Hoosac Mountains. There I began to study the country problem of making the smaller farming towns better places to live in. After three years and a half at Rowe, during which I wrote the ‘Abandoned Farm Papers,’ some twenty or more articles, sketches and scraps of romantic rural history, largely connected with Rowe, and published in the New England Magazine, the Christian Register, Springfield Republican, and three or four other papers and periodicals. These called out extensive correspondence, newspaper comment and controversy about country life in New England. In 1900 I moved to Montague where I continued to preach in an old church until 1906. Soon after going to Montague I began more extensive writing, lecturing and organizing guilds along the lines of a better country life. I founded the New Clairvaux Press, which has been succeeded by the Montague Press, which is doing some of the finest printing done in this country. The Montague Arts and Crafts Society was another guild organized. At one time the movement seemed to be taking the form of a rural university settlement of families and individuals supporting themselves by agriculture and various trades on separate farms closely associated. The movement is now, however, merged in the general life of the community in several definite ways. My two published books the 'The Vision of New Clairvaux,' 218 pages, New Clairvaux Press, 1909, and 'The History of Montague,' 264 pages, New Clairvaux Press, 1910. I have been burned out once, losing a large number of manuscripts and valuable notes, and a good many books, although I saved a good part of a valuable library of reference and literature. I am interested particularly now in experiments in agriculture and marketing of crops, and in country amusements of a richer order, and hope to found a village stage of rural actors. Our most sizable and insistant job, however, is to put within reach of our two sons and three daughters, the best of civilization as it is without waiting for the millennium."

CHESTER WELLS PURINGTON

Born at Boston, 27 October 1871, of Joseph Albert Purington (merchant) and Lydia Jane Chase Morrill.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Charlotte Calhoun Wells at Amesbury, 6 April 1905.

Now mining expert, headquarters at London.

"During the first four years of the period I was in charge of gold mining operations in the territory of the lower Amur, East Siberia, and equipped one Siberian property with two American gold dredges, which are earning a good profit for the owners, the Orsk Goldfields, Ltd., of London. I do not expect to make many more trips to that remote region, but am now directing from London a considerable amount of prospecting and exploration work which is being carried on in the Amur region. In the winter of 1910-11 I examined, for the Russo-Asiatic Bank, the old convict mines of the Nerchinsk district of central Siberia, formerly so vividly described by George Kennan. No particular ill-usage of prisoners was noted. Both employers and employed went through the motions of gold mining without much apparent result. This being the age of specialists, I have largely as a matter of accident developed an unusual specialty. This is the study of frozen auriferous gravels, and the cost of extraction of their gold contents. This form of sub-Arctic mining, both in Siberia and Alaska, is now receiving considerable attention and the great tundra-covered flats of two continents, 'north of fifty-four' may be expected to contribute gold in increasing quantity during the next fifty years. The gold product from this source will to a certain extent supplant the fast diminishing reserves of the Transvaal. Life in London is pleasant notwithstanding the archaic methods of heating in use by the aborigines of these isles. The American mining colony in London gets along with a maximum of sociability and a minimum of friction. Its domestic regime, is I suspect, largely regulated from South Audley Street, the premises of the Society of American Women in London. The mandates of that autocracy no mere male would have the temerity to oppose. Having helped to wear out as many miles of steel rails as probably any member of '93, and having looked on human existence through many windows, I am convinced that happiness consists in continued physical and mental activity. The best holiday is a temporary change of occupation. The profession of a miner generally gains a sufficient competency and at the same time is independent, and adds its small portion from time to time to the sum of knowledge. I do not know a more desirable one to follow. I am thankful every year of my life that I was given the opportunity by my parents to graduate from Harvard College, but above this I am thankful that I had the inestimable privilege of being born an American citizen."

CHAUNCEY OTIS RAWALT

Born at Canton, Illinois, 14 January 1870, of Milton Rawalt (farmer) and Alice Bartels.

Entered from Knox College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Jennie Irene Mayo at Providence, 3 November 1897. Children:

Doris Anita, born 25 August 1898 (deceased).

Chauncey Otis, Jr., 7 April 1904.

Now with American Telephone and Telegraph Co., at New York City.

Slips us a blank slip, blank it!

THOMAS FRANCIS RAY

Born at Boston, 18 November 1869, of Thomas Ray (merchant) and Margaret Ryan.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Jennie Lee at Seattle, 30 June 1910.

Now practising law at Tacoma.

“ Still practising law in Tacoma (Ray and Dennis). Married three years ago. no children. Member small Harvard Club here, about 25 members. Been back to Boston six times during my ten years residence and always go over to see ‘old Harvard,’ and find many new things there each time showing progress at Harvard as in the West.”

WILLIAM MAXWELL REED

Born at Bath, Maine, 12 January 1871, of Edwin Reed (merchant) and Emily Putnam Fellows.

Fitted at Brown and Nichols.

Class Status: Left Junior year.

Married Jannetta Gordon Studdiford at Montclair, New Jersey, 15 April 1913.

Now manufacturing rubber at Trenton, New Jersey.

“ I am connected with the United and Globe Rubber Manufacturing Companies at Trenton, N. J. My chief occupation is the establishment of modern factory and office routines. On April 15th I shall be married to Miss Jannetta Gordon Studdiford at Montclair, N. J. On account of the date at which this book will probably go to print, I am safe in inviting the entire class to the wedding.”

HARRISON GARFIELD RHODES

Born at Cleveland, 2 June 1871, of James Harrison Rhodes (lawyer) and Adelaide Maria Robbins.

Entered from Adelbert College.

Class Status: Entered Sophomore.

Now in literary and dramatic work at New York City and elsewhere.

of stories, articles, etc., for the magazines, and written part of a guide-book to Florida, which Dodd, Mead and Company publish. I have been abroad off and on a good deal and am going to Spain March 4th for the spring. I hope to be back in June and in Cambridge for the 20th celebration. I am in excellent health and generally in excellent spirits. I am still unmarried and I am not able to think of anything more about myself which can possibly interest the Class of '93. The middle name has gradually been dropped out and I generally sign myself Harrison Rhodes."

JOHN WOLCOTT RICHARDS

Born at Providence, 15 March 1871, of Charles Augustus Lewis Richards (clergyman) and Mary White Wiltbank.
 Fitted at University Grammar School.
 Class Status: Special, 1889-92.
 Married Grace O'Hara at Huntington, Long Island, 9 July 1912.
 Now in paper business at New York City.

The increased cost of paper probably prevents him from using any in sending a "story."

NATHANIEL THAYER ROBB

Born at New York City, 5 July 1870, of James Hampden Robb and Cornelia Van Rensselaer Thayer.
 Fitted at Groton.
 Class Status: Regular A.B.
 Married Frances Beatrix Henderson at New York City, 26 November 1895. Children:
 Janet Henderson, born 7 September 1896.
 James Hampden, Jr., 22 December 1898.
 Cornelia Van Rensselaer, 5 March 1904.
 Now Director of the Gaston Syndicate, London, England.

" Since the last Report I have done nothing of any consequence, except travel back and forth across the Atlantic, as I am now in business in London. Last May I spent four days at Oxford during the 'Eights' Week or what would be the same as our Class Day, and found it most interesting. If any of our classmates should be in London I hope they will look me up as it is a God-send to see one's own Countrymen, and especially Harvard, '93."

WILLIAM HENRY ROBEY, JR.

Born at Boston, 3 July 1870, of William Henry Robey (merchant) and Mary Virginia Smith.

Fitted at English High.

Class Status: Scientific, 1889-91. Medical, 1891-94.

Married Isabelle Torrens Alexander at New York City, 22 April 1897.
Child:

Andrew Alexander, born 16 February 1898.

Now practising medicine at Boston.

“ I am engaged in the practice of internal medicine and am instructor in clinical medicine in the Harvard Medical School, and first assistant visiting physician to the Boston City Hospital, At present I am conducting research work in diseases of the chest. I drive an automobile but do not count it as one of my recreations—it is a necessity. Horseback riding, metal working, and listening to good music, form my amusements, and in the summer I play tennis some—I am not yet too old for that. I am as tall as ever and since I have never attempted to fill nor empty the large loving cup the Class gave me, my habits remain unchanged.”

EDWARD HARTWELL ROGERS

Born at Lexington, 19 May 1870, of George Marcus Rogers (real estate) and Mary Ann Hartwell.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Caroline Elizabeth Heizer at Corning, Iowa, 4 April 1900.
Children:

John, born 3 January 1901.

George Edward, 25 February 1903.

Edgar Heizer, 10 September 1905 (died 24 March 1907).

Alfred Peet, 30 January 1908.

David Frederick, 17 May 1910.

Now practising law at Cambridge.

“ Outside of being actively engaged in the management that takes up nearly all my time, I have nothing especial to report. Incidentally I have read so much about the ‘back to the land’ movement, that I have had an attack of the fever, and have undertaken to raise apples upon a place about twenty miles from Boston. From the experience that I have already gained I firmly believe that old New England can grow apples that will surpass the western fruit in quality if not in color. I have backed up my belief by setting out some five hundred young trees and have nearly one thousand trees on the place. The renovation of an old orchard is expensive, but I find that it pays, through the improvement in the fruit. I am also bucking the lumber trust, but not entirely on the Taft basis, as I have set a couple of thousand young white pine trees, and expect to set out more this year. Perhaps my efforts will be as successful as our honored President's. Who can tell?"

WALTER LINCOLN SANBORN

Born at Newton Center, 28 March 1871, of John Hayes Sanborn (merchant) and Agnes Elizabeth McJannet.

Fitted at Newton High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Fannie Fisher at Ashmont, Massachusetts, 17 April 1907.

Now a stockbroker at Boston.

"I doubt if there is anything of particular interest to be added to the statement in the last previous Report."

LOUIS PECK SANDERS

Born at Helena, Montana 23 October 1869, of Wilbur Fisk Sanders (lawyer) and Harriet Fenn.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Helen Fitzgerald at San Francisco, 18 April 1900. Children:

A daughter, born 9 June 1902 (died in infancy).

Louise Fitzgerald, 12 June 1903 (died 17 February 1904).

Helen Fitzgerald, 12 June 1904.

Wilbur Fisk, 15 December 1905.

Alice Francis, 8 February 1908 (died in infancy).

Jean Geraldine, 12 May 1911.

Now practising law at Butte, Montana.

"I have continued to practice law in Butte, having associated myself with J. Bruce Kremer, Esq., and Alf. C. Kremer, Esq., under the firm name of Kremer, Sanders and Kremer. We now represent several corporations engaged in mining operations in and about Butte, notably the Butte and Superior Copper Company, Ltd., East Butte Copper Mining Company, Butte, Duluth Mining Company, and others recently organized and as yet not regular producers. An occasional trip into the mountains of Glacier Park affords me brief relaxation from the hard labor incident to a busy man."

HUNTINGTON SAVILLE

Born at Boston, 9 November 1870, of Henry Martyn Saville (physician) and Antoinette Hale Carruth.

Fitted at Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anne Pierce Whittier at Boston, 22 May 1900.

Now practising law at Boston.

“ For the past five years I have pegged away at the same vocations and avocations as previously and have, like all non-rolling stones, acquired some moss. Whatever your imagination pictures the moss to be it probably is, so it is unnecessary for me to attempt to analyze it. A motor trip through Wales and southern England, and a brief camping trip in the Maine woods, including climbing Katahdin twice, comprise all my outings worth mentioning. Much of my time and interest these years have gone to helping raise the total of contributions for General Missions from the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts from less than thirty thousand dollars a year to over seventy-three thousand a year. The chief value to me being, as every fellow finds who takes up any such definite piece of work, that it has broadened my own horizon wonderfully. As to the legal profession, the only difficulty is that it is overstocked hereabouts with the '93 vintage, which has a finer flavor and is superior to most, and that makes it impossible with such a lot of good fellows to urge '93 men to get rich quick and then depart this life, leaving me to look after their affairs. One doesn't find this difficulty with other classes which just naturally have to turn to '93.”

FRANK CHARLES SCHRADER

Born at Sterling, Illinois, 6 October 1860, of Christian Schrader (farmer) and Angeline Marie.

Entered from University of Kansas.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Now government geologist at Washington.

“ On leaving Harvard in 1896 he joined the ranks of the United States Geological Survey at Washington, D. C., where he is still engaged as Government geologist in economic lines. He has travelled widely in professional work. The first six years were devoted to making reconnaissance surveys and exploratory examinations of the mineral resources in nearly all parts of Alaska, including the Arctic coast. The remaining eleven summers were devoted to mining geology and allied work in the mountainous portion of the western United States, including nearly all states lying between Mexico and Canada. The last five years includes also extensive examination of mines and properties in connection with Government land classification work for various departments of the Government, the Forest Service, the General Land Office, the Post Office, the Department of Justice, and so forth, and the giving of testimony on the same in the Federal Courts in New York, Chicago, Spokane, Denver, and other centers in the West. His diversion and exercise are travel, riding, driving, camping, tramping, volley ball, hand ball, canoeing, swimming, dancing, and golf. He is a member of the Geological Society of America, the Cosmos Club, and of twelve other scientific societies and clubs. He is a contributor to the reports of the United States Geological Survey and geographic magazines."

CARL LINCOLN SCHURZ

Born at Washington, District of Columbia, 28 February 1871, of Carl Schurz (transportation) and Margaret Meyer.

Fitted with Dr. J. Sachs.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Harriet Tiedemann at Munsey, New York, 20 October 1897.

Now practising law at New York City.

"After graduating from college I entered the New York Law School in New York City. In the spring of 1895 I obtained the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and was admitted to the bar of this state. I then entered the employ of the law firm of Parsons, Shepard and Ogden, and was a clerk in this office until the fall of 1897, when I became the chief attorney of the Legal Aid Society. I held this position until my resignation in the latter part of 1901. After living in Germany, chiefly in Heidelberg, for about a year, I returned to this country, and on January 1, 1903, opened an office of my own at 15 William Street. Since that time I have practiced law in this city, part of the time alone, but since 1907 as a member of the firm of Oakes, Van Amringe and Schurz, which, upon the retirement of Mr. Van Amringe in 1910, became the firm of Oakes and Schurz. I have specialized chiefly in international law, which was the natural result of my having become the attorney for the Imperial German Consulate General in New York. I represent a number of foreign corporations, which brings with it a good deal of international practice. I have recently been appointed general counsel of the Hamburg American Steamship Line. I belong to the Century, University, City and Harvard Clubs in New York, as well as to the Deutscher Verein and Liederkrantz Societies. I was married on October 20, 1897, to Harriet Tiedemann. We have no children."

WALTER [JUDD] SCOTT

Born at Byron, Michigan, 4 September 1865, of Marvin Judd Scott (clergyman) and Loretta Crawford.

Entered from Albion College.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Now Editor of The Daily Silver Belt, Globe, Arizona.

"I would like to let it go over until next time before writing the story of my life. But if it is all the same to you, let me down easy this time. However, if you should ever happen to come to Arizona, hunt me up."

HARRY EDWARD SEARS

Born at Boston, 11 April 1870, of Edward Shailer Sears (journalist) and Belle Wagner.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Myrtle Belle Walker at Beverly, Massachusetts, 28 October 1902. Children:

Norman Walker, born 12 November 1903.

Harry Edward, Jr., 22 August 1906.

Now practising medicine at Beverly.

"Competitor in Fifth Olympiad at Stockholm, Sweden, July, 1912, on United States Revolver Team. Brought home gold medal and wreath, given me by King Gustave. Fine trip over on S. S. 'Finland.' All hands practised daily; the athletes under Mike Murphy, veteran trainer; and the shooters, fencers, swimmers, under the team captains. The rifle and revolver men left the 'Finland' on reaching Antwerp. We went cross-country to save time and get rid of our sea-legs, having glimpses of Belgium, Holland, Germany, and Sweden. After winning our events, we had leisure to enjoy the victories of our track and field men in the Stadium, and the keen competition in fencing, tennis, swimming, horse-back riding, etc."

LANGLEY BARNAS SEARS

Born at Boston, 11 July 1870, of William Barnas Sears (insurance) and Emily Adaline Faunce.

Fitted at Brookline High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Maybelle Tillinghast at Providence, 16 June 1897. Child: Harold Tillinghast, born 5 June 1898.

Now in Congregational ministry at South Deerfield, Mass.

"After leaving my former parish at Charlestown, Mass., I became somewhat of a minister at large, with long supplies at First Congregational Church, Lynn, Bethany Church, Quincy, and First Church, Keene, N. H. At present I am in South Deerfield, the active portion of historic Deerfield. Here is some of the best land in the state and onions and tobacco are the chief crops. We are on the state road about eight miles from Greenfield. Many autoists whiz by, missing a good dinner at the Lathrop and farther on a glimpse at the old relies in Memorial Hall, Deerfield. I am waiting to get my hands into the dirt this summer to see what I can coax to grow. But I will watch my neighbor as he in turn will watch me. Once a week I go to New Haven to take a few lectures at Yale Divinity School and draw books from the library. I heard the boys rehearse their cheers and songs for the football game with Harvard, and then on my next trip the quiet was oppressive. It is a pleasure to see Harvard win now-a-days, and to see another university means to appreciate her the more."

HAROLD INGALLS SEWALL

Born at Boston, 25 February 1871, of William Bull Sewall (merchant) and Lena Ingalls.

Fitted at G. W. C. Noble's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Virginia Simms Evans at Tokyo, Japan, 29 April 1903. Children:

Robley Evans, born 26 March 1904 (died 3 May 1908).

Dorothy Neville, 2 May 1905.

Now raising sugar at Naguabo, Porto Rico.

" I am very busy; more busy than one ought to be in the 'Isle of Enchantment' as the steamship folders call this place. This is largely because the Sugar Industry is in danger and I feel that unless I do something about it the Isle of Enchantment will get a setback. Without our sugar industry the 'Isle' would have to give up its brag about sending more stuff home than all South America and Central America combined. The real trouble is that everyone who entered the sugar business down here made all sorts of money in the manufacturing branch of the business. Naturally they concluded that the way to make still more was to build bigger factories. Nevertheless cane had to be grown for the factories to grind and a sharp competition for lands developed. This is a small island. The factories are large. Today the majority of the Centrales—that's sugar talk for factories—are too big for their districts. They have bought and leased land and contracted for cane at fabulous figures and still haven't enough cane and are paying twice too much for it. Quite a number are in the hands of receivers. Others are wobbling. There's a way out. Make the acre of land grow twice as much cane—or more accurately—sugar than formerly. This simple task is my daily plaything. The game comprises all sorts of interesting things you have noted from time to time in the daily prints. Intensive cultivation, seed selection, fertilization, soil building, irrigation, the new agriculture. This double yield of sugar per acre must be had at no advance over the present cost. As my Japanese boy used to say, 'very difficult.' But it is being done. The peon with the big hoe and the small ambition is being run off the estate. His place is taken by the mule and the cultivator. It has been found expedient to apply to the fields the same business principles used as a matter of course in the commercial and manufacturing branches. This last is a great triumph and is almost regarded as a discovery in some quarters. If twenty per cent. of the fields of a big sugar estate are losing more money than the other eighty per cent. are making, it would be well to know it and refrain from cultivating that twenty per cent. Splendid plan. Yet there are today very many companies whose methods of field accounting make it impossible to say what fields are making and what losing money. Last year I shipped to a certain Central a number of car loads of a certain famous variety of cane. The manager was startled to find that his sugar house could make a ton of sugar from each seven tons of it. He was in the habit of using eleven tons of his own cane. I took from his desk a slip of paper and pencil—they were returned—and showed him that a little saving of $397,000 would result if he could convert all his cane into the variety I had been shipping him. This cane required no more money or time or land or care to grow than his, but it had more of what we are all hunting, sugar. Of course I don't wish to mislead trusting classmates with the impression that its all as easy as that little bit about the $397,000. I couldn't have saved all that for the startled manager myself—this is a generous admission—but I really believe I could have saved him half that amount, if I were careful. This then is my occupation: to try to make two stalks of cane grow where one grew before and to make them contain more sugar than they did before, and to do it more economically than it was done before. When this little job is successfully accomplished, it won't matter if Woodrow does give the laboring man a cheap breakfast and the State of Louisiana a death blow. Receivers will lose their jobs and managers and directors will get more sleep. Before closing I wish to say that the Isle of Enchantment is now but four days from New York and if any ninety-three man wants to learn why it is called that he can come down: If possible I'll show him."

CHARLES GRANT SHAFFER

Born at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, 6 November 1869, of Abraham Shaffer and Elizabeth Diefenderfer.

Entered from Bucknell University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Dora Valesca Becker at New York City, 29 June 1899.

Now school principal at Newark, New Jersey.

No white slip returned.

THOMAS HALL SHASTID

Born at Pittsfield, Illinois, 19 July 1866, of Thomas Wesley Shastid (physician) and Louisa Minerva Hall.

Entered from University of Vermont.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Fannie Fidelia English at Pittsfield, Illinois, 16 May, 1897.

Child:

Louisa Minerva, born 16 February 1901 (deceased).

Now eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist at Marion, Illinois.

“ Positions held at present: Professor Medical History, National Medical College, St. Louis; Expert United States Pension Examiner, eye, ear, nose and throat. Positions formerly held: Associate editor ‘Michigan Law Review’; department editor ‘Bulletin American Academy of Medicine.’ ”

EDGAR DWIGHT SHAW

Born at Leominster, Massachusetts, 22 August 1871, of Francis Henry Shaw and Isabella Rhoda Warfield.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Anna Jane Hill at Brooklyn, 14 January 1897. Children:

Tiny } twins, born 8 May 1904. (Tiny died in infancy).
Dorothy }

Now general news manager Boston Herald and Traveler-Herald.

“ Twenty years of newspaper work span the period since graduation. As a cub reporter I started on the Springfield (Mass.) Union, where the initial assignment for all cub reporters was to get the details of that ‘railroad accident caused by a hot coupling pin.’ It took four years to travel the road to the position of managing editor. An opportunity for a foothold on a metropolitan newspaper came in the offer of the place of secretary to the managing editor of the Boston Journal—C. E. L. Wingate, a Harvard man of ’83. The chance was eagerly grasped. Then followed seven years on the Journal in various positions, the last that of managing editor, following Mr. Wingate’s advancement to the place of general manager. Meanwhile Frank A. Munsey had bought the Journal. At the beginning of 1904 he thought best to transfer me to his Washington paper—the Times. There I spent seven years—half the time as managing editor and half as general manager. After an interim of a few months as general manager of Mr. Munsey’s Philadelphia paper, I broke away from the organization and at the end of 1911 joined the forces of the Boston Herald. My present work is described by the title General News Manager of the Herald and Traveler-Herald. I wrote a friend the other day: ‘Here I am in my old home. I like my work. I like my associates. What more could a man ask?’ That’s the work-a-day side of the twenty years. Out in Winchester there’s a house with Shaw on the front door. Inside there’s a real home, thanks to the little wife who for seventeen years has gone along in the newspaper man's journeyings. For eight years past she has been materially aided by small daughter Dorothy. That's the record in brief. It has been an interesting twenty years, and, on the whole, a fortunate one, I reckon. (You asked for the above information only a little over two months ago, and here it is already!)"

HUBERT GROVER SHAW

Born at Fall River, 20 August 1867, of Orlando Hamilton Shaw (carpenter) and Ursula Gwynneth.

Fitted at Fall River High.

Class Status: A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married Elizabeth Ann de Quedville at Cambridge, 29 June 1893.
Child:

Charles Bunsen, born 5 June 1894.

Now teaching at the High School, Torrington, Connecticut.

"Nothing but just hard work since the last Report."

HOWARD COCKS SHERWOOD

Born at San Francisco, 21 November 1870, of Benjamin Franklin Sherwood (banker) and Almira Theresa Dickinson.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at New York City.

"Am continuing to practice law at 34 Pine Street, New York City, as before. Am enjoying good health and a very fair share of happiness—though still a bachelor."

FRANK PALMER SIBLEY

Born at Chelsea, 15 September 1871, of Arthur Sibley (manufacturer) and Sarah Ann Timmerman.

Fitted at Chelsea High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Married Louie Florence Maria Lyndon at Boston, July 1894. Child:
Helen, born 22 February 1896.

Now on Boston Globe.

"I remain in the employ of the Boston Globe as a reporter, and have had some luck in getting interesting stories to do. My family is no more numerous, but much larger. As for intimate and personal details as requested—I am getting bald on top. I find that as I take part successively in a great textile strike, in the reception of the survivors of a great steamship wreck, in the trial of labor agitators for murder, in a world's series of ball games, in a congress of the chambers of commerce of the world—a growing enjoyment of the role of grinning spectator of human activities—a growing gratitude that I am permitted to see and record things instead of being compelled to do things.”

FRANCIS HINCKLEY SISSON

Born at Galesburg, Illinois, 14 June 1871, of William Pardon Sisson (manufacturer) and Harriet Hinckley.

Entered from Knox College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Grace E—— Lass at Galesburg, 16 June 1897.

Now Secretary of American Real Estate Company, New York City.

“ The record: Reporter and sub-editor on various newspapers, 1893-1899. Editor and part owner of The Evening Mail, Galesburg, Ill., 1899-1903. Editor and part owner of The Herald-Transcript, Peoria, Ill., 1903. Member of staff of McClure's Magazine, New York, 1904-5. Advertising manager of the American Real Estate Company, New York, 1905-1908. Secretary and director of American Real Estate Company, N. Y., 1908-1912. Various offices of minor importance held from time to time. At present: President of the Beta Theta Pi, National College fraternity. President of the Dunwoodie Country Club, Yonkers, N. Y.”

HERBERT BRUSH SMITH

Born at Muncy, Pennsylvania, 16 April 1870, of Lewis Schuyler Smith (merchant) and Mary Rose Crouse.

Fitted at Tilton Grammar School.

Class Status: Special 1889-93.

Now practising law at New York City.

“ The fact is I have very little news. I am still practising law at 40 Wall Street, New York City; still unmarried and can think of nothing I have accomplished which would interest the class. Sorry I can't do better for you.”

HOWARD CASWELL SMITH

Born at New York City, 19 February 1871, of Charles Stewart Smith and Henrietta Haight Caswell.

Fitted with Dr. Callisen.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Katherine Lyall Moën at New York City, 26 October 1898.

Children:

Caswell Moën, born 10 July 1899.

Howard Caswell, Jr., 2 March 1901.

René Moën, 15 August 1904.

St. Clair Moën, 18 September 1908.

Now in banking at New York City.

I bought the 31 rater Sloop Corinthian and went in for boat racing. It was a new job for me and I found as much to learn of the fine points of the game as ever I found in football and I had a wonderful boat to work with. The Yacht Clubs on the western end of Long Island Sound combine into a Racing Association and give an annual prize. I missed the championship in 1911 by 1-2 of 1 per cent., but I nailed it to the mast in 1912, with the Crimson banner flying high. So I have been baptized in a noble sport and am just beginning to learn something about it."

ROBERT KEATING SMITH

Born at Brooklyn, 2 August 1865, of George Robert Keating Smith (manufacturer) and Anna Amelia Gooch.

Entered from Stevens Institute of Technology.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Bertha Helena Wiles at Albany, 17 June 1896. Children:

Mabel Wiles, born 8 December 1898.

Helen Lord, 1 January 1902.

Now in Episcopal ministry at Westfield, Massachusetts.

" I find that I live sort of a threefold life, ecclesiastical, civic and private, and I don't know which I like best. Am busy in each, perhaps too busy in the first two. Ecclesiastical: My little church here is a mission among working people in the town and farmers within a radius of ten miles. There are 450 Bohemians in this town and I have a choir of Bohemian boys which I train myself. I am Dean of the Springfield Convocation, editor of the Diocesan 'Pastoral Staff,' Chaplain to the Bishop, member of the Commission for the Department of New England on fraternal relations between the Oriental Churches and our own Church. Civic: I am Chairman of the School Committee, chairman of the Play Ground Commission, and have just inaugurated an Industrial School in this town. I was toastmaster at the last annual banquet of the Board of Trade. Private: My daughters are growing up to be great company, the oldest is now in the high school. I have a summer home and little farm of fourteen acres near the shore in Westerly, R. I., where I spend a month gardening, boating, swimming and walking with the family. Here in the spring I enjoy trout fishing in our Berkshire Hills. In July I have been spending a week or two with sleeping bag and small tent-fly and cooking equipment, walking short distances and camping at night wherever I happen to be. Sometimes I catch more mosquitos than fish (but I like it). Another thing—in my old age I have taken again to bicycle riding!”

WAYNE PRESCOTT SMITH

Born at Latrobe, Pennsylvania, 3 November 1866, of George W. Smith and Mary Hullenbaugh.

Entered from University of Wooster.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Lucy Maud Alsanson at San José, California, April 1898.

Now teaching and lecturing at Los Angeles, California.

“ Graduate School, University of Chicago, Honorary Fellow and Lecturer in Philosophy, 1894-95; Graduate School, 1898-99. Clark University, 1912, Education Department. Degrees in course: A.M., Ph.D., University of Wooster.”

TOWNSEND HODGES SOREN

Born at Dorchester, 28 November 1868, of Jonathan Wales Soren (accountant) and Harriet Amanda Brown.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Gara Mabel Parker at Dorchester, 5 June 1901. Children: Parker, born 14 March 1902.

Garafelia Tucker, 26 December 1905.

Now in electrical work at Schenectady, New York.

Alas, nit!

FRANK ENOS SOULE

Born at Freeport, Maine, 14 January 1869, of Enos Corydon Soule (shipping) and Helen Louisa Gore.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Special, 1888-91. I. Law, 1891-92.

Married Bessie May Pace at Boston, 21 June, 1912.

Now with Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company at Boston.

“ Our genial Secretary said his first request for reports was his last, but like Sarah Bernhardt, Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner and other famous ball players, he is now out with a flyer giving us until March 1. I suppose by answering now I shall lose the opportunity of seeing his next work of art, giving us until April 1. However, married June 21, 1912, to Bessie M. Pace and now living the simple life in Brookline—48 Englewood Avenue. Travels few and far between. Did enjoy a trip to New Haven last November—very satisfactory—fine game of football. Suggestion! If the class goes as far from Boston, as Lynn, during their reunion, provide Tripp with a compass or give him Collamore as an escort. I am still with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, at 99 Portland Street, Boston. Sam did not furnish enough paper so that I could write more.”

HORACE CLAFLIN SOUTHWICK

Born at Brooklyn, 28 June 1871, of John Claflin Southwick and Ella Mather Clapp.

Fitted with E. Phillips.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now living at New York City.

“ My life has been quite uneventful. I enjoyed the meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs last spring, and hope to be present at meetings in the future.”

FRED MAURICE SPALDING

Born at Pawtucket, 31 May 1870, of Charles Hubbard Spalding (clergyman) and Annie Eliza Carpenter.

Fitted at Berkeley School, Boston.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married (1) Adelaide Frances Lecompte at Boston, 11 October 1905 (died 30 October 1906). Child:

Francis Lecompte, born 30 October 1906.

Married (2) Elise Alice Jecko at Cambridge, 9 March 1909. Child: Fred Maurice, Jr., 24 October 1910.

Now practising medicine at Boston.

“ My everyday routine is that of a physician. My work is not so exacting perhaps as that of a general practitioner, but hospital work keeps me well tied down to the vicinity of Boston. I expect soon to be able to curtail some of this work and shall then hope to have more freedom to travel. I certainly want to see something of the world before I leave it. Since the last Report I have been elected a member of The American Ophthalmological Society. The following hospital appointments have been received: Ophthalmic Surgeon, Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary; Assistant Ophthalmologist, Massachusetts General Hospital. I have been made Instructor in Ophthalmology at the Harvard Medical School.

HARTWELL BALLOU SPAULDING

Born at Milford, Massachusetts, 11 October 1870, of Benjamin Hartwell Spaulding (manufacturer) and Elvira Daniels Ballou.

Fitted at Milford High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Married Anna Thwing Whitney at Milford, 6 December 1894. Child: Almon Whitney, born 30 September 1895.

Now in hat business at Boston.

“ No important changes in my life since last Report. I am still with Collins and Fairbanks Company, Boston, and live at 38 Lindsey Street, Dorchester. My son is a senior in the Dorchester High School and intends to enter Massachusetts Agricultural College next fall. I have few interests outside of business and my home.”

JOSIAH EDWARD SPURR

Born at Gloucester, 1 October 1870, of Alfred Sears Spurr (mariner) and Oratia Eliza Snow.

Fitted at Gloucester High.

Class Status: Joined class Junior year, from '92.

Married Sophie Clara Burchard at Washington, District of Columbia, 18 January 1899. Children:

Edward Burchard, born 2 February 1900.

John Constantine, 5 July 1901.

William Alfred, 24 December 1905.

Now vice-president and advising engineer of Tonopah Mining Company of Nevada, Bullitt Bldg., Philadelphia.

“ My life has been intensely full and absorbed since leaving Harvard. The science of geology, especially that of ore-deposits, engrossed my whole attention for many years, the work being done under government auspices (United States Geological Survey). Real exploration (in 1896 and 1898), in Alaska, also for the federal government, diversified this pursuit, as also did a remarkably interesting and enlightening experience as chief mining adviser for the Sultan of Turkey, and considerable time spent in travel and study in Europe. Finally the high cost of living, combined with that of a growing family, forced me into more active walks of life, in which, however, I have found equal pleasure and education. Beginning as chief geologist for one of the most powerful mining groups in this country, I passed on to the formation of a corps of consulting mining engineers; and passed from this again to become vice-president in charge of mining and advising engineers to one of the wealthy and conservative mining companies. This new arrangement (existent now a year) has enabled me to spend more of my time with my beloved family than formerly; at the same time, it keeps me as busy as ever. The last five years have been largely spent 'in the field' examining and studying mines, mainly in the United States and Mexico."

FRANCIS UPHAM STEARNS

Born at Haverhill, 12 January 1871, of Charles Augustus Stearns (electrician) and Mary Elizabeth Burnham.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lucie Kirtland Macdonald at New York City, 6 November 1901. Children:

Francis Upham, Jr., born 27 May 1904.

Ranald Macdonald, 27 November 1906.

Charles Burnham, 30 May 1909.

Now in commission business at New York City.

"In September, 1893, I entered the employ of J. H. Lane and Company, Boston, in the dry goods commission business. Moved to New York in May, 1897, for the same firm. In September, 1898, I entered the employ of A. D. Juillard & Company, New York, dry goods commission merchants, and in 1905 I became associated with Converse & Company, New York, where I remained until January, 1911, when I organized F. U. Stearns and Company, dry goods commission. Since November, 1905, I have also been treasurer of the Renfrew Manufacturing Company, Adams, Mass. I live in New York in the winter and in Adams in the summer."

WALLACE NELSON STEARNS

Born at Chagrin Falls, Ohio, 26 August 1866, of Horatio Nelson Stearns (clergyman) and Adeline Munn.

Entered from Ohio Wesleyan University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Now Professor of Biblical Literature at Fargo College, N. D.

"The year after graduation he served as clerk to Professor Thayer, the lexicographer, and to the New Testament revision committee. The following year he entered Boston University for work in ancient history, and philosophy, serving also as tutor in Greek. He was accorded his degree in philosophy in the spring of 1899, and the next fall returned to Ohio for work.

He taught three years in Ohio Wesleyan as instructor and assistant professor and one year as professor in Baldwin-Wallace College. In this period he spent a summer quarter in the University of Chicago, and was for three summers an instructor at the Chautauqua Assembly. In the former school he organized, and for two years directed, the gymnasium work. In 1903 he was called to Chicago on the organization of the Religious Education Association, serving as financial secretary. In that first year the revenues increased from one hundred and fifty dollars the first month to two thousand dollars the eighth and last month of his term. Accepting an opening in Northwestern University he served as president's secretary, and later as University examiner. He held a similar position in the University of Illinois. Mr. Stearns has been an advocate of University Extension, and in the six years of his residence in North Dakota has given more than two hundred public addresses and lectures besides sermons, most of them in the three years of his term in Wesley College. For a number of years he has been interested also in the progress of the Sunday School and has published numerous articles on Sunday School organization. For some time he has been superintendent of teacher-training in this state, reorganizing and aiding in the forwarding of the work. There are now more than 600 students enrolled, and the work is directed by a committee including representatives from several of the higher educational institutions of the state. He has published several books, a supplement to Green's Small New Testament Lexicon, a 'Manual of Patrology,' 'Graeco-Jewish Fragments,' also primers on Hebrew history and Hebrew private life. He is at present engaged on a couple of historical monographs. The summer of 1911 he spent in Oxford University gathering material for work of which a part has appeared. He is a member of numerous societies, as the Egypt Exploration Fund of which he is a vice-president and state lecturer, Palestine Exploration Fund of which he is an honorary secretary, Archaeological Institute of America under whose auspices he is an occasional lecturer, American Philological Society, American Society of Biblical Literature, American Historical Association, and Society of Biblical Archaeology (England). He is also a member of the Sons of the Revolution and of the Authors' Club (London). The season of 1912 he spent at Berlin, carrying on study preparatory to future work."

JOSEPH HENRY STEINHART

Born at New York City, 19 July 1872, of Israel Steinhart (merchant) and Emilie Schubart.

Fitted with Dr. J. Sachs.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Now building contractor at Havana.

RALPH LESLIE STEVENS

Born at Cambridge, 10 November 1870, of Abraham Walter Stevens (printer) and Elizabeth Ellen Whitney.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Maria Cary Clarke at Lexington, Massachusetts, 3 October 1900. Children:

Ruth, born 8 November 1902.

Alexander Clarke, 17 February 1904.

Barrett Whitney, 21 May 1907.

Now with William Whitman and Company, dry-goods commission house, at Boston.

my scholarly appearance to the extent that he addressed me as 'Doctor'! While my vanity was for the moment immensely gratified, think what this means for a man engaged in mere mercantile affairs. With such a handicap to contend with do you wonder that I have not more to contribute to the Class Report."

HENRY HARDING STICKNEY

Born at Chelsea, 20 May 1870, of Joseph Wingate Stickney (merchant) and Harriet Harding.

Fitted at Chelsea High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now manufacturing at Boston.

"My life line runs along on a pretty level stretch, no great dips, and only a few peaks. I have enjoyed business experience after some years of newspaper training, the former being what I always wanted, the latter having given me, however, some helpful discipline. Very sorry I can't give you an exhilarating chapter, but it's not in my biography."

GEORGE EDGAR STOKER

Born at Topeka, Kansas, 16 April 1871, of George Cookman Stoker (farmer) and Celestine Easter.

Entered from Kansas State Agricultural College.

Class Status: Special, 1891-92. Joined Class Senior year.

Married Edith Isbell at Topeka, 16 June 1897. Child:

Eleanor Ray, born 4 August 1898.

Now practising law at San Francisco.

No report vouchsafed.

ARTHUR PARKER STONE

Born at Groton, Massachusetts, 16 January 1870, of Valancourt Stone and Ellen Anna Mason.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Alice Holman Stratton at Cambridge, 26 September 1899.

Children:

Ruth Sybil, born 15 December 1900.

Sybil Alice, 17 March 1904.

Anne Frances, 4 March 1908.

Ellen Drusilla, 10 December 1912.

Now practising law in Boston, and Special Justice Third District Court of Eastern Middlesex.

“Living in Belmont and practising law in Boston. That is not the most exciting existence imaginable. During the last three years in order to vary the monotony I have given a course in English at the University (English 18). I think I may say the undergraduate is able to inject some spice in an otherwise placid existence. As you urge us to be perfectly frank, I will add that I teach that particular subject very well. The course has increased in numbers since I have given it and it seems to be particularly fitted for a number of men whose scholastic attainments are not high but who are quite anxious to keep off probation. I never give anything below C in the course. Under such excellent instruction even the most stupid student is able to get a C. Most of the boys spell very well indeed, and some of them have an elementary knowledge of the principles of grammar. There are no examinations in the course. But they write five forensics; that is to say they hand in five forensics. I got one a few days ago that reminded me of the one I borrowed from Roy Martin way back in 1891. I do not know where Martin got it. I think it has improved with age. N. B.—English 18 is not a snap.”

WILLIS WHITTEMORE STOVER

Born at Charlestown, 19 March 1870, of Augustus Whittemore Stover (Bank Treasurer) and Elizabeth Maria Rugg.

Fitted at Boston Latin.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Alice Beswick at Charlestown, 9 October 1901.

Now practising law in Boston.

“After completing my special course at Harvard, I put in the next two years in journalism, holding various positions on the editorial staff of the old Boston Traveler. In 1893, viewing with alarm the lack of ability and talent in the legal profession, I entered the Boston University School of Law and got my LL.B. in 1896. Was admitted to the bar in Suffolk County, October 2, 1896 and have since practised law in Boston. Was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States October 14, 1901. Served in the war with Spain as captain of Company A, 5th Massachusetts Infantry, U. S. Volunteers. Upon my return from the service I formed a law partnership with Colonel E. Leroy Sweetser of the 8th Massachusetts Infantry, which still continues to do business. My recreation has been, for more than twenty-five years, the state militia, and on June 18, 1908, I became Lieutenant Colonel of the 5th Regiment, my present rank."

JESSE ISIDOR STRAUS

Born at New York City, 25 June 1872, of Isidor Straus (merchant) and Ida Blun.

Fitted with Dr. J. Sachs.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Irma S. Nathan at New York City, 20 November 1895. Children:

Beatrice Nathan, born 27 September 1897.

Jesse Isidor, Jr., 13 January 1900.

Robert Kenneth, 22 October 1905.

Now of R. H. Macy and Company, at New York City.

"I have nothing to add to the statement contained in the fourth report. I am still active, more active, in business at the same old stand. I hope that I shall be able to arrange matters so that I can attend the Reunion next June."

LIONEL ALEXANDER BURNET STREET

Born at Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia, 29 September 1869, of Jerome Charles Street (physician) and Frances Margaret Lane.

Fitted at Victoria Collegiate Commercial School, Douglas, Isle of Man, and with tutors.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Mrs. Shields (Emily Monteaux Hildreth) at Campobello, New Brunswick, 24 August 1897, with son, William E. Shields.

Now practising medicine at Bangkok, Siam. Physician to the Household of Her Majesty the Queen of Siam. Physician and Surgeon to the Royal Seminary; also Surgeon to the Siam Electricity Co. Partnership with Dr. E. Reyttter, Phys. in Ord. to the King of Siam.

"Since last report, resigned the Medical Directorship of the Equitable Life Assurance Society at Yokohama, sold out and came to Siam for the purpose of prosecuting certain studies in tropical diseases. Taken into partnership last year by Dr. Reyttter, Physician in Ordinary to the King of Siam, and have built up a lucrative practice both medical and surgical, but for reasons of health am meditating selling out and going to China in the near future. Hope within a measurable distance of time to be able to return to the Homeland and renew old friendships before finally settling down where I can cast a vote, and attend to the medical needs of American citizens."

WILLIAM JAMES HENRY STRONG

Born at Council Bluffs, 16 October 1869, of William Barstow Strong and Abby Jane Moore.

Fitted at Boston Latin

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Martha Almira Leavitt at Beloit, 26 June 1901. Children:
Abby Rutha, born 16 October 1902.
William Leavitt, 24 November 1907.
John, 19 February 1911.

Now in investments at Des Moines.

Nothing comes with it.

FRANK RAYMOND STUBBS

Born at Cambridge, 6 February 1872, of Joseph Andrew Stubbs (merchant) and Mary Smith Wiley.

Fitted at Cambridge Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ethel May Dow at Cambridge, 19 July 1898. Children:
Joseph, born 28 April 1899.
Eleanor Dow, 20 December 1902.
Frank Raymond, Jr., 12 July 1909.

Now practising medicine at Newton.

"Nothing new."

FREDERICK JOSEPH TAUSSIG

Born at Brooklyn, 26 October 1872, of Joseph S. Taussig (banker) and Mary Louise Cuno.

Fitted at Smith Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Florence Gottschalk at St. Louis, 4 May 1907. Child:
Mary, born 21 February 1911.

Now practising medicine at St. Louis.

"Graduated in medicine from Washington University Medical School in 1898. Have been specializing in gynecology and obstetrics since 1902. Have just passed the forty-year mark and must say the fates have been very kind to me thus far. I believe the two greatest blessings in life are a happy married life with children and success in one's life work. I trust I will have the time and energy to obtain the last-named of these two, but the road is a long and weary one and the time is more than half spent. But that is only the more reason to strive the harder during the time still remaining."

JOHN CLARENCE TAUSSIG

Born at St. Louis, 5 February 1872, of John J. Taussig (banker) and Leonore Taussig.

Entered from Washington University.

Now practising law at St. Louis.

“Lawyer, member Public Recreation Commission of the City of St. Louis, member executive committee of Legal Aid Society of St. Louis Bar Association. For two years a city father—only kind I’ll ever be I fear—as member and speaker pro tem of House of Delegates. Sometimes proclaimed as ‘champion of the common people’; other times denounced as ‘tool of the vested interests’. Very interesting and enjoyable work. All for the munificent salary of $300 a year. Easy conscience permits frequent desertions from office on week days and from church on Sundays for golf and tennis. Still young enough to prefer the latter. Altogether a quiet and peaceful citizen.”

WILLIAM OSGOOD TAYLOR

Born at Nashua, 8 January 1871, of Charles Henry Taylor (editor) and Georgianna Olivia Davis.

Fitted with J. W. H. Walden.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Moseley at Boston, 28 March 1894. Children:

Moseley, born 30 January 1895.

Eunice, 20 December 1897.

Margaret, 3 September 1900.

Elizabeth, 24 March 1906.

William Davis, 2 April 1908.

Now Business Manager and Assistant Treasurer of the Boston Globe.

“I am still connected with the Boston Globe and devote all of my time to its interests. Moseley, the class baby, has passed sixteen points for Harvard and expects to enter college this fall as a member of the class of 1917. He was 18 years old on January 30 of this year.”

HARRY LORENZO TEETZEL

Born at Milwaukee, 18 June 1870, of Lorenzo Harry Teetzel (merchant) and Frances Grant.

Fitted at Milwaukee Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now music teacher and writer at Milwaukee, Wis.

"I am still doing duty at the same old stand—teaching piano and singing. I have not done any musical criticism for two years and believe me, the next Milwaukee paper that wants my services in this line has got to come across with the coin. (I learned that expression from Barry Wendell in English A). I note your injunction to be neither brief nor modest—I will have to be brief as there is little to note and it is just as well to be modest in not recounting a number of real interesting things that have happened. Anyway, I am aiming for a nice country place, not too far from business. I have by this time accumulated two and one-half cubic feet of compositions which are of no special use except to appeal to my sense of humor when some band leader or orchestra director tries to play one of them at sight in a concert. Well, good luck to everybody!"

FREDERICK TOWNSEND

Born at Albany, 28 October 1871, of Frederick Townsend and Sarah Rathbone.

Fitted at Albany Academy.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Harriet Davis Fellowes at New York City, 17 April 1911.
Child:

Sarah Rathbone, born 13 July 1912.

Now practising law at Albany.

"Still plugging away in the service of her whom Swelley Bangs always referred to as 'our Mistress, the Law.' Member of the firm of Macy, Cooper and Townsend. Following the example of so many Bostonians I have become a suburbanite, and may now be observed daily, driving my humble motor between town and country, hardly to be discerned among the bundles."

DERRICK ANTHONY TE PASKE

Born at Greenleafston, Minnesota, 15 October 1868, of Henry John Te Paske (farmer) and Gezina Tammel.

Entered from Iowa College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Agnes Dykstra at Sioux Center, Iowa, 2 July 1903.

Now practising law at Sioux Center.

"Since my last report, for two years more I dignified the office of town burgomaster, as watch dog of treasury, and on a platform of 'lid down.' Well, we got her spiked down reasonably solid. During this time my good wife, under my tutelage, completed a course of study, and she successfully ran the gauntlet of our Supreme Court, and was admitted to the practice of law, a la Iowa. I enclose a letter head, corroborating the allegation as to her authority rather than showing any attempt at extensive practice. (This item is achievement mostly by proxy). During 1910 the firm of Te Paske and Te Paske wandered about the Old World some. Great Britain, Holland, and Germany had the pleasure of our acquaintance—Ober Ammergau being the ultima thule. Since my former confession I bought into the First National Bank of this place, and hold down the jobs of director and vice-president. Our main activity is putting up shelters and provision for wet weather, late in the fall of the year. Have recently moved into my new office which was designed by your humble servant, and the fee title to which is in him. We are vain enough to claim as fine a country law office as there is out doors in these wilds. I may have told you before that in 1908 I 'also ran' for the State Senate; but Iowa has been obliged to struggle along without my guardianship."

LOUIS BARTLETT THACHER

Born at Yarmouth, Massachusetts, 12 May 1867, of Henry Charles Thacher (merchant) and Martha Bray.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Special, 1889-92. With '95, 1892-93. A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married Delia Aimée Tudor at Boston, 8 October 1907. Children:

Elizabeth Tudor, born 4 March 1909.

Henry Charles, 6 April 1910.

Louis Bartlett, Jr., 23 November 1911.

Now manufacturing shoes at Boston.

"Since our last report I am no longer President of the Davis Boot and Shoe Company, as that corporation has gone out of business; but I am a partner in Thacher & Company, which firm has taken over the assets of the Davis Boot and Shoe Company. Thacher and Company controls the Columbia Shoe Company of Richmond, Virginia, and the Victoria Shoe Company of East Boston, and has just erected a five story concrete building for the Virginia Shoe Company at Richmond, Virginia. I am still the active trustee of the H. C. Thacher estate, with offices at 131 State Street, Boston. I see more of my classmates than I did five years ago, for when Ralph Stevens felt he could no longer serve as steward of the New England Association of Harvard '93 I was elected in his place. While the office means a little work, it has one real compensation: I see more of my classmates. Last January I went to Egypt and had a most delightful six weeks in that interesting country. I found the climate of upper Egypt at Assouan, at the first cataract, almost ideal, with constant sunshine, little wind, a very low humidity, and the thermometer about 70 degrees during the day and 50 degrees at night. I live in the winter at 81 Beacon Street, Boston, and I have a summer home at Yarmouthport, and for the autumn months I usually go to my farm at Hancock, New Hampshire. While I still belong to a number of clubs, I find that much of my leisure time is given to my home life. I have three children—Elizabeth Tudor, Henry Charles, and Louis Bartlett, Jr., who was born November 23, 1911."

RUFUS KEMBLE THOMAS

Born at Boston, 30 August 1870, of Alexander Thomas (physician) and Margaret Atwood Williams.

Fitted at J. P. Hopkinson's.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Now with the United Fruit Company, Costa Rica.

"Still with U. F. Company, in Costa Rica."

WILLIAM LELAND THOMPSON

Born at Troy, New York, 4 April 1871, of William Augustus Thompson (merchant) and Harriette Clarkson Crosby.

Fitted at Hatch and Hinckley's Albany Academy.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90. With '94, 1890-91. Joined Class Junior year.

Married Martha Groome at Philadelphia, 6 January 1909. Children: William Leland, born 4 December 1909.

John Groome, 11 March 1912.

Now President of J. L. Thompson Sons and Company, wholesale druggists, at Troy.

"Since the last report my two sons William Leland Thompson, Jr., and John Groome Thompson have been born. They are two sturdy little chaps started well on the way to Harvard. To make this a possibility I am working harder than ever and seldom leave the little town of Troy. However, have some time once in a while to look after the educational life of the city, being President of the Board of Education. Since the death of my father ten years ago I have succeeded to most of his positions on boards, directorates of banks, etc., and have thus had an interest in affairs that has made living a pleasure. For diversions I ride, drive, motor, and play tennis, to say nothing of running a farm seven miles from town, where we live eight months of the year. This last is the best sport of all and gives a business man more of interest, change and health than anything else I know of, to say nothing of being wonderful to raise future sprinters and centre rushers."

FREDERICK CHARLES THWAITS

Born at Milwaukee, 24 May 1871, of William Thwaits and Fannie Elizabeth Tasker.

Entered from University of Wisconsin.

Class Status: Joined Class Senior year, from '94.

Now practising law at Milwaukee.

"An unmarried man living in Milwaukee, cannot, by the nature of things, have much to say about himself that will be of interest to his class mates. With the exception of serving a three-year term as a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin, my life has contained little that would be of interest to the readers of this report. This experience tended to increase my respect for Harvard and her ways. I brought to my work Harvard ideals, but the application of these ideals I found to be a difficult matter in an institution as closely allied to politics as the University of Wisconsin. Thank God that Harvard is free to do her work with the single-minded purpose embodied in her motto 'Veritas', without regard to political parties or factions! I surprised some of my friends in the fall of 1912 by joining the Progressive Party. I was nominated for presidential elector, but as Roosevelt ran third in Wisconsin I did not have the opportunity to cast my electoral vote for him. I have recently declined an appointment as assistant district attorney, as the work would not be to my liking. Had an interesting trip last summer to Labrador and stopped over in New York for a few days at the Harvard Club, where I occupied the room furnished by our class. This room is a delight to every '93 Harvard man. Am president of the American Whist League at the present time. To the married members of our class I extend my sympathies and congratulations."

ARCHIBALD READ TISDALE

Born at Walpole, Massachusetts, 12 August 1870, of Francis Atrides Tisdale (farmer) and Katharine Jane Barrett.

Fitted at St. Mark's.

Now practising law at Boston.

"The practice of law, in Boston, has never become the theme of a novel, hence my dearth of material for the Class Secretary. No moving picture concern finds it profitable to record, on its films, the muscular activities of a Union Boat Club squash racquet club, the tremblings of a Footlight Club amateur thespian, nor the struggles of a tyro with the tango or the grapevine twist. A snapshot of an imbecile auditor at a Thursday evening concert of the Harvard Musical Association would be made by no metropolitan reporter. No sculptor would dent his clay before the apparition of an ignoramus caught in a critic's attitude, before a Tarbell or a Paxton, at the St. Botolph Club. Since, in my leisure hours, I fill all these specifications, I must now precipitately retreat. The limelight hurts my eyes."

HOWE TOTTEN

Born at Washington, District of Columbia, 11 March 1870, of Enoch Totten (lawyer) and Mary Eliza Howe.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Priscilla Stearns at Washington, 16 May 1906. Children:
Elinor Alice, born 17 May 1908.
Enoch Howe, 1 June 1909.
Priscilla Stearns, 29 May 1911.

Now farming and stock-raising at Baldwin, Md.

"I was married in 1906, bought a large farm in Virginia near Mount Vernon and Gunston Hall, and enjoyed the simple life until 1910, when the District of Columbia established a jail in the Commonwealth of Virginia, so negligently operating it that I was compelled to abandon my home, which is now a white elephant on my hands, since I cannot keep a tenant there even rent free. After a year spent in Washington, D. C., I bought another large farm in the Long Green Valley of Baltimore County, Md., in which I have made a good start at my vocation of farming and my avocation of breeding Great Dane dogs, Percheron horses, and Berkshire hogs. I have ample quarters here for almost any crowd, and as I am immediately on the automobile road from Baltimore to Philadelphia, which bounds my farm on west and north, I shall be glad to welcome any classmates who may be motoring by. Half way between Belair and Towsontown, any one who reads this may find plenty of gasoline, tools and a pretty fair mechanic on the farm."

EDWARD SANDS TOWNSEND

Born at Chelsea, 12 December 1869, of True Whitmore Townsend (real estate) and Susan Elizabeth Colby.

Fitted at Somerville High.

Class Status: Left Junior year. Law School, 1892-95.

Married Georgie Dunlap Sanborn at Somerville, 17 February 1897.

Children:

Charles Edward Sanborn, born 7 May 1898.

Newell Colby, 27 January 1902.

Clara Gary, 22 February 1905.

Edith Helen, 25 November 1907.

Now practising law at Boston.

"Am still working at my profession and have also taken up the fascinating study of diamonds and other precious stones, both for pleasure and profit, having become very well acquainted with gem minerals."

WILLIS MERRICK TOWNSEND

Born at Peterboro, New Hampshire, 30 January 1870, of Charles Horace Townsend (merchant) and Josephine Carolilla Fairbanks.

Fitted at Murdock School.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Harriette Ellen Stone at Melrose Highlands, 7 October 1897.

Children:

Frances Elizabeth, born 10 May 1899. (d. 11 May 1899.)

Miriam, 2 November 1901.

Felicia, 26 May 1912.

Now practising medicine at Melrose Highlands.

"One year is much the same as another with me. A practice which has been of a good healthy growth ever since I settled here has been my good fortune. For the last few years I have given much attention to tubercular diseases with what my friends are pleased to call most happy results. An occasional trip to Bermuda, the Pacific Coast, the Rockies, and other sections of our country, to say nothing of the class dinner in New York, has been a diversion in the course of a professional life. Take it all in all it has been a satisfactory and profitable twenty years. We live quietly, fond as ever of a trip to the lakes and woods of Maine for fish and game, and I can't see in spite of my gray hairs that I am any older than when I left college."

BERNARD WALTON TRAFFORD

Born at Westport, Massachusetts, 2 July 1871, of William Bradford Trafford and Rachel Mott Davis.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Leonora Brooks Borden at Fall River, 5 June 1901. Children:

Leonora, born 14 June 1902.

Rachel, 17 July 1903.

Bernard Walton, Jr., 30 April 1905.

Annette, — 1909.

Now banker at Boston.

"Since graduation have been employed up to last July in the Bell Telephone System. For three and a half years, 1907-1911, was vice-president and general manager of Michigan State Telephone Company, at that time a company affiliated with but not financially controlled by the American Company. In 1911, the Michigan Company passed under control of American Company, and I became commercial vice-president of the five Bell Companies operating in the Middle West with headquarters in Chicago. Last July, resigned to accept vice-presidency of First National Bank of Boston, which job began in September, 1912. My only connection with 'Telephone' is as director of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. July and August, 1912, spent with the family in Europe, mostly in Switzerland, mountain-climbing."

JOSHUA DAMON UPTON

Born at North Reading, Massachusetts, 17 June 1870, of John Killam Upton (farmer) and Elizabeth Damon.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Edith Balch at Brookline, 23 October 1901. Children:

John Balch, born 8 February 1903.

Eleanor, 8 March 1905.

Joshua Damon, Jr., 12 May 1911.

Now practising law at Boston.

“Practicing law in Boston. On April 25, 1910, appointed Acting Chief of Ordnance in Massachusetts Militia with rank of colonel, and since then, as indeed theretofore, have done much work intended to increase the efficiency of our troops in the use of their weapons. As an incident to this work I have for the last three years trained rifle teams to represent Massachusetts in National and other interstate matches. I was in 1911 at Camp Perry, Ohio, selected as captain of the first All National Guard rifle team. Am a director of the National Rifle Association of America. In all of this I feel that I am contributing something to the country, but my general achievements seem discouragingly small and I am beginning to transfer my hopes to the next generation, augmented by Joshua Damon Upton, Jr., who began to buck the line May 12, 1911.”

THOMAS WAYLAND VAUGHAN

Born at Jonesville, Texas, 20 September 1870, of Samuel Floyd Vaughan (physician) and Annie Rebecca Hope.

Entered from Tulane University.

Class Status: I. Graduate School, 1892-93; A.B. 1893.

Married Dorothy Quincy Upham at Washington, District of Columbia, 22 March 1909. Child:

Caroline Ely, born 30 August 1911.

Now in geological research at Washington.

“Since the summer of 1908 I have continued as geologist in charge of Coastal Plain Investigations of the United States Geological Survey. Custodian of Madreporarian corals in the United States National Museum, an investigator in the Carnegie Institution of Washington. The Coastal Plain investigations, which have been largely conducted in coöperation with the state geological surveys, have covered the parts of the Atlantic and Gulf Coastal and the Mississippi Embayment states underlain by geologic formations of post-Paleozoic age. The field studies as planned in 1907 should be completed in 1913. The direction of the work has necessitated extensive travel through the eastern and southern states, as far west as the Mexican border. My duties in the United States National Museum have been curatorial work on collections. In 1908, I began under the auspices of the Carnegie Institution of Washington a series of investigations of the corals and of the geology of coral reef areas. These researches have been conducted in Florida and the Bahamas, and will be extended to the Pacific Ocean. In 1911 I spent a month in the Canal Zone, Panama, making geologic studies in conjunction with the commission geologist. In December, 1912, I was elected Research Associate of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, so as to enable me to extend my researches on the ecology, life history, etc., of corals and on the geology of coral reef areas, and to complete studies of the geology of the borders of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. In 1911, I was complimented by being elected a Correspondent of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. On March 22, 1909, I was married in Washington to Dorothy Quincy Upham, of Salem, Massachusetts. We have one child, Caroline Ely, born August 30, 1911, at Beverly, Massachusetts. The health of the family is in general good."

ENOCH HOWARD VICKERS

Born in Washington County, Maryland, 14 March 1869, of William Vickers (farmer) and Jerusha Mullen.

Entered from West Virginia University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Kiyo Nellie Nishigawa at Tokyo, Japan, 20 December 1899.
Children:

Fannie Clay, born 23 December 1900.

Kate Alethea, 29 January 1902.

Walter William Howard, 1 August 1904.

Now Professor of Economics and Sociology at West Virginia University.

"Despite the secretary's cordial and urgent invitation to 'be neither brief nor modest', I feel that one who 'entered Senior' and became a 'College House grind' should not claim much space in the Class Report. After attaining the Harvard A.M. (1894), I remained at Harvard a third year, then spent three years studying in Europe, chiefly at Berlin and Paris. In 1898 I went to Tokyo, Japan, as Professor of Economics in Keiogijuku University, and held that position till December, 1910. A seven-month vacation in 1907 enabled me to revisit Harvard and marvel at the strides of development there in the intervening years. I left a comfortable place and pleasant associations in Japan to become Professor of Economics and Sociology in West Virginia University—partly moved by the hope that my son might grow up in his own country and get in line for what Harvard may give him. Among the pleasant incidents connected with my departure from Japan was the receipt from the late Emperor of Japan of the Fourth Class Order of the Rising Sun; a special letter of thanks from the Foreign Minister, Count Komura, for services rendered to Japan in educational work; a letter of appreciation, in beautiful Japanese character on the University diploma parchment, formally voted by the Council of Keiogijuku University; exquisite presentation souvenirs from actual and from former students taught by me at Keiogijuku; election to honorary life membership in the Asiatic Society of Japan, which society I had long served, first as honorary corresponding secretary, then as vice-president. Such incidents were to me precious evidences of appreciation for services rendered in various directions during the twelve-year residence in Tokyo. Membership in the Harvard Club of Japan, which honored me with various posts, including that of president, was a large source of pleasure during my stay in Tokyo, especially because it gave pleasant contact with many Harvard men who visited Japan."

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD

Born at Wiesbaden, Germany, 13 March 1872, of Henry Villard (railroads) and Fanny Garrison.

Fitted with J. H. Morse.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Julia Breckinridge Sandford at Athens, Georgia, 18 February 1903. Children:

Dorothea Marshall, born 21 September 1907.

Henry Hilgard, 18 January 1911.

Now President New York Evening Post.

“My work is still the same, except that the pressure of business grows heavier year by year. The fascination of newspaper work never grows less but if anything greater, particularly because of the close contact with things and men political. My chief trouble is to find time for all the things I am interested in. As chairman of the executive committee of the National Association for the advancement of Colored People I am still trying to help the negro upward. To my book, ‘John Brown, a Biography, Fifty Years After’, published since the last class report, I owe an appointment to the Harvard Visiting Committee on History. A new book on a phase of the Civil War is now in the planning stage, but the lack of time makes its completion problematical. As a side issue I have been managing a large iron mine on the Hudson near West Point for the last eighteen months and have greatly enjoyed the executive work connected therewith. The birth of a son, Hilgard, has, of course, brought the greatest happiness and I am wondering whether after all he will not go to Harvard. After seeing the costly club-houses at Williams some of my ardor for that college has been lost. The great democratic movement, so strikingly illustrated in the political world at every hand, has yet to affect our colleges. Finally, I am happy to recall that I had something to do with bringing our classmate Roy Martin to New York as Assistant General Manager of the Associated Press, a happening that means a lot for the newspapers of the country. The latch-string is out for classmates at the office of the Evening Post, or, in the winter, at 179 East 71st Street, New York.”

BERNARD WILLIAM VOGEL

Born at New York City, 30 December 1870, of William Vogel (merchant) and Hannah Schenck.

Fitted at Dr. J. Sach's.

Class Status: Freshman year only.

Now a clothier at New York City.

“Am just at the present time retiring from business as I have been steadily at it since leaving Harvard. Still unmarried and no prospect of ‘doing the right thing’ and settling down. My future plans are not yet decided upon. Expect to go on a long trip, and see the world outside of New York.”

GEORGE WALCOTT

Born at Cambridge, 26 January 1871, of Henry Pickering Walcott (physician) and Charlotte Elizabeth Richards.

Fitted at Brown and Nichols's.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Lilla Evelyn Nickerson at Brooklyn, 5 December 1894.

Children:

Henry Richards, born 6 May 1896.

Roger Conant, 6 October 1900.

Charlotte Elizabeth, 3 July 1904.

Now in dry goods commission at New York.

“ Left the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company last fall and now acting as receiver for the dry-goods commission firm of G. A. Stafford Company, 59 Worth St., New York City. Still living at Nutley, N. J.”

ALFRED WALLERSTEIN

Born at Philadelphia, 23 August 1870, of Edward Wallerstein (manufacturer) and Caroline Simon.

Fitted with F. Babbitt.

Class Status: A.B. 1893 from '94.

Married Wilhelmina Rachiel Jastrow at Philadelphia, 25 November 1895. Child:

Bertha, born 25 May 1899.

Now manufacturing shirts at New York City.

“ Nothing of general interest to write you. Just trying my best to keep out of mischief.”

HENRY WARE

Born at Brookline, 26 December 1871, of Charles Pickard Ware (teacher) and Elizabeth Lawrence Appleton.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Louisa Fuller Wilson at Brookline, 9 June 1898. Children:

Caroline Farrar, born 14 August 1899.

Henry, 8 June 1905.

Now practising law at Boston, and Special Justice of the Municipal Court of Brookline.

“ Ever since I left the Law School my practice has been devoted largely to examining the legality of municipal bonds; and while there is a certain amount of routine in this work and a lack of that immense variety of experience that goes with a general practice, there is the compensating satisfaction of being able to become more or less familiar with the various sides of a particular subject. As a side issue, I devoted a good part of 1911 towards advancing the cause of medical science, by having a complication after an appendix operation (a sort of appendix to appendicitis) which made me, for a while, an object of some local medical interest. Hereafter I shall be quite content to stick to the legal and not meddle with the medical profession."

EDGAR HAGA WARNER

Born at Tuscarawas, Ohio, 22 September 1868, of Jonas Warner (farmer) and Catharine Lister.

Entered from Baldwin University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Mary Louisa Sperry at Axtel, Ohio, 1 May 1895. Children: Edgar Gordon, born 20 February 1907.
Lilan Ruth, 6 July 1911.

Now in Methodist Episcopal ministry, at Cleveland, Ohio.

"1908-1909, Pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Massillon, O. 1909—, Pastor Brooklyn Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, Cleveland, O."

OSCAR LEON WATKINS

Born at Fultonham, Ohio, 27 September 1861, of John Watkins (physician) and Sarah Jane Southard.

Entered from Denison University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Rosa Mills, at Chillicothe, Ohio, 26 April 1896. Children: Osric Mills, born 6 February 1897.
Maida, 27 May 1900.

Dorothy Wordsworth, 26 February 1904.

Now State agent at Indianapolis for Ginn & Co., publishers.

will find him good Harvard material. I am still indulging my hobby of Wordsworth. I have been lecturing much on this and other subjects and have in many ways tried to keep up the old student habits of earlier days. As a result of all this, perhaps I have served myself better than I have others. I have done nothing that the busy world will note, but I hope that my friends and associates will testify that my Harvard training has not been in vain for them."

FRANK MILTON WATTERS

Born at Fall River, 12 November 1870, of Joseph Watters (manufacturer) and Mary Whitehead.

Fitted at Phillips Exeter.

Class Status: Special, 1889-91.

Married Elizabeth Anne Hunt at Montclair, New Jersey, 27 June 1904.

Now manufacturing fire-extinguishers, fire department supplies and general line of fire prevention and protection devices at Elmira, New York.

"Have been fairly successful in business, have had splendid health and a very happy and contented home life. Weigh about 200 pounds, but can still get over a tennis court pretty well, and play a fair game of golf."

LORENZO WEBBER

Born at Watkins, New York, 22 July 1869, of John Almer Webber (banker) and Mary Ellen Mason.

Fitted at Phillips Andover.

Class Status: Left Sophomore year.

Married Dora Alice Stone at Portland, Michigan, 27 September 1899.

Children:

Charlotte Elizabeth, born 31 January 1902.

John Almer, 7 November 1903.

Christine, 19 January 1906.

Constance, 22 October 1911.

Now in banking at Portland, Michigan.

"January 1, 1908, we reorganized the bank from a private to a state bank, calling it the Webber State Savings Bank. I keep fairly busy outside of business in the local affairs, but politics I have shunned. Last winter I had a very pleasant trip of two months through the West Indies, stopping at Bermuda, Barbados, and Panama. The year before I was in Washington and New York for pleasure a few weeks."

JOSEPH ROWE WEBSTER

Born at Lynn, 30 August 1871, of Joseph Rowe Webster (physician) and Priscilla Hayden Hollis.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Ethel Kate Brittain at Montreal, 15 April 1903. Children:

John Rowe, born 25 December 1904.

Anne Rowe, 10 September 1906 (died 25 December 1906).

Brittain, 25 November 1907.

Isabel Brittain, 30 March 1909.

Penelope Rowe, 22 December 1911.

Now tutoring at Cambridge.

“I was born at Lynn, Mass., on August 30, 1871. A few weeks after my birth I was assisted to escape from Lynn, and have seldom been there since. Somewhat later in life I attended the Roxbury Latin School for six years. I went to Harvard, entering and graduating with the Class of '93. I mention this fact because it does not yet seem to be known to various members of the class. Since graduation my work for the most part has been that of a tutor in Cambridge, Mass.; but I am negotiating to secure through Wilson, for whom I voted, a berth as sole interlocking director in the New Pan-American Inter-State, Federal, and Alaska, Restoration and Conservation Combination Trust Companies. I have one wife and four children. I feel healthy and cheerful and ready for the fight. It has taken me forty years to learn how to feel that way, and I find the sensation distinctly worth while. I have as yet done nothing to interest anybody, but I hope that the evidence is not yet all in. It gives me great pleasure to shake hands with any '93 man who cares to look me in the eye and smile.”

KENNETH GRANT TREMAYNE WEBSTER

Born at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, 10 June 1871, of John Lindsay Ross Webster (physician) and Helen Ogilvie Geddes.

Entered from Dalhousie College.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Edith Forbes at Naushon, Massachusetts, 15 August 1903.

Children:

Edith Emerson, born 24 November 1909.

Frederic Augustus, 3 April 1912.

Now Instructor in English at Harvard.

“Nothing exciting since the last report except the birth of a son and the building of a new house in the cemetery district of Cambridge. Have also saved, and rebuilt in Milton, an old house—the Capen house from Dorchester—originally built about 1635. I am doing about the same work at Harvard (and Radcliffe), except that I now have a sort of charge of the Harvard Summer School.”

EDWARD MOTLEY WELD

Born at Dedham, 4 September 1872, of Stephen Minot Weld (merchant) and Eloise Rodman.

Fitted with E. D. Marsh.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Sarah Lothrop King at Boston, 22 April 1897. Children:

Lothrop Motley, born 16 February 1898.

Edward Motley, Jr., 24 May 1906.

Anne King, 4 April 1910.

Now in cotton business at New York City.

“On the 6th of July, 1893, I entered my father’s firm, Stephen M. Weld and Company, cotton merchants of Boston and New York, as office boy, and was able to exercise enough pull to be taken into partnership on the 1st of September, 1895. I lived in Boston until 1900, when my business compelled me to be in New York so much that I finally moved there permanently in 1903. I have remained in my father’s business ever since I left college, and have so far escaped both election to the Ananias Club and indictments under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. An operation on my left hand in 1902 forced me to give up polo, but I still maintain my interest in shooting and coon hunting, in which diversions I seize every possible opportunity to enjoy myself.”

LEONARD ABEL WHEELER

Born at Troy, Ohio, 23 October 1868, of Thomas Bemis Wheeler (miller) and Mary Richmond Smith.

Fitted at Troy High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90.

Married Charlotte Agatha Thompson at Saginaw, Michigan, 1 November 1898. Children:

Thomas Bemis, 2d, born 21 June 1904.

Margarite Thompson, 31 May 1906.

Mary Richmond, 21 February 1908.

Charlotte Thompson, 4 September 1911.

Now leaf tobacco merchant, Troy, Ohio.

“Very busy trying to make a living for a wife and four small youngsters. Still in the same address at the same old job.”

GEORGE ALBERT WHIPPLE

Born at Worcester, 15 October 1871, of William Henry Whipple (merchant) and Jemima Aurilla Hill.

Fitted at Somerville High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Edna Bigelow Foote at Somerville, Mass., 29 June 1911.

Now teaching at Evanston, Illinois.

“I am still greatly enjoying my work in the Evanston High School which prepares many students for college, occasionally sending one to Harvard. My recent summers have been spent on the shores of Sebago Lake, Maine, where I have been connected with the management of a boys’ camp. The year 1911 was full of occurrences for me. Three times I was summoned East. First by the passing away of my mother, then in April by the death of my father, and again in October by the sudden death of a sister. While at home in the spring I was surprised to have to undergo an operation for Pancreatitis. My convalescence was rapid owing to the benefit I had received from golf and other out-door exercise and regular attendance at a gymnasium class. On June 29 of that year I was married to Edna Bigelow Foote, Wellesley 1900, of Evanston, Ill. On account of my recent illness the wedding took place at my old home at Winter Hill, Somerville, the same city in which my wife’s parents had been married thirty-seven years before.”

HERBERT HILL WHITE

Born at Rye, New York, 29 June 1869, of Henry White and Henrietta Lavinia Hill.

Fitted at Montclair High.

Class Status: Special, 1889-90. Joined Class Junior year. Left Senior year.

Married Clarissa Watts Lewis at Brookline, 3 October 1895.

Now General Manager of University Press at Cambridge.

“Continue to take an active interest in football and athletics generally and being located in Cambridge brings me in frequent touch with all the men interested in athletics.”

EDWARD DWIGHT WHITFORD

Born at Waltham, 27 September 1868, of George Henry Whitford and Martha Ann Stickney.

Fitted at Bridgewater Normal School.

Class Status: Special Scientific, 1889-91. A.B. 1892.

Married Edith May Loring at Newton, 19 June 1900. Child:

Ethel, born 3 July 1906.

Now in packing business at Boston.

“There has been no change in my affairs since the last report.”

JAMES RAYNOR WHITING

Born at New York City, 17 October 1872, of James Raynor Whiting (lawyer and manufacturer) and Gertrude Ingersoll Allen.

Entered from Williams College.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Mildred Eveleigh Taylor at Poughkeepsie, 7 May 1904.

Children:

James Raynor, Jr., born 21 April 1905.

Franck Taylor, 9 October 1907.

Now practising medicine at New York City.

Stops right there.

JOSEPH WIGGIN

Born at Exeter, New Hampshire, 7 March 1871, of Joseph Fernald Wiggin (lawyer) and Ruth Hurd Hollis.

Fitted at Malden High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Grace Parker Corbett at Malden, 2 January 1901. Children:

Dorothy, born 3 July 1902.

Katharine, 17 June 1904.

Barbara, 4 July 1905.

Ruth, 9 September 1906.

Grace, 25 October 1908.

Now practising law at Boston.

“Can report nothing brilliant or unusual. Have continued to practise law for a living and have enjoyed my work thoroughly. My spare energy has been put into various ‘local’ activities. Am at present vice-president and director of the local national bank, one of the investment board of the savings bank, a trustee of the public library. Am now serving my fifth year as a member of the school board and my fourth as treasurer and trustee of a small school in New Hampshire. All these are indications of a busy but not very exciting life which I hope is to some extent useful. Have a little time to attend '93 gatherings (if you miss a single one you can attend you make a mistake), and to respond whenever Dodge calls—"Fathers of four or more daughters this way'."

JAMES AUSTIN WILDER

Born at Puunui, Hawaiian Islands, 27 May 1868, of Samuel Gardner Wilder (shipping) and Elizabeth Kinau Judd.

Fitted at Belmont School, California.

Class Status: A.B. 1894 as of 1893.

Married Sarah Harnden at Alameda, California, 12 September 1899.

Children:

James Harnden, born 5 December 1900.

Kinau, 28 November 1902.

Now practising art at Honolulu.

Aloha ninety-three! Will break my usual reticence and say that the last five years have been all I could ask of fate. Have visited Europe once and once ran over to Cambridge for a spree—last year. Foregathered with ninety-three men on these occasions with great profit to my spiritual uplift. But most of my days have been in Hawaii, painting portraits of men for barter. Market still holds. Just painted by second president of the University Club. Present incumbent nibbling the bait. Never exhibit and never advertise—a foolish method financially, but avoids lots of chagrin. Four or five suckers a year, regular. More I cannot oblige. Am now a member of the Royal Geographical Society, Royal Society of Arts and Ends of the Earth Club, so am 'getting on' away from home. Here I am President of the Harvard Club and the Boy Scout Commissioner for Hawaii. This last means hard work—the others are 'index.' From 21 scouts a year ago we are now a good hundred with troops forming on other islands. Two of our boys have saved life and are slated for the National Medals. We hope to have our thousand—not so far off either. Am planning to come over in June with the Milwaukee and Chicago contingent and then I am off to England to attend the World Rally under Baden-Powell. My son enters Pomfret next year and enters Harvard in the class of 1923—thirty years after!

HENRY FRANCIS WILLARD

Born at Boston, 6 January 1870, of Francis Alexander Willard (physician) and Martha Dickinson Bush.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Married Georgia Washington Johnson at Stoughton, Wisconsin, 16 October 1900. Children:

Henry Matthew, born 30 August 1901.

Walter Bond, 2 February 1903.

Helen Delano, 1 November 1905.

Elleda, 1 December 1907.

Now Vice-President of the Bureau of University Travel, Boston, Mass.

“Student in Harvard Medical School 1892-1895. M.D. University of Pennsylvania 1897. Travelled and studied abroad 1897-1904, with residence chiefly in Berlin. Since 1899 I have devoted myself to the teaching of art history abroad and in this country as vice-president of the Bureau of University Travel of Boston, Mass.”

CHARLES EDWIN WILLIAMS

Born at Mechanicsburg, Ohio, 11 June 1867, of Charles William Williams (merchant) and Rebecca Ann Guy.

Entered from Ohio Wesleyan University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Now in real estate at New York City.

“Very little for me to tell. I’ve followed real estate business for fifteen years right here in New York; occasionally gone away from home to visit Cambridge and other less interesting parts. Am not married and have no prospects. Anything else? Yes, I’m coming to the Twentieth Celebration.”

GEORGE PERRY WILSON

Born at Pittsburgh, 8 June 1870, of John Aaron Wilson (lawyer) and Belle Jane Wilson.

Fitted at Central High, Pittsburgh.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now practising law at Pittsburgh.

“Nothing has happened since the last report. The days come and go; they differ only on the calendar.”

GEORGE PARKER WINSHIP

Born at Bridgewater, 29 July 1871, of Albert Edward Winship (editor) and Ella Rebecca Parker.

Fitted at Somerville High.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Claire Bliven at Westerly, Rhode Island, 23 June 1912.

Now librarian John Carter Brown Library at Providence, Rhode Island.

"Last June I took myself out of the (more or less) 'eligible' class by getting married—to the astonishment of all the girl's friends (and most of mine). Went to Panama for a honeymoon—in July—and nearly froze, in Costa Rica. It is still too early for further details, as to 'how it is turning out.' That was pretty nearly the final step in a campaign which began when I received a letter addressed to me as 'Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, etc., etc.' I have done my turn of duty in most everything I have belonged to, and am getting to be about as proficient in resigning as I used to be as a 'joiner.' I have just been elected Secretary of the Walpole Society of which my friend Richard Carfield is the most widely known, and the best member. Also a member of the 'A. E.' Club, the oldest of Providence 'bohemian' organizations still doing business. I am accepting both! Sic Semper. My job of running a library continues to take more time than it ought, but as I am two years ahead of the programme I laid out eight years ago, I might feel worse than I do about it. In 1904, the 'J. C. B. L.' was a gentleman's private library, with a reputation in certain very limited circles. It has had to become an 'Institution,' attached to Brown University, and as such to justify itself for tax-exemption on $500,000 endowment and a collection of books that would sell, at current prices, for somewhere near two millions. I think we are doing this, without (or maybe because we are not) losing altogether the charm of a private collection. I'd like to explain the details to any '93 man who visits Providence (if he wants to borrow money he'll have to know the Secretary's name—for I've had that gag tried, it didn't work, on me—and show an engraved card!). The only member of the class I know of, who understood what I am driving at was Hyatt, whose death came just after I discovered that he had become a thorough book-collector. There are probably others who are hiding the same weakness; if so, I'd like to swap yarns with them."

CHARLES GIBSON WINSLOW

Born at Boston, 4 February 1871, of George Scott Winslow (merchant) and Sarah Train.

Fitted at Repton School, Derbyshire, England.

Class Status: Special, 1899-91. Law School, 1891-95.

Now in real estate at Boston.

"Can report little in recent years. I remain fairly busy but have travelled a bit in Egypt and Europe. I am still single but happy, even if pretty gray."

FREDERICK WINSOR

Born at Winchester, Massachusetts, 29 March 1872, of Frederick Winsor (physician) and Anne Bent Ware.

Fitted at Roxbury Latin.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Mary Anna Lee Paine at Weston, Massachusetts, 18 June 1894. Children:

Charles Paine, born 19 June 1895.

Dorothy, 27 August 1896.

Frederick, Jr., 15 October 1900.

John Bryant, 28 April 1903.

Theresa, 7 June 1904.

Now Headmaster Middlesex School at Concord, Massachusetts.

"My report is bound to make dull reading. School teaching, in all its visible aspects, is as far from exciting as can be imagined, and goes on from year to year without a single noteworthy incident which can be of general interest, unless one manages to break down and get sent away to Europe, as I did in February, 1909. At that time I went to Paris with all my family, and lived there until September, 1910, when I returned to my proper job. Like Taylor, I am looking forward with some misgivings towards next fall, when I shall discover what it feels like to be the father of a Harvard undergraduate. My son Charlie will be a member of the class of '17."

SAMUEL LEE WOLFF

Born at Baltimore, 15 January 1874, of Leopold Wolff (merchant) and Amelia Meyer.

Fitted with Dr. J. Sachs.

Class Status: A.B. 1892.

Now instructor in English, extension teaching, Columbia University.

"Since 1908 I have been abroad twice: in 1910 to Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France, and England; in 1912 to Italy (including Sicily). Greece and the nearer Orient (Aegean Islands, and coast of Asia Minor, to Constantinople). I have received the Ph.D. from Columbia University, where for two years I have been giving courses in English to Extension students. I have published 'The Greek Romances in Elizabethan Prose Fiction' (Columbia University Press, 1912); 'A Source of Euphues' (Modern Philology VII, pp. 577-585); 'Robert Greene and the Italian Renaissance' (Englische Studien XXXVII, pp. 321-374); and numerous reviews in The Nation."

ARTHUR MAYER WOLFSON

Born at Chicago, 10 April 1873, of Rudolph Wolfson (merchant) and Nancy Mayer.

Fitted at Kansas City High.

Class Status: A.B. 1893 from '94.

Married Mildred Hartmann at Chicago, 17 July 1910. Child:

Jean Elizabeth, born 16 Nov. 1911.

Now teaching at New York City.

"As far as my work in the world is concerned, it has changed not at all in the last five years. I am still in charge of the history department of the DeWitt Clinton High School here in New York. For the past two or three years I have been an assistant editor of the History Teachers' Magazine. I am lecturing in American history for the Board of Education and I have a little book on Civics in the press. The benedicts in the class may be interested to know that I have finally joined their ranks. I was married June 17, 1910, to Miss Mildred Hartmann of Chicago. In November, 1911, a little girl was born to us. Life is treating me well, and I am altogether content with my job."

ERNEST HENRY WOOD

Born at Uxbridge, Massachusetts, 29 January 1870, of Cyrus Grout Wood (manufacturer) and Mary Farnum Southwick.

Fitted with G. E. Gardner.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Married Adelaide Richards Wyman at Worcester, 9 November 1898.

Children:

Cyrus Wyman, born 31 January 1900.

Austen, 25 May 1903.

Daniel, 20 September, 1904.

Louisa, 27 October 1905.

Now Treasurer Worcester Storage Co.

Nothing doing on the "story."

ARTHUR RUFUS TREGO WYLIE

Born at Condit, Ohio, 5 November 1871, of Robert Wylie (clergyman) and Sarah Adelia Jadden.

Entered from Wooster University.

Class Status: Entered Senior.

Married Eugenia Heaton Radcliffe at St. Paul, 8 June 1899.

Now superintendent North Dakota Institution for the Feeble Minded.

“Continued the practice of medicine at Faribault, Minn., until December 1, 1910. Then came to Grafton, N. D., to become superintendent of the State Institution for Feeble Minded, which position I still hold. Have had the usual amount of work and ‘grief’ during the past five years, but on the whole consider that my life has been ‘cast in pleasant places.’ Have no special ambition except to be considered competent by my age and generation. In the summer my chief amusement is exploring the plains of the Red River Valley by auto. In the winter we hibernate as much as possible, as we usually get temperature as low as 30 or 40 below.”

CHARLES LOWELL YOUNG

Born at Somerville, 12 July 1865, of Benjamin Franklin Young (merchant) and Justina Louise Lowell.

Fitted at Somerville High and Tufts College.

Class Status: Regular A.B.

Now Associate Professor of English Literature at Wellesley.

Blank to end with.

WILLIAM NORMAN COTTRELL

Born at Mason City, Illinois, 26 November 1870, of Norman Cottrell (real estate) and Mary Jane Gamble.

Entered from Illinois Wesleyan University.

Class Status: Entered Junior.

Married Mrs. Oscar Turner (Mary Jane Caldwell) at Chatham, Illinois, 17 August 1909. Child:

Julia, born 9 February 1911.

Now practising law at Chicago.

“I studied three years in the Harvard Law School graduating with the Class of 1896, and from September the same year practised law in Chicago, with the exception of a year and a half, 1899 to 1900, in Mason City, Illinois, until I became Judge of the Municipal Court of Chicago in December, 1906, and continued to serve as a judge of that Court until last December when, on account of the election of the Democratic ticket in November, I gave up my judicial ermine to my successor who had the good fortune to be a candidate of the Democratic party. August 17, 1909, I married Mrs. Oscar Turner (Mary Jane Caldwell) at Chatham, Illinois, and since then have lived at 4929 Lake Avenue, Chicago. The most important event in my family was the arrival February 9, 1911, of Baby Julia, who is now plump, well and happy. February 3 of this year, I was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital for gall stone operation. After a critical illness, I was able to be taken home the first part of March. Subsequently I went to Hot Springs, Arkansas, where I remained a few weeks partially regaining my strength. Am now in Chicago planning to go to the country for the summer where I shall employ my time trying to get perfectly well, farming and playing golf. The first of September, after six years service as Judge of the Municipal Court of Chicago, I shall resume the practice of law in Chicago."
